CHAPLAIN OF THE U.S. SENATE

November 12, 1991

This banquet room may lack something of the intimacy of a family dinner table, but nonetheless let's think of ourselves tonight as gathering for a reunion of many families, as joining to celebrate the institution of the family, and convening to honor three particular families.

All families have special joys and needs, because every human person is unique. But tonight we honor families with a special blend of joys and needs — those arising from a disability that God in His mysterious providence has bestowed on a member of that family.

Tonight's honorees vividly demonstrate what can be achieved through the values of faith and family. Let us honor those values tonight, and go forth tomorrow with renewed determination to preserve and extend them for the generations to come.

Sincerely,

Gary L. Bauer
President

MARIAN PFISTER ANSCHUTZ

Marian Pfister Anschutz was born in Great Bend, Kansas in 1910. The daughter of Charles and Susan Pfister, she was raised in a family of five sisters and one brother. Her family was very influential in the formation of her family values which she, in turn, passed on to her two children and six grandchildren.

After graduating from Ft. Hays (Kansas) State University, she taught eight grades in a rural one-room schoolhouse during the early 1930s. Following her marriage to Mr. Fred Anschutz in 1932, she left the teaching profession to devote all her energies to her family. Throughout the remainder of her life, Mrs. Anschutz devoted herself to raising her children in an atmosphere of love and security. She was an enduring example of a Christian wife, mother, and grandmother.

Her family and Christian faith gave her the strength and courage to face the serious illness which finally claimed her life in 1986. Her great and lifelong commitment to strong family values was an inspiration to all who knew her.

As a living memorial to Marian Pfister Anschutz, the Anschutz Family Foundation of Denver, Colorado joined the Family Research Council in establishing the Marian Pfister Anschutz Award. The award is presented annually to selected individuals who have made exceptional contributions to the health and well-being of the American family.

CHRIS BURKE

Chris Burke is known to millions of Americans for his starring role as Corky Thatcher on the popular ABC television series "Life Goes On." The 26-year-old actor, who was born with Down syndrome (a genetic disorder that affects physical and mental development), plays the part of a 19-year-old whose extraordinary ability to overcome the handicaps of Down syndrome inspires his working-class family.

His real-life mother, Marian, says that "Life Goes On" could have been modeled after the Burke family. "Despite Chris' differences, we were determined to provide him with the same encouragement and support we had given our other children," she said. After Chris' graduation from the Kennedy Child Study Center in New York, his parents wanted to send him to an excellent special school in Massachusetts, but the annual tuition was more than their modest budget could afford. Aware of the situation, Chris' siblings—Ellen, Anne and J.R.—agreed to give up the money they had earned as child models to help further Chris' education. Chris later graduated from the Cardinal Cushing training school in Hanover, Massachusetts.

Since "Life Goes On" first aired in 1989, Chris has become a national hero to disabled Americans. He was named the spokesperson for the National Down Syndrome Congress and Ronald McDonald Charities. He has received numerous awards from various organizations as well as a Golden Globe nomination for Best Supporting Actor in a Drama Series.

JUDY SQUIER

"Your daughter is going to live, I am sorry to say." Those were the words of the obstetrician to Judy's parents at the time she was born. Yet, Judy says she has lived an extraordinary life. Born with no legs and with a deformed hand, Judy Squier has done just about everything that any whole-bodied person might be expected to do—and more. Judy's parents approached her handicap with hope and hard work. As a result of their vision and commitment, Judy's list of accomplishments includes such normal childhood activities as riding a bike, climbing trees, ice skating, horseback riding, and swimming. Judy also learned to drive a car. Judy received her undergraduate and graduate degrees from the University of Illinois, where she was a college wheelchair cheerleader and a member of a national sorority.

After marrying her husband, David, Judy moved to California, where she enjoyed life as a wife and career woman, working for 10 years as a speech pathologist with the Crippled Children's Society in San Jose. Ten years into their marriage, Judy and David decided they wanted to have children. They now have three daughters: Emily, 12; Betsy, 9; and Naphtalie, 7. An ardent community spokesperson for people with disabilities, Judy serves on the board of directors for Green Pastures, a home for severely disabled children. She is also co-president of the Portola Valley School District's Parent-Teacher Association.

