Talking Points
The Honorable Bob Dole, U.S.S.
Fundraiser for Frank Lucas
Republican Nominee for the U.S. House of Representatives
Representing the Sixth District of Oklahoma
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma
Saturday, April 23, 1994

THEMES:

Frank Lucas is "one of us"

- Deep roots in OK, agriculture and public service
- Farms and ranches the same land his great great grandfather bought in 1900
- Raises his 3 children in Roger Mills County -- not on Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C.
- Dan Webber is "Washington Politician" who only moved back to run for Congress

Dan Webber Can't Be Trusted To Fight for Us

- He danced around the "Taxpayer Protection Pledge" -- wouldn't sign it until Clinton Key held a news conference
- He waffled on the Oklahoma Taxpayers Union Pledge against higher taxes for health care -- wouldn't sign it until the OTU announced it bought $6,000 in radio to publicize his refusal
- And he still hasn't signed the Pledge to oppose the VAT Tax -- says he opposes Danforth-Boren, but it didn't keep him from drawing a salary from its biggest promoter
- No wonder Republican Chair Clinton Key calls him "Dandy Dan Dancer the Wafflin' Webber"

Frank Lucas is a decisive voice who'll fight for Oklahoma

- Doesn't hesitate when he stands up for lower taxes, less government intrusion in farms and small businesses, and a brighter economic future
- Frank Lucas has been assured a seat on House Agriculture Committee
- During appearance by Ranking Republican Pat Roberts this week
- It's time farmers and ranchers send one of their own to Washington
- To Dan Webber, agriculture is a political issue; to Frank Lucas, farming and ranching is his livelihood -- and it's the livelihood of his friends and neighbors

ISSUES:

Taxes:

- Lucas eagerly signed the ATR's Taxpayer Protection and Anti-VAT Pledges and Oklahoma Taxpayers' Union Pledge against higher taxes for health care
- Webber refused to sign the ATR Taxpayer Protection Pledge until after he was called on it by OK State GOP Chair Clinton Key
- Webber refused to sign the Oklahoma Taxpayers' Union Pledge against health taxes until the OTU announced it had bought $6,000 radio to publicize his refusal
- Webber still hasn't signed anti-VAT Pledge, though he says he opposes it (also says he opposes Boren-Danforth)
- Because of this, OK State Chair Clinton Key calls him "Dandy Dan Dancer, the Waffin' Webber"

Economic Growth, Jobs:

- OK statewide unemployment rate is 7.5 % — up .3% in Feb., 1% higher than national average of 6.5%
- Lucas 11-Point Plan for Oklahoma Jobs, including
 - $500 Per Child Income Tax Cut
 - Repeal Social Security Earnings Limit
 - Permanent R&D Tax Credit
 - Index Capital Gains & Depreciation schedules
 - Balanced Budget/Tax Limitation Constitutional Amendment

Line Item Veto

Cap growth of budget at rate of inflation

Agriculture:

Pat Roberts has assured Lucas a seat on the House Agriculture Committee

This upcoming week Lucas will announce Agriculture Plan:

Compensation of landowners for Washington's regulatory "takings" such as the Endangered Species, Clean Water and Wetlands Acts

End unfunded federal mandates

- Compel bureaucracy to employ risk assessments and cost-benefit analysis

- Oppose CO. HA -- OSHA Expansion Bill -- Ford and 123 Democrat cosponsors
- COSHA would extend OSHA's power into Family Farms, forcing every farm to develop federally-mandated Safety Standards, even those with fewer than 10 employees

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS:

Charlie Stenholm Campaign Swing Thursday, 4/21:

- Stenholm voted for the BTU Tax.
- The Affordable Energy Alliance said BTU Tax would have cost Oklahoma businesses alone $144.6 million in higher energy taxes.
- The American Petroleum Institute said the average four-person Oklahoma family would have paid $578 in higher energy taxes had BTU Tax succeeded.
- Stenholm voted to exempt himself and other Congressmen from the mandated family medical leave legislation he imposed on private sector employers (Roll Call No. 21, February 3, 1993);
- Stenholm voted to require taxpayers to foot the bill for politicians' campaigns for Congress, at a cost of $1 billion over the next 8 years (Roll Call No. 79, April 9, 1992);
- Stenholm opposed a measure that would have required the President to Certify that the national interest is at stake before committing U.S. troops under the command of a foreign national on behalf of the United Nations (Roll Call #473, September 2, 1993)
- I'll pay Charlie Stenholm's motel bill if he'll keep coming back to campaign for Dan Webber all over again!

Dayton Tire Company Closing (FYI):

- On Monday, Labor Sec. Reich personally flew to Oklahoma City to hand-deliver a list of "violations" to justify a Federal Judge to sign a TRO locking out Dayton Tire Company plant. Several workers have been killed and maimed.
- Factory was shut down on the spot -- 1,100 workers, some of the best paid in the State ($16-$25/hour, some workers report making as much as $80,000)
- Very next day, Judge reopened the Plant
- The Daily Oklahoman wrote a strongly worded editorial criticizing Reich's visit. However, Sen. Nickels and Rep. Istook have not been visible on the it.

RANK LUCAS BACKGROUND:

- Fifth Generation Oklahoman - Farmer, Rancher and State Representative
- Raises cattle and hard red winter wheat in Roger Mills County
- Farms and ranches the same land his great-great grandfather bought in 1900

- Married (Lynda) - Three Children
- First Baptist Church of Cheyenne

- Oklahoma House of Representatives since 1988 - Reelected '90 and '92
 - District is 68% to 32% Democrat
 - Chairman, House Republican Caucus
 - Agriculture Committee
 - County and Municipal Government Committee
 - Tax and Revenue Committee
 - Banking Committee

- Oklahoma State University

- Memberships
 - Oklahoma Farm Bureau
 - Oklahoma Cattlemen's Association, Oklahoma Shorthorn Association
 - OSU Alumni Association, Kiwanis

DAN WEBBER BACKGROUND:

- Just turned 28
- First and only job : Aide to David Boren
- 1990 - Agriculture Assistant - worked on Farm Bill
- Press Secretary until moving back to Oklahoma in time to file candidacy
- Owns home on Capitol Hill in Washington
- Rents home in Oklahoma
- Graduated from Georgetown Law School

Webber Employs Aid of Texas Conservative for Farm Meetings<
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) Democrat Dan Webber and Republican Frank Lucas talked agriculture and crime as they entered the third-to-last weekend of the 6th District congressional race.

A conservative U.S. House Democrat came to Oklahoma to help Webber on Friday, while Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole stops in Oklahoma City today to support Lucas.

Webber flew to Enid and Elk City on Friday with U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, a Texan and senior member of the House Agriculture Committee.

Webber said he and Stenholm drew about 20 people in Enid at an open meeting on the farm bill, trade issues and other concerns.

Lucas, a state representative and Cheyenne rancher, frequently has contrasted his rural background with Webber's years in Washington as an aide to Sen. David Boren, D-Okla.

But Webber, an Okarche native, said he thoroughly understands the lead role agriculture takes in the economy of most 6th District counties.

``In fact, that's one of two or three things I outlined as a

From today's Newswire —

At the state Capitol, Lucas held a news conference to propose additions to the federal crime bill that the House passed this week.

He backed building of regional prisons and mandating that states toughen their sentencing laws to get their criminals in the prisons.

``Three strikes and you're out'' for convictions on violent crimes is too generous by ``at least one strike,'' Lucas said. ``There's no reason to give a two-time rapist or mugger a third chance.''

Lucas proposed tightening the federal appeals process and enacting an enforceable death penalty; making courts consider police's ``good faith'' in evidence gathering; and restoring planned cuts to the Justice Department.

He called the current crime bill a good first step but still reflective of ``the liberal, pro-criminal, anti-victim attitude of the House majority.''

The 6th District election is May 10.

Lucas predicts 6th District win

By VIOLET FREEZE
News and Eagle Staff

Rep. Frank Lucas, Republican nominee for 6th District Congressman, believes conservative farmers and businessmen will help him pull out a victory May 10 at the polls.

