ld be greatly honored if you could be the principal speaker at our closing Plenary Session, scheduled for Saturday, October 5, 1991.

The NFCA is an association of 100 fraternal benefit societies composed of more than 10 million members from throughout the United States. The annual meeting brings together representatives of each of the societies to work on and develop plans for the common good. Societies are religious and ethnic based with most of the ethnic based society members having their roots in Eastern Europe.

Many societies, such as the Polish National Alliance, the National Slovak Society of the U.S.A. and others have renewed contact with their homeland in the past year. All the while, the members of the these societies together with the members of religious based societies such as the Knights of Columbus, Lutheran Brotherhood and Aid Association for Lutherans continue to perform their volunteer services in the United States.

For example, in 1990, the last year for which statistics are available, members of fraternal benefit societies performed 81 million plus hours of volunteer service in the United States. A substantial amount of this volunteer service was directed to assisting the handicapped, whether they be mentally or physically disabled, to develop additional self-confidence. In addition, in the same year, over $137 million was

Dear Ms. Hopkins:

Enclosed is the letter of invitation for the Senator from the President of the National Fraternal Congress of America, W. Patrick Donlin, who also serves as the Supreme Advocate of the Knights of Columbus. In his letter, Mr. Donlin invites the Senator to offer the major address of the convention. This association represents more than 10 million Americans currently active in voluntary, fraternal, and, often, ethnic activities.

I would only add that while I was a Special Assistant to President Reagan, I oversaw the preparations for his address to their last convention in Washington, and I can assure you of an audience most receptive to the Senator. If I can answer any questions or provide any additional information, please do not hesitate to contact me.

With kindest regards,