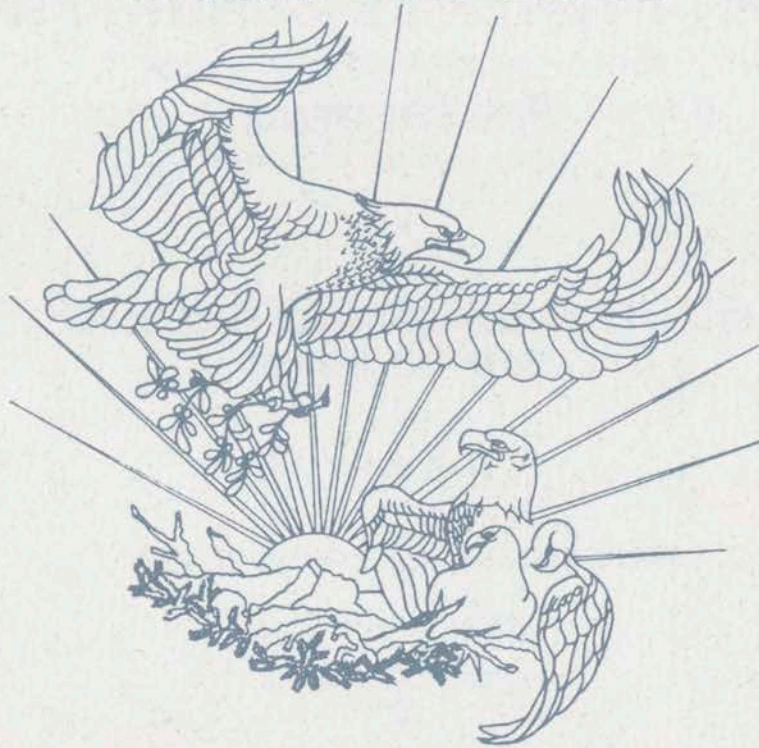

PETER UHLENBERG

Peter Uhlenberg is a professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina whose work concerning the aging and the family is nationally recognized. However, one only needs to see the individually framed pictures of thirteen children on his desk in his office to know there is much more to Peter. He and his wife, Pam, have anything but the typical American family. Theirs spans several different races, mental and physical capabilities and cultural backgrounds. After the birth of their two sons, Peter and Pam decided not to have any more children but knew they could provide a good family for others. The first to join the family were Alison and Hollianne. During Peter's year-long Fulbright Lectureship in Korea, the Uhlenbergs added two more to the clan—Korean-born Heidi and Joshua. Upon returning to North Carolina, they adopted Benjamin, Aaron, Nathaniel, Joanna, Arwen, Annette and Isaac.

Adding to the already monumental task of raising a large family, Peter and Pam willingly accepted the special challenge of working with the physical and mental handicaps several of their later children possess—health problems such as cerebral palsy, prematurity and fetal alcohol syndrome.

FAMILY STRENGTH

The Marian Pfister Anschutz Award original sculpture, entitled "Family Strength", was produced by Texas artist Miley Busiek.

Mrs. Busiek's work has been exhibited in President Reagan's office and is represented in permanent collections of the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History. A bas-relief of "Family Strength" graces the reverse-side of the American Gold Bullion Coin minted by the U.S. Treasury. Her work is also displayed at the University of Texas and in corporate, institutional, and private collections throughout the United States and Europe.

The original model of "Family Strength" was created in wax which was then cast into bronze. Mrs. Busiek describes the sculpture as follows:

"The Adult family of the American Bald Eagles depicts strong leadership, compassion and unity of purpose.

The newly-hatched eaglets are positioned with one slightly separated from the mother and the other nestled in her wing; the first represents youth, depicting those who are equipped and eagerly anticipating the challenges of the future. The second stands for those among us who need special care and nurturing. In this way, every American possesses personal worth and dignity.

The olive branch offered into the nest symbolizes our responsibility to pass on our heritage of peace, democracy and freedom."

Adversity can come from many sources, and I have personally seen the remarkable courage it takes to be an overcomer. I am continually moved by the depth of God's work and the power of His Spirit in the lives of courageous people.

FAMILY RESEARCH COUNCIL

The Family Research Council (FRC), a division of Focus on the Family, is an independent, non-profit, non-partisan organization in Washington. The president of the Family Research Council is Gary Bauer, former Director of the Office of Policy Development for President Reagan and former Under Secretary of Education. Mr. Bauer is also a Senior Vice President of Focus on the Family.

FRC works to assure that the interests and values of the family are considered and respected in the formation of public policy. The Council works to create in the Congress, and the Executive and Judicial branches, a deeper understanding of, and sensitivity to, the concerns and rights of the family.

The Council also helps average citizens understand federal issues that impact the family and activates citizens to influence the legislative process. The Family Research Council also focuses its efforts on research, media relations, and consensus building. The Council produces the annual Marian Pfister Anschutz Award as a celebration and a promotion of strong family values.