"It may not be a pretty win, but it will be a win," Lucas told the Enid News and Eagle editorial board Thursday.

The Republican is running against Democratic nominee Dan Webber for the seat vacated by Glenn English early this year.

Rep. Frank Lucas

Counts on conservatives the protection of constituents concerning health care, agriculture and gun control, he said.

Regarding Vance Air Force Base, Lucas plans to fight for the local facility, as well as a moratorium on further defense cuts until situations overseas solidify.

The representative said he has been receiving some comments from Enid citizenry that English did not "key in" on Vance as much as he did agriculture in the district. After hearing about the history of English's part in a letter-writing campaign to save Vance, Lucas said he was not being critical of the former Congressman, but that he did plan to be a "constant bloodhound" concerning the base closure list.

Keeping facilities such as Vance and Tinker are vital to the nation's defense as long as American involvement in the skirmishes overseas continue, he said.

He added that he has a "hard time with the country being involved (in Bosnia) in the first place," calling the internal conflict an "800-year tribal war."

"In places like Bosnia, where we are not wanted by the locals — I don't know how we can do anything productive here," Lucas said.

And, despite a probable lack of ability to dispatch any nuclear weaponry, thus minimizing any domestic American concern, Lucas said the U.S. soldiers on the front line were in danger. The most effective way to deal with North Korea is through the Communist Chinese, he said.

Improved relations with that country, which is also a major consumer of American wheat, would help the agriculture industry as well, he added. Lucas questioned President Clinton's handling of Chinese relations.

"I can't question the president on his day-to-day activities ... but he scares me to death," Lucas said.

On domestic issues, Lucas

Lucas

said health care cannot fall into the hands of the government, and while federal leaders can provide reinforcement in the war against crime, it can only truly be fought by the state legislature.

Lucas said he will stand behind a national law for quicker enforcement of capital punishment and a change in welfare codes to provide a better system of crime prevention.

The Republican's views on other issues included:

- His background as a "Western Oldie" is more favorable than Webber's recent Washington stint, creating an comparison of "carpetbagger versus one of us."

- Belief that his voting record stands on its own and that Democratic party supporters have taken some of his state votes out of context. Also, while he has missed some votes throughout the campaign, he always makes sure "they are covered."

- Voter turnout at the polls should be better in areas where he is supported than those strict Democratic regions, even with the additional question of the state lottery lacked on by Gov. David Walters, a Democrat.

- Despite a larger Democratic voter percentage, there are enough "swing votes" in the 6th District to allow him to carry the election.

- U.S. Sen. David Boren's adamant support of Webber has caused some "adverse backlash" on his opponent's campaign.

- Fairness in taxing older Americans who continue to work after the age of 65.

- Maintenance of the USPCI Lone Mountain facility to protect jobs while recognizing stringent waste disposal rules to protect the environment.

If elected, Lucas said he will maintain his home in Cheyenne under the intention of traveling home every weekend to be with his family and conduct meetings with his constituents.

While he said he could not legally promise that he will establish an office in Enid, he added that he could not see how the second largest metropolitan area in the district could be without one.

Resource-wise, Lucas said, he believes it will be a struggle, but that if he comes close to Democratic figures he will win the race.

During the early stages of the 6th District campaign, Lucas said "nobody, but nobody, gave me a snowball's chance in a very bad place of winning."

"The momentum is on my side," he said. "We're going to win."

April 21, 1994

TO: Senator Dole
FROM: Mike Torrey
SUBJECT: Oklahoma visit

BACKGROUND...The wheat, grain and stocker cattle enterprise accounts for 75 percent of the agriculture revenues generated in Oklahoma and most of these operations are found in the 6th Congressional district. Most of the production is in two counties--Caddo and Texas county. Caddo County in southcentral OK., has the 2nd highest peanut quota in the nation. Texas county ranks in the top ten counties nationwide for total agriculture revenues.

PRIVATE PROPERTY RIGHTS...have been well received by Oklahoma. They are especially concerned about the impact of Private Property Rights on the Endangered Species Act (which shouldn't come up this year) and wetlands. You have introduced the Private Property Rights Act of 1994, S. 2006. This bill requires the agencies conduct a Takings Impact Assessment when promulgating regulations. Your approach has been to force a vote on this issue in 1994 and this bill will provide a "foot in the door" on the issue. Senator Nickles is a co-sponsor of S. 2006 and also has his own Private Property bill.

SAFE WATER AND CLEAN WATER...require new mandatory point and non point source programs which will greatly affect grain and livestock producers. The Safe Drinking Water Act will most likely come up in the Senate next week. The most controversial provision deals with source point pollution whereas municipalities can regulate upstream farmers. You are preparing to offer a Private Property Rights amendment to that portion of the bill. The Clean Water Act may not come up this year since there is so much opposition.

CONSERVATION COMPLIANCE...plans are fully enforceable by the end of 1994. Consequently, SCS and the local conservation districts are stepping up spot checks of producer conservation plans. Problems have been rare in Oklahoma.

CANADIAN WHEAT...is a concern, but most Oklahoma wheat growers are not complaining about the imports.

PEANUTS...Under the Uruguay Round Agreement, the U.S. will reduce imports of peanut butter while providing increased access for edible peanut imports. Section 22 import quotas for peanuts will be replaced by high ad valorem tariffs, which will be reduced by the minimum of 15% in equal annual installments over 6 years beginning in 1995. U.S. producers will likely gain, according to the ag department, because the net effect is expected to be lower peanut-equivalent imports compared to baseline projections of imports without the Uruguay Round.

EPA ENFORCEMENT OF CONFINED ANIMAL FEEDING OPERATION (CAFO) PERMITS...are being enforced by EPA Region 6 (Dallas). Oklahoma CAFO's were supposed to have their pollution prevention plans in place by February, but most requested more time. EPA recently granted an extension until June, but they communicated this extension in a very harshly-worded, legally-frightening administrative order sent to each CAFO. Needless to say, CAFO managers were angry about this heavy-handed tactic.

CORPORATE HOG FARMS...The Pig Improvement Company has recently constructed facilities in the 6th district and their large scale confinement operation have created a great deal of controversy. Frank Lucas has generally been opposed to corporate hog farms. Kansas recently passed a Corporate Hog Bill which allows counties to have Corporate hog farming. This will be a big boost for Southwest KS.

April 22, 1994

TO: SENATOR DOLE
FROM: JIM WHITTINGHILL
SUBJECT: OIL AND GAS

Nothing new here. West Texas Intermediate closed Thursday at $17.15 per barrel, up 35 cents over Wednesday, but down from the $19.75 price of one year ago. The twelve month high was $20.60, and the low was $13.90.

A steady price somewhere between $20 and $22 is needed for economic viability of most stripper oil. Natural gas prices have remained stronger than oil and fuel switching do to the environment will leave natural gas stronger in the future.

Integrated oil companies are making money on refining and chemical operations (except those with problems unique to their facilities such as accidents, weather, etc.).

WHAT EVER HAPPENED TO NATIONAL ENERGY SECURITY?

Following the two great oil shortage crises in the 1970's, a popular topic of conversation -- and government policy -- was ensuring our national energy security. For, the United States was an energy driven economy. In fact, in the 1979 crisis, at a time when we were only 35% XX?? dependent on foreign sources for our daily consumption, the loss of Iranian oil, which accounted for only 5% of that total, threw this Nation into an oil shock. Long lines and short tempers were the result.

More recently, in 1991 XX?? we put the lives of ??,000 American servicemen and women in harm's way in large part to protect our oil supplies in the Persian Gulf.

Since first being sworn into the House of Representatives in 1961, I have proudly represented an area with oil and gas production. It should come as no surprise to anyone, therefore, when they learn I have spent considerable time in attempting to increase the production of energy within the United States. Through every fad idea of the day, I have sought and supported national energy security every step the way.

Kansas is also well known as being in the heart of the bread basket, an area if the Midwest of splendid agricultural productivity. It should be of no further surprise, then, that I have also been a strong proponent of agricultural initiatives.

Today we remain every bit as much of an energy dependent economy today as ever. In fact, in 1993 we relied on imports for almost 50% of our imports as opposed to 35% in 1979.

In the face of these facts, or more accurately completely ignoring these facts, current environmental policy being supported by a seemingly odd coalition of the giant oil companies and the professional environmentalists calls for increasing our reliance on imports by another almost 15%.

Although I have been considered to be a supporter the oil industry through all my years in Congress, I do not support this policy.

On the other hand, in an effort to keep a campaign promise, the Clinton Administration has joined with farmers and an industry which turns corn into an alcohol fuel to reduce the amount of the additional 15% reliance. My treasured State of Kansas both produces corn and is home of four of these businesses which turn corn into this alcohol called ethanol. Given my long time support of American agriculture, one might expect me to support this approach as an alternative. Yet, I cannot.

In part, the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 seek to reduce smog which plagues many of our cities in the summer months. One way to combat smog is to reduce its precursors, part of which come from the fuel which propels our automobiles. By removing certain components of gasoline and replacing them with so-called oxygenated fuels, or alcohol, all scientists are in agreement that certain clean air benefits result.

However, scientists hold widely divergent views on just which benefits and by how much the air is cleaned. This is a most important fact to remember -- judgements of the clean air benefits of different oxygenates can be quantified only by scientific theory, not scientific fact. And, scientists of equal credibility believe in different theories. There is no "right" scientific way of thinking at this point.

For years, the Environmental Protection Agency held that smog was reduced by the addition of 10% ethanol to gasoline, a product most know as gasohol. Recently, a competing fuel, which is made from hydrocarbons which are recovered in the production of oil and natural gas, has become the darling of the oil industry and professional environmentalists. Methanol, when combined with butane forms a fuel additive called methyl tertiary butyl ether, or MTBE. MTBE and ethanol are direct competitors.

There are important differences in these two products other than there environmental characteristics, and we must pay attention to these differences if we are to have a policy which fits with other important policies. First, ethanol is renewable, it's made from corn; methanol and MTBE are not, they come from oil and gas wells. We are already importing oil to run our automobiles, and we will certainly need to import MTBE if we choose that option. Finally, ethanol is the alcohol which occurs in the beer, wine and spirits, while methanol is a highly toxic substance which can cause death if ingested in small quantities.

So we return to our decision. On the one hand, we have the oil companies and environmentalists insisting all of the new alcohol additives must come from MTBE, most of which will be imported and will make us even more dependent on insecure foreign sources for our transportation fuels. On the other hand, we have the Clinton Administration, farmers and the ethanol industry saying we must impose a huge new federal bureaucracy and mandate that 30% of the new market goes to ethanol.

I don't like either choice, and neither should you. On April 19, the government announced that our trade deficit had risen to a six year high. Many don't stop to look at the what goes into this trade deficit of ours. But, it's

JUVENILE JUSTICE

Senate Crime Bill

The Senate crime bill contains the following provisions:

- treat as adults those juveniles aged 13 or older who use a gun in the commission of a federal crime (Moseley-Braun amendment).
- establish a federal anti-gang statute making it a criminal offense to participate in a criminal street gang or induce others to join the gang (Dole amendment)
- establish mandatory minimum penalties for gang activity (for example: mandatory minimum of 5 years for inducing someone to join a gang; mandatory minimum increases to 10 years if the subject of the inducement is under 18 years of age) (Dole amendment)
- $100 million for additional federal prosecutors to prosecute gang activities (Dole amendment)
- $100 million for gang prevention grants (mentoring, role model, after-school athletic programs, etc.) (Dole amendment)
- $300 million to purchase metal detectors and surveillance cameras (manager's amendment)

Welfare Reform

- * One of the biggest factors contributing to violent crime is the continued rise in the illegitimacy rates. Nearly 68% of all black children are born to unwed mothers. In the most violent-ridden areas of the inner city, the illegitimacy rates approach a staggering 80%. The illegitimacy rate among whites is also alarmingly high--22%. Comprehensive welfare reform is integral to reducing violent crime.

Values

- * Strong families, and the values that families transmit to their children, are the most effective deterrent to crime. Government can't be the nation's nanny, but it should promote pro-family policies.

SENATOR BOB DOLE

VIOLENCE IN PUBLIC HOUSING

APRIL 21, 1994

MR. PRESIDENT, I SEND AN AMENDMENT TO THE DESK AND ASK FOR ITS IMMEDIATE CONSIDERATION.

MR. PRESIDENT, IN AN ARTICLE LAST YEAR, COLUMNIST GEORGE WILL ASKED AN IMPORTANT QUESTION--ONE DIRECTED SPECIFICALLY AT REPUBLICANS. HE ASKED, AND I QUOTE: "WHAT DOES CONSERVATISM HAVE TO SAY TO MY FRIEND KAREN McCUNE?"

NOW, WHO IS KAREN McCUNE, YOU MAY ASK? MR. WILL EXPLAINS THAT "SHE'S NINE YEARS OLD, 47 POUNDS, AND FULL OF LIFE AND BRAVERY. SHE NEEDS BRAVERY BECAUSE SHE LIVES IN THE CABRINI-GREEN HOUSING PROJECT IN CHICAGO. SHE GOES TO THE JENNER SCHOOL, NAMED AFTER THE MAN WHO INVENTED THE SMALLPOX VACCINE. THREE GRADE-SCHOOLERS, IN THE SPAN OF ONE YEAR, WERE KILLED ACCIDENTALLY, GETTING FROM CABRINI-GREEN ACROSS THE FREE-FIRE ZONE THAT IS CHICAGO IN THOSE AREAS, INTO THE JENNER SCHOOL. KAREN SLEEPS...IN A BED NEAR A WINDOW EXCEPT WHEN THE GUNFIRE GETS TOO FIERCE, AND THEN SHE AND HER SIBLINGS GO INTO THE HALL AND HIDE."

MR. PRESIDENT, KAREN McCUNE IS NOT A CITIZEN OF BOSNIA, OR RWANDA, OR THE GAZA STRIP. SHE IS A CHILD OF AMERICA, AND HER LIFE OF TERROR IS ONE LIVED BY THOUSANDS LIKE HER IN PUBLIC HOUSING PROJECTS THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES.

THE CRIMINALS WHO TERRORIZE PUBLIC HOUSING AREN'T THE VICTIMS OF SOCIETY, AS THE ROOT-CAUSE LIBERALS WOULD HAVE US

BELIEVE. THE REAL VICTIMS ARE THE LAW-ABIDING TENANTS--CHILDREN LIKE KAREN McCUNE--WHOSE LIVES ARE SPENT DODGING BULLETS, AVOIDING THE DRUG-DEALERS, JUST HOPING TO GET THROUGH ANOTHER DAY WITHOUT INCIDENT...ALIVE.

IN AN EFFORT TO COMBAT GANG AND DRUG-RELATED VIOLENCE, THE CHICAGO HOUSING AUTHORITY RECENTLY ESTABLISHED A POLICY OF CONDUCTING WARRANTLESS APARTMENT-TO-APARTMENT SEARCHES OF C.H.A. PROJECTS. NOT SURPRISINGLY, A MAJORITY OF THE LAW-ABIDING TENANTS IN C.H.A. BUILDINGS SUPPORTED THIS POLICY.

EARLIER THIS MONTH, THE FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT IN CHICAGO GOT INVOLVED, RULING THAT THE C.H.A. SEARCH POLICY VIOLATED THE FOURTH AMENDMENT'S BAN ON UNREASONABLE SEARCHES AND SEIZURES. THE COURT THEN ENJOINED C.H.A. OFFICIALS FROM UNDERTAKING ANY ADDITIONAL SEARCHES.

TO HIS CREDIT, PRESIDENT CLINTON QUICKLY RESPONDED TO THE COURT DECISION, DIRECTING ATTORNEY GENERAL RENO AND SECRETARY OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT HENRY CISNEROS TO DEVELOP MEASURES THAT WOULD BE BOTH CONSTITUTIONALLY VALID AND EFFECTIVE IN REDUCING VIOLENT CRIME IN PUBLIC HOUSING. THESE MEASURES WERE UNVEILED LAST SATURDAY, DURING THE PRESIDENT'S WEEKLY RADIO ADDRESS.

UNDER THE PRESIDENT'S NEW POLICY, PUBLIC HOUSING OFFICIALS ARE ENCOURAGED TO IMPLEMENT THE FOLLOWING ANTICRIME MEASURES:

ONE. ERECTING FENCES AROUND PUBLIC HOUSING BUILDINGS, ISSUING IDENTIFICATION CARDS TO TENANTS, AND INSTALLING METAL

DETECTORS AT BUILDING ENTRANCES;

TWO. SEARCHING THE PACKAGES AND CLOTHING OF ANYONE SEEKING TO ENTER PUBLIC HOUSING BUILDINGS AND REFUSING ENTRY TO ANYONE WHO DOES NOT SUBMIT TO INSPECTION;

THREE. CONDUCTING WEAPONS SEARCHES WITHOUT CONSENT OR A WARRANT IN COMMON AREAS, SUCH AS STAIRWELLS, AND IN VACANT APARTMENTS;

FOUR. FRISKING "SUSPICIOUS-LOOKING" INDIVIDUALS FOR WEAPONS, IF POLICE OR SECURITY PERSONNEL HAVE A REASON TO BELIEVE THAT THE INDIVIDUALS ARE INVOLVED IN CRIMINAL ACTIVITY AND ARE ARMED;

FIVE. INCLUDING CONSENT CLAUSES IN LEASE AGREEMENTS PERMITTING ROUTINE, WARRANTLESS APARTMENT-BY-APARTMENT POLICE SEARCHES FOR ILLEGAL WEAPONS OR ILLEGAL DRUGS;

AND SIX. CONDUCTING WARRANTLESS SEARCHES OF INDIVIDUAL UNITS WHERE THERE IS A JUSTIFICATION FOR A SEARCH BUT INSUFFICIENT TIME TO OBTAIN A JUDICIAL WARRANT.

MR. PRESIDENT, THIS AMENDMENT IS NOTHING MORE THAN AN ENDORSEMENT OF THE ADMINISTRATION'S NEW POLICY, AS OUTLINED IN A RECENT LETTER TO PRESIDENT CLINTON FROM ATTORNEY GENERAL RENO AND SECRETARY CISNEROS. THIS AMENDMENT DOESN'T BREAK NEW GROUND, NOR DOES IT PROPOSE ANYTHING THAT PRESIDENT CLINTON HAS NOT ALREADY ENDORSED. IT SIMPLY RECITES SOME OF THE KEY ELEMENTS OF THE NEW ADMINISTRATION POLICY, AND PUTS THE SENATE FOUR-SQUARE BEHIND THEM.

OF COURSE, THE NEW ADMINISTRATION POLICY IS A SMALL

STEP...AND WE SHOULDN'T EXPECT IT TO PUT AN END TO THE VIOLENCE AT CABRINI-GREEN, OR AT THE ROBERT TAYLOR HOMES, OR AT THE OTHER BULLET-RIDDEN PUBLIC HOUSING PROJECTS THAT LINE THE URBAN LANDSCAPE. BUT I'M PREPARED TO HOPE THAT THE POLICY, IF ACTED UPON, CAN--AND WILL--MAKE A DIFFERENCE.

OF COURSE, THERE ARE THOSE WHO ARGUE THAT THE ADMINISTRATION POLICY GOES TOO FAR, THAT IT MAY EVEN VIOLATE THE FOURTH AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

I HAPPEN TO DISAGREE...AND ATTORNEY GENERAL RENO, THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT, AND THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES HAPPEN TO DISAGREE, AS WELL.

I UNDERSTAND THAT MY DISTINGUISHED COLLEAGUE FROM MINNESOTA, SENATOR WELLSTONE, INTENDS TO OFFER A SECOND-DEGREE AMENDMENT THAT WOULD NOT ONLY WATER-DOWN MY AMENDMENT BUT WOULD ALSO REPRESENT A RETREAT FROM THE ADMINISTRATION'S OWN POLICY.

SENATOR WELLSTONE'S AMENDMENT, AS I UNDERSTAND IT, WOULD EXPLICITLY PROVIDE THAT RESIDENCY OR CONTINUED RESIDENCY IN PUBLIC HOUSING COULD NOT BE MADE CONTINGENT ON THE INCLUSION OF A CONSENT CLAUSE IN A LEASE AGREEMENT.

THE RENO-CISNEROS LETTER TO PRESIDENT CLINTON, ON THE OTHER HAND, DOES NOT MAKE EXCEPTIONS. IT DOES NOT PROHIBIT PUBLIC HOUSING OFFICIALS--OR THE TENANTS THEMSELVES--FROM MAKING RESIDENCY CONTINGENT ON THE INCLUSION OF A CONSENT CLAUSE IN A LEASE AGREEMENT.

IT SIMPLY SAYS, AND I QUOTE: "A SEARCH IS LAWFUL IF IT IS CONDUCTED PURSUANT TO UNCOERCED CONSENT. LEASES IN PUBLIC HOUSING PROJECTS, AS ELSEWHERE, TYPICALLY INCLUDE A STANDARD CONSENT CLAUSE PERMITTING THE HOUSING AUTHORITY TO CONDUCT ROUTINE MAINTENANCE INSPECTIONS AND TO ENTER THE TENANT'S APARTMENT IN CASE OF EMERGENCY. WHERE CRIME CONDITIONS IN THE HOUSING DEVELOPMENT MAKE UNIT-BY-UNIT INSPECTIONS ESSENTIAL, SIMILAR LEASE CONSENT CLAUSES COULD BE EMPLOYED TO AUTHORIZE PERIODIC ADMINISTRATION INSPECTIONS OF TENANTS' UNITS FOR UNLICENSED OR UNAUTHORIZED FIREARMS."

THE RENO-CISNEROS LETTER GOES ON TO SAY, AND I QUOTE: "TENANT ASSOCIATIONS SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED TO ENDORSE THE ...INCLUSION OF CONSENT CLAUSES IN LEASE AGREEMENTS. A RESOLUTION BY A TENANT ASSOCIATION WOULD DEMONSTRATE WIDESPREAD SUPPORT FOR SUCH MEASURES, WHICH IS AN IMPORTANT FACTOR IN DETERMINING WHETHER TO INCLUDE SUCH A CLAUSE IN THE LEASE. IN ADDITION, A SHOWING OF WIDESPREAD TENANT SUPPORT WOULD BE HELPFUL IN RESPONDING TO CHALLENGES BY PARTICULAR TENANTS TO THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF...CONSENT CLAUSES" UNQUOTE.

SO, MR. PRESIDENT, THE ADMINISTRATION'S POLICY IS CLEAR. AND A VOTE FOR THE WELLSTONE SECOND-DEGREE AMENDMENT IS A VOTE AGAINST THIS POLICY.

FINALLY, MR. PRESIDENT, I WANT TO GO BACK TO GEORGE WILL'S ORIGINAL QUESTION AND DIRECT IT NOT TO CONSERVATIVES, BUT TO THOSE AT THE A.C.L.U. AND THE NEW YORK TIMES, WHO OPPOSE SOME OF THE ADMINISTRATION POLICY'S KEY ELEMENTS, INCLUDING THE PROPOSAL TO ALLOW PUBLIC-HOUSING TENANTS TO CONSENT TO POLICE SEARCHES THROUGH THEIR LEASE AGREEMENTS.

TO THESE DYED-IN-THE-WOOL LIBERALS, I SIMPLY ASK THIS:
"WHAT DOES LIBERALISM HAVE TO SAY TO KAREN McCUNE?" DOES IT SAY,
"WE WILL GIVE YOU MORE RIGHTS? MORE LAWS? MORE DUE PROCESS?"

I SUSPECT THAT, WHEN ALL IS SAID AND DONE, THE KAREN
McCUNES OF OUR COUNTRY WOULD CHOOSE SOMETHING QUITE DIFFERENT,
BUT MUCH-NEEDED, IN THEIR YOUNG LIVES: MORE SAFETY. MORE SECURITY. MORE HOPE.

MR. PRESIDENT, I ASK UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT THE LETTER
TO PRESIDENT CLINTON FROM ATTORNEY GENERAL RENO AND SECRETARY
CISNEROS BE INSERTED IN THE RECORD IMMEDIATELY AFTER MY REMARKS.
I ALSO ASK UNANIMOUS CONSENT THAT THE TEXT OF MY AMENDMENT BE REPRINTED IN THE RECORD AS WELL.

Joyce - another important issue in Oklahoma...

Apparently, Sec. of Labor, Robert Reich, delivered citations to the Dayton Tire plant in Oklahoma City on Monday. The citations were for $7.5 million in OSHA violations. He then went to court to seek an emergency injunction forcing the plant to comply immediately with federal safety rules. The action basically shut down the plant which employs 1,100 hourly union workers and 350-400 salaried workers. But on Tuesday, a federal judge ordered the plant reopened over the objections of Labor. This issue has been a front pager and could harm the Democrat -- Webber -- running against Lucas.

Court Order Shuts Down Dayton Tire

U.S. Fines Plant $7.5 Million

The U.S. Labor Department obtained a federal court order Monday night that abruptly shut down Oklahoma City's tire plant after slapping the plant with a nearly $7.5 million fine for alleged safety violations.

About 350 workers at Dayton Tire Co. plant in far west Oklahoma City were sent home late Monday. The shutdown affects 1,100 hourly workers at the plant.

Workers were advised they will be notified by phone or certified mail about when or if they will be able to return to their jobs. Union officials said the idled employees will continue to receive 80 percent of their wages from an account funded by weekly paycheck deductions.

Plant general counsel Dan Adomitis said plant officials were surprised to learn U.S. District Judge Tim Leonard had granted the temporary restraining order.

In requesting the order, the government alleged that workers at the Dayton Tire plant were in imminent danger of injury or death.

"They went in without any notice and without any opportunity for Dayton Tire to be heard at all and they asked the judge to sign the order," Adomitis said.

Earlier Monday, an angry Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich traveled to Oklahoma City to hand-deliver the alleged safety-violation citations to managers of the Japanese-owned plant.

Reich told spectators, "American workers are not going to be sacrificed on the altar of profits."

The labor secretary then sent his lawyers to the federal courthouse to seek an emergency order forcing the plant to immediately comply with federal safety rules or risk being in contempt of court.

Leonard granted the order late Monday. A preliminary injunction hearing is scheduled Thursday, Leonard said.

The court order was delivered to plant officials about 5 p.m. and workers were sent home by 6 p.m., Adomitis said.

The company was ordered to stop all operations involving the "adjusting, cleaning or maintaining of machinery," Adornitis said. "That means shutting down the plant."

The seed for Reich's visit was planted in the crushing death last fall of Bob L. Julian, 58, in the Dayton Tire Co. plant, and the alleged repeated refusal by plant managers to implement proper safety measures.

Those alleged refusals led to Julian's death and have resulted in a continuing series of "maimings and injuries" at the plant, Reich charged.

"This company has been absolutely recalcitrant and we are at the end of the rope here," the labor secretary said.

Julian's face was crushed in a tire press at the plant Oct. 18. He died Oct. 30.

"It was a gruesome death," said Mary M. Meagher, deputy assistant secretary of labor.

Meagher said Reich was so angered upon receiving and studying the Dayton Tire Co. file at his Washington, D.C., office late Friday afternoon that he decided, on the spot, to personally serve the citations in Oklahoma City.

"When we have a company that has serious safety problems, when that company flouts the law, continues to refuse to change its ways and continues to expose its workers' life and limb to serious hazards, we will take all necessary action — we're going to throw the book at them," Reich told a news conference later Monday.

Jesse Isbell, an executive board member with United Rubber Workers Union Local 998, said plant employees supported the court-ordered shut-down.

"We're estatic," Isbell said. "People are out there finally showing an interest in addressing our concerns that we've been trying to point out for the past 14 years."

Trevor Hoskins, vice president of public relations for Bridgestone/Firestone Inc., said, "We've not yet had an opportunity to study the citation, but we are disappointed that the Department of Labor has taken this action."

"Our company has a comprehensive safety policy which is strictly enforced," Hoskins said.

After delivering the citations to the plant Monday morning, Reich held a news conference at a nearby hotel. Reich was accompanied by Julian's widow, Phyllis Julian; Thomas Williamson, the labor department's chief attorney; and Joe Dear, head of the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Kenneth L. Coss, international president of the United Rubber Workers Union, traveled from Akron, Ohio, to attend the event.

Dayton Tire Co., which makes Firestone tires, is owned by Bridgestone/Firestone of Japan. The Oklahoma City plant employs about 1,100 hourly union workers and 350 to 400 salaried employees.

At the news conference Reich said Bridgestone/Firestone was told of possible safety hazards at the Oklahoma City plant last summer and that no actions were taken to fix them.

Since January, Reich said workers' fingers have been crushed and lost, and a worker's wrist was broken.

Staff writer Ed Godfrey contributed to report.

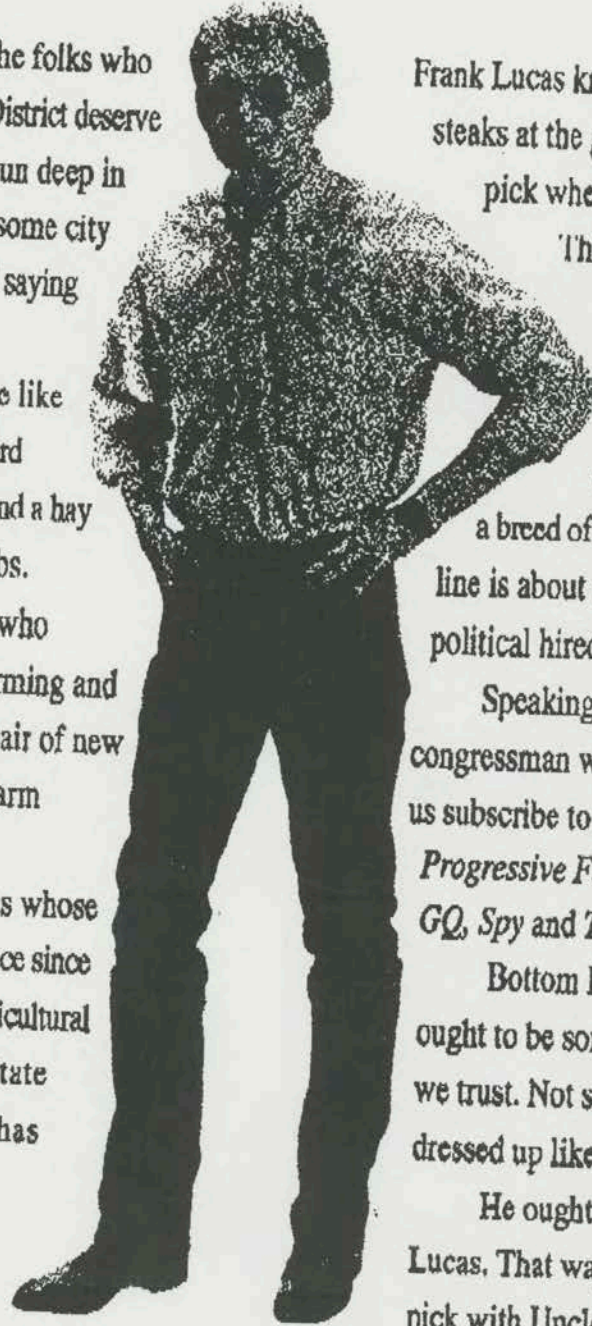

Frankly Speaking:

Frankly speaking, the folks who live in the 6th Congressional District deserve a congressman whose roots run deep in western Oklahoma soil. Not some city boy riding in a new pickup and saying he's one of us.

No, we deserve someone like Frank Lucas who's driving a Ford truck with 180,000 miles on it and a hay spike in the back. Not golf clubs.

We need a congressman who understands there's more to farming and ranching than buying a shiny pair of new boots and paying dues to the Farm Bureau and the Union.

Someone like Frank Lucas whose family has been working their place since 1902. Frank holds a degree in agricultural economics from Oklahoma State University. And although he has served about 60% of this congressional district as a state representative, he still works 80 acres every year and runs Shorthorns and commercial crosses on 1,000 acres of grass.

Frank Lucas knows that you don't make steaks at the grocery store. And you don't pick wheat, either.

Think about it. We deserve a congressman who knows how many acres there are in a section. That a section is a square mile. That a Limousin is a breed of cattle, not a fancy car. That a par line is about rural telephones, not a political hired gun's spin on the daily news

Speaking of the news. We need a congressman who understands that most of us subscribe to weekly newspapers. Progressive Farmer. Readers Digest. Not GQ, Spy and The New Yorker.

Bottom line, our next congressman ought to be someone we know. Someone we trust. Not some Johnny-come-lately dressed up like a drugstore cowboy.

He ought to be someone like Frank Lucas. That way, when we have a bone to pick with Uncle Sam, we'll know right where to go to find our congressman. The Lucas place. Route 2, Box 136-A. Cheyenne. And that's no bull.

Secrecy loses in the House

By James M. Inhofe

For the past 62 years in the U.S. House of Representatives, a handful of entrenched congressional leaders have had nearly complete, dictatorial control over which bills move to the House floor for debate and vote. These few members of the elite leadership dominated the agenda of the U.S. House and have had the power to ensure that legislation popular at home is never debated and voted upon. This system allowed any member of Congress to campaign as if in favor of popular legislation and then, once back in Washington, privately work for its defeat. Although popular legislation may be introduced, these insiders were able to bottle up bills in committee, making sure they never saw the light of day. They could quite simply have their cake and eat it, too.

House rules require that a discharge petition be filed to move a "bottled-up" bill through committee and onto the House floor for a vote. To be successful, it must be signed by a majority (218) of house members. On the surface this seems to serve as an adequate check and balance. But the catch is that, until Tuesday, signatures on a discharge petition were kept secret and could not be disclosed to the public. Claiming they knew better, the insiders didn't work to reflect the wishes of the people who elected them. Rather, they moved their own agenda to the front of the line.

I introduced H. Res. 134 to do away with the veil of secrecy that allowed these insiders to get away with what amounts to legislative murder. H. Res. 134 is direct and straightforward in its language. Its purpose is to end the "Gag Rule" and make the signatures on a discharge petition a matter of public record.

We had the support of over 227 courageous members of Congress, both Republican and Democrat, who signed on to the discharge petition necessary to move H. Res. 134 to the House floor. Thanks to the continued commitment of these members, the strength of grass roots organizations such as Ross Perot's United We Stand America and Citizens' for a Sound Economy, and such national voices as Rush Limbaugh and the editorial page of the Wall Street Journal, we were able to maintain our momentum and be successful when H. Res. 134 came to a vote by the full House Tuesday.

The congressional leadership fought our reform at every turn by twisting the arms of pliable members to side with the leadership and remove their support. The cover story they offered the defectors was that once made public, lobbyists and special interest groups would have a list from which to work. Nothing could be further from the truth. By making the signatures public, all will be on even ground — yes, for a change, even the people. Fortunately, this attempt to maintain their cloak of secrecy failed. The demand for openness from the American people proved to be too big a foe.

But the fight has just begun. The leadership is not going to give up its control so easily. They are already regrouping and formulating their plan in an attempt to maintain their power. They intend their plan to look like an alternative reform. But be on the alert: Any change they propose will have as its goal reinstating their ability to move the American people's agenda to the rear of the line and their own singular interests and careers to the front.

Our reform does not change the fundamental process of the committee system. It quite simply demands that rather than hide these signatures from the American people, the system be open and a matter of public record.

Due to the overwhelming support that resulted in passage of H. Res. 134 by a vote of 384-40, we have opened the doors of Congress to let in some much needed sunshine. This is a start. We now have a real chance to be successful in making additional reforms in Congress. The members who made up the sunshine coalition that worked so hard and tirelessly to pass H. Res. 134 are sticking together and setting their sights on ten of Congress' most needed reforms. We are calling these the "Ten Rays of Sunshine."

The elitists have heard the voice of the American people's demand for openness, and they're scared. They like their cozy deals. But right now if you stop and listen, what you will hear is the sound of the will of the American people moving to the front of the line.

James M. Inhofe, a Republican from Oklahoma, led the effort to end the secrecy of discharge petitions.

REVIEW & OUTLOOK

House Revolution

At noon EST today, viewers of C-Span may witness an extraordinary event. Two groups of House Members will form near the clerk's desk at the front of the chamber. One will be adding their names to a list that would end the gag rule on a procedure called the discharge petition. The other group, heavily pressured by House leaders to preserve Congress's code of secrecy, will be removing their names from the same list.

Over the Labor Day recess, angry voters prompted at least another 13 Members to agree to add their names to Oklahoma Rep. Jim Inhofe's list calling for an end to secrecy on discharge petitions. At recess, he already had 211 names, so this would put him well over the 218 majority he needs to force a vote on his proposal. But House leaders want to preserve the present rules, which allow them to bottle up popular legislation and then keep voters in the dark.

Jim Inhofe

So leaders are calling in heavy artillery to get Members to remove their names. At one point before the recess, Rep. Inhofe was one name short of a majority, but the leaders pressured six signers to recant. While yesterday afternoon Rep. Inhofe was building further momentum, the issue today could go either way.

If the Inhofe petition succeeds, we're talking here about a revolution in the House of Representatives.

Discharge petitions work as follows: Often a committee will simply sit on a bill it knows would pass if allowed to come to a vote on the floor. The only way to free hostage bills is to convince 218 Members to sign a petition to "discharge" the bill from committee and force a vote. But the names on any petition are kept secret, so

Members can posture in favor of a popular bill while quietly making certain it is never voted on. And as a discharge petition nears the magic number of 218, House leaders routinely twist the arms of pliable members and force them to remove their names. The result: Committee chairmen have a stranglehold on what legislation is voted on, and both ordinary members and their constituents are disenfranchised.

Risking possible discipline for breaking the traditions of the House, Rep. Inhofe gave us his list, and last month we published the names of non-signers. The effect was electric. We had promised the list but it took a few days to sort out; our phones lit up with calls about the delay. Members have been deluged with questions about why they were on the list. Rep. Martin Meehan, a Massachusetts Democrat, calls the interest in such inside Congressional baseball "extraordinary." He has decided to join Mr. Inhofe, rejecting the advice of Rep. Joe Moakley, the powerful Rules Committee chairman from his home state.

All the more amazing, all this took place beneath the attention of the Congressional press corps. The discharge petition movement has been covered by Roll Call, Congress's hometown paper, and one Associated Press story. The public was informed almost exclusively by us, radio talk shows such as Rush Limbaugh's, grass-roots activists linked to Ross Perot and computer bulletin boards.

Interestingly, Richard Cohen, a liberal Washington Post columnist, has just written a column saying that radio talk shows are "clearly filling a void" because their audiences believe their "values are not reflected elsewhere." Mr. Cohen says the fear of saying something that might be attacked as racist or sexist is so "acute" that the mainstream media has stopped covering some subjects, choosing "discretion over valor."

Rules Chairman Moakley is feeling the heat himself. A group of Ross Perot supporters are holding a 24-hour-a-day vigil outside his Boston office and will hold a mass rally there Saturday. His aides told Roll Call that "it's almost impossible to argue against" something that is seen as openness in government.

Mr. Moakley of course understands his own power will be vastly reduced if he has to operate in daylight, so he has to come up with some arguments. So he offers the ludicrous proposition that openness would help lobbyists, who in the real world love the dark. And he complains, "The pressure groups are out there at town meetings, loud and restless, and it's impossible to make them sit through an explanation." The "pressure groups" he criticizes are the voters, understandably impatient with his explanations.

So Chairman Moakley has come up with a clever diversionary tactic, urging members to "temporarily" withdraw their names from the petition, until his committee finishes hearings on the issue later this month. It just works out that under bizarre House Rules, the timing is such that if it waits for hearings the secrecy issue can't reach the House floor until October 11, and Congress is set to adjourn October 8. If any Members claim they're removing their names temporarily, it's the equivalent of "temporarily" killing someone.

Voters are understandably upset at an entrenched political class seeking its own interest instead of representing theirs. Opening up the discharge petition is a small step toward openness and accountability in government, but an important one. If at noon today Congress balks, it would not be a healthy development for either the Members or the body politic.

Republican Orza Quits Race for Governor

By John Greiner
Capitol Bureau

Vince Orza, whose meteoric rise in politics stalled in the 1990 Republican gubernatorial primary runoff, bailed out of this year's governor's race Tuesday.

He said business obligations were central to his decision, along with the importance of spending time with his family.

The 43-year-old Republican said there was nothing he wanted more for himself than to be governor, but that wasn't best for his family.

"I wanted to be governor, but I wanted to be Daddy even more, and I think that is more important," he said.

Orza and his wife, Patti, have two children, ages 9 and 11.

"I'd rather be a private citizen than a public official," he said. "I am going to build 10 restaurants this year and 15 the next year."

Orza's decision places Tulsa Republican candidate Frank Keating, who has raised nearly $400,000, in the lead position on the GOP side.

Other announced candidates vying for the GOP gubernatorial nomination are: state Sen. Jerry newsman and economics professor said he would refund remaining campaign contributions on a pro-rata basis.

Vince Orza

Pierce, R-Bartlesville; Tom Lay, Tulsa, a former computer company employee; and Jerry Kobyluk, a Choctaw farmer.

Orza burst onto the political scene in the 1990 governor's race. He finished first in a five-man GOP primary, with a substantial lead over the second-place finisher, former U.S. Attorney Bill Price.

In the GOP runoff, Price overcame Orza.

Word spread quickly Tuesday that he had been contacting supporters about dropping out.

"I think it's obviously a very sudden decision and I am shocked by it," said Clinton Key, the head of Oklahoma's Republican Party. "At the same time, I certainly understand about anyone deciding to put their family and their business ahead of running for office."

Orza said he had decided to continue to concentrate on his efforts as founder, chairman and president of Eateries Inc.

He said he planned to remain an active supporter of education and a positive voice for the state, but as a private citizen rather than public official.

Keating said, "I know it was a difficult decision for Vince to make. He obviously did what he felt best for his family and his business, as he should."

Pierce said he believes the move will help his campaign.

"Now there is only one moderate Republican in the race instead of two," Pierce said in an apparent reference to Keating. "I am clearly the leading conservative candidate, and I expect that many undecided voters will join my conservative campaign."

Lay said the fewer people there are in the race, the better his chances.

Kobyluk couldn't be reached for comment.

Lucas Captures GOP Runoff For 6th District

THE DAILY OKLAHOMAN

Wednesday, April 6, 1994

By Paul English
Capitol Bureau

Although outspent almost 2-to-1, Cheyenne rancher Frank Lucas outpolled Brooks Douglass on Tuesday for the Republican nomination for the U.S. House seat in Oklahoma's 6th Congressional District.

With vote counts from all 434 precincts reported in Tuesday's GOP primary runoff election, Lucas had 11,364 votes to 8,896 for Douglass.

Lucas, a state representative since 1986, will meet Democrat Dan Webber, 28, in the May 10 general election.

Lucas said he probably is considered the underdog in the general election "because of the resources available to the other side, but the momentum, I believe, is on our side."

He praised voters who "came through in the rural areas where my primary base of support had been. They brought me steaming on through."

"This is a classic example. If you put a good group of folks together to work in a campaign and if they work hard enough, you can overcome the numbers, you can overcome the money disadvantages ... and my good people did."

Douglass spent about $190,000, including $55,000 of his own money, while Lucas said he raised about $100,000.

Voters in the sprawling district braved bone-chilling winds to choose their nominee, an improvement over the snowstorm that struck on primary Election Day.

Douglass, a state senator, said he would support Lucas in the general election and "will be as active as he wants me to be."

"I'm going to work to see that the 6th District has the kind of conservative representation that it deserves," he said.

Lucas, 34, and Douglass, 30, agreed major factors in Lucas' win were a lower voter turnout than Douglass hoped for in Oklahoma County and Lucas' big victory in Garfield County.

Shelley Pruitt, Lucas' campaign manager, said that in the March 8 primary, Lucas lost by 600 votes in Garfield County. But in the runoff, Lucas received 1,977 votes to Douglass' 1,510.

Lucas said that in places like Garfield County and Kingfisher County, "we just simply got out and worked our tails off in the four weeks between the primary and the runoff. Garfield County has 20 percent of the registered Republican vote."

cans in the district.

"And that's what we have to do this next time is get out and work our tails off in this next five weeks," he said.

Asked whether he would have enough funds to be competitive in the general election, Lucas said, "I think because this is a race of national prominence with both the Democratic National Committee and the Republican State Committee charging into it, I think the resources will be available."

U.S. Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., visited the state last month to raise money for the Republican nominee.

Lucas said the general election will focus on the contrasts between the two candidates.

"Frank Lucas is a western Oklahoma farmer and rancher, a life-long resident and five-generation native of the area with a six-year proven conservative track record in the state Legislature," he said.

Lucas said Webber is "no doubt a fine fellow but who hasn't, except to file, really lived in the district since he became an adult ... who (returned) to western Oklahoma to run for this office so he could turn right around and go back to Washington."

"One of us vs. one of them who has moved in, so to speak."

Webber, a native of Okarche, is a graduate of Oklahoma State University and was an aide to U.S. Sen. David Boren for more than five years. He quit to run for the seat vacated in January by the resignation of veteran U.S. Rep. Glenn English, a Democrat.

Boren has actively helped Webber with his campaign.

Lucas said he expects to talk to U.S. Sen. Don Nickles, R-Ponca City, today about what role Nickles might play in the campaign.

Lucas Proposes 12-Point Program To Boost Economy

By Paul English
Capital Bureau

Saying that Oklahoma's unemployment rate in February was higher than the national average, Republican congressional candidate Frank Lucas on Tuesday proposed a 12-point program for economic growth and jobs.

The plan includes a $500-per-child income tax credit to encourage families, tax relief for small business and farmers, and lifting of government regulations.

Lucas also called for repeal of the Social Security earnings limitation for people 66 to 69 years old, and for allowing farmers and self-employed people to deduct 100 percent of their health insurance premium costs.

"Employment, especially for young people, is a critical issue," Lucas said. "Our rural communities are losing an entire generation of young people who are being forced to leave their families and hometowns in order to find economic opportunity."

Lucas said government environmental regulation "is an area that is of special interest to me, being a farmer, with all of the things that affect feedlots and the dairy industries out there."

Lucas, the GOP's 6th District nominee, said his plan could be financed by adopting a balanced budget amendment and giving the president the line item veto.

FROM: SUZANNE HELLMANN

RE: OKLAHOMA POLITICAL INFORMATION

ISSUES OF CONCERN

1. Oil and Gas -- energy
2. Agriculture - wheat farms (hard red winter wheat); cattle ranches; cotton; and peanuts (Caddo County ranks second in the nation in peanuts harvested)
3. Dayton Tire Plant -- Apparently, Sec. of Labor, Robert Reich, delivered citations to the Dayton Tire plant in Oklahoma City on Monday. The citations were for $7.5 million in OSHA violations. He then went to court to seek an emergency injunction forcing the plant to comply immediately with federal safety rules. The action basically shut down the plant which employs 1,100 hourly union workers and 350-400 salaried workers. But on Tuesday, a federal judge ordered the plant reopened over the objections of Labor. This issue has been a front pager and could harm the Democrat -- Webber -- running against Lucas. ISSUE TO AVOID
4. Juvenile justice bills went to State Senate today -- provides more beds; more money; may have an income tax increase to pay for it...

THE ALL AMERICAN BOTTLING COMPANY

Mr. Stephen Browne is the 3rd generation with the AABC and holds the position of President and CEO. They are the first or second largest RC bottling company in the nation. They are located in about 13 states and the District of Columbia. Browne is originally from Wichita, KS and actually delivered coca-cola to Russell, KS as a child. Mr. Browne's interests are banking, real estate, farming and soft drinks.

Mrs. Cheryl Browne is originally from Kentucky and was the first female stockbroker in Wichita, Kansas. She is a lifelong Republican. Curently, Mrs. Browne is working with the State Legislature on breast cancer prevention and research.

Their newly purchased home (1 year) was built in 1915 by W.T. Hales. Frank Phillips of Phillips Petroleum bought it and then donated it to the Catholic Church. It became the Arch Diocese Headquarters until Pope John Paul divested all such "ritzy" properties. An oil man bought it in 1987, went bust, and the Brownes bought it about one year ago. Apparently, it is incredible.

SPECIAL HOUSE RACE - OK 06

Special General Election:
Candidates:

May 10
Frank Lucas (R), State Rep.
Dan Webber (D). frm. press sec.
to Sen. Boren

The Lucas Campaign is hoping to turn this election into a national referendum - a vote for Dan Webber is a vote for Bill Clinton. Webber is doing a lot of ads distancing himself from Pres. Clinton - his theme being "as Independent as Oklahoma." However, many don't consider Webber much of an Oklahoman when he has lived and worked in Washington (for Sen. Boren) since graduating from college. After Rep. English left office, Webber moved back to the district and currently rents a house.

On the other hand, the Lucas clan has been in Oklahoma for five generations. Frank Lucas has served in the state house for five years and therefore has a record and the experience to lead the district.

Webber is stating that he played a key role in the 1990 Farm Bill. Since you obviously were an integral part, the NRCC suggested that you might mention you don't remember Webber having any role.

POLLING

After the April 5 runoff, the Lucas campaign was ahead of Webber by 12 points. The most recent poll shows the Lucas camp with a lead of 6 points. This latest poll was done by the Webber campaign.

*20 OKLAHOMA: BOREN TO BE NEXT OU PRESIDENT, PEROT "CONFIRMS"
The Univ. of OK regents will call a special meeting next week "apparently to announce" that Sen. David Boren (D-OK) "will be the next OU president," sources said. Boren's office would not confirm the report but "longtime Boren friend" Ross Perot "apparently confirmed what Boren would not, saying the senator's ideas for the University would show 'what a great executive he will be.'" After meeting with Boren 4/20, Perot "said Boren is doing the right thing by going to OU and will do a great job." He "said he did not try to talk Boren out of leaving the Senate": "With his wonderful mind, I am sure he is doing the right thing. I just hope we will see him back here in a few years" (Casteel/Killackey, DAILY OKLAHOMAN, 4/22). More Perot: "My dream is that he should come back in an executive position as a cabinet officer because ... I think his greatest strength is he understand the process" (TULSA WORLD, 4/22). OU regents "would not comment on the upcoming special meeting" but an announcement of the meeting is expected to be posted early next week giving 48 hours notice of the meeting (DAILY OKLAHOMAN, 4/22). Corporation Commis. J.C. Watts (R) "made the political rounds" in DC last week "as a prelude to a possible Senate race." Watts may run for Senate if Sen. David Boren (D) announces his retirement to become O.U. Pres. Watts: "I'm just in the exploratory stage." Watts met with NRSC Chair Gramm, Sen. Min. Leader Dole and Sens. Specter (R-PA) and McCain (R-AZ). Boren is expected to make his decision 5/94. Others looking at the seat: Reps. Jim Inhofe (R-01), Bill Brewster (D-03) and Dave McCurdy (D-04), Corporation Commis. Cody Graves (D), Gov. David Walters (D) and '90 gov. candidate Vince Orza (R), who recently dropped out of this year's gov. race (DAILY OKLAHOMAN, 4/15). One state Sen. wants Walters to promise: "Under no circumstances will I be a candidate for governor or U.S. Senate and under no circumstances will I change my mind" (OKLAHOMAN, 4/16).

King sees silver lining

What did Democratic candidate-to-be for governor and Sen. Wayne King, D-Rumney, think of the first poll on a showdown with Merrill?

The 54 percent-to-22 percent deficit for King didn't phase him. "I would have guessed at this point only 5 percent of the voters in the state know me, so I guess that number I got represents those who would not vote for Steve Merrill for any reason. That's not a bad start," King said.

Democratic leaders also point out that New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, facing the fight of his political life this fall, polled the same 54 percent in that state's first poll this week.

Merrill's response.

"Wayne's problem is he hasn't found a way to break away from the pack of past Democratic losers. He got the same numbers in that poll as any other Democrat put into the mix, Peter Burling, Arnie Arnesen, Rick Trombly. That's his dilemma," said Merrill Chief of Staff Steve Edwards.

Elias sets sights on 2nd

Former Franklin Mayor Brenda Elias will be a candidate for the 2nd Congressional District seat.

Maybe it won't be formal for a while but within the week it will be official as the Democrat-turned-Republican Elias intends to file a federal campaign finance report.

Elias has raised in the neighborhood of $50,000, which is certainly enough to get started.

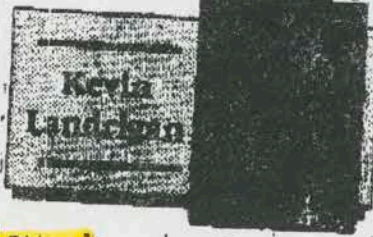

Until now, Elias had also been toying with a bid for the Executive Council seat being vacated by Concord Republican Bob Hayes, who is running for the state Senate this fall.

But following a very successful fund-raising trip in Washington, D.C., the race for Congress is a go.

Smoother than Gramm?

U.S. Sen. and likely candidate for president Phil Gramm, R-Texas, met his worst nightmare in New Hampshire last week.

The guy also sits a few benches away in the nation's capital -- fellow Sen. Don Nickles, R-

Okla.

Nickles really impressed some GOP activists with his trip through the state early last week, coming across as someone with Gramm's party credentials and the southern swank but even more suave and personal warmth.

Gramm is the first to admit he doesn't make the most dynamic first impression of anyone in American politics.

Nickles has been serving in the Senate since he was 31, he's still only 45 and he's headed up the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee so this guy knows how to raise money.

To this point, Nickles has no public interest in appearing on the 1996 ticket.

For Gramm's sake, it better stay that way.

Quote of the week

"She is big, she is bad, she is Brenda and she's all yours, Steve Duprey."

~ Democratic gubernatorial candidate King, speaking of the Democrat-turned-Republican Elias.

King said she changed parties in part because, "Too many people were mistaking her for me."

Checks beat the deadline

They aren't hosting boat cruises but the executives of Cabletron Systems Corp. in Rochester can still provide some heavyweight financial support.

Just ask Rep. Bill Zetser, R-N.H., who pocketed $18,000 in checks from Cabletron executives and family members, all on March 31, the final day of the federal campaign report.

But Cabletron has some competition in this department as leaders of Tyco Laboratories Inc. kicked in $9,000 to Zetser on the same day, and the folks at New Hampshire International Speedway

Early Summary

The environment in Oklahoma is ripe for a change in the wake of Governor Walters' guilty plea on campaign violations. Jack Mildren, who had previously seen the possibility of running alone for the Democrat nomination, is now facing state Senator Bernice Shedrick. Mildren starts out as the favorite in part because he is remembered as an Oklahoma football star. Yet, tradition does not always benefit Oklahoma football heroes. The late Bud Wilkinson lost a Senate race, and he was perhaps the legend of Oklahoma legends.

Frank Keating announced that he would seek the Republican nomination for Governor on March 29. He has spent the past seven years in Washington as a federal appointee in various key positions, but before that he had served in the State House, the State Senate, and as a federal prosecutor in Tulsa. He says there is not a "soul in this race who has the kind of experience I've had." Vince Orza, the 1990 candidate, left the race to concentrate on his business. Keating has raised nearly $400,000, and he expects to need $2.8 million. He said he expects Governor Carroll Campbell and former HUD Secretary Jack Kemp to come to the state on his behalf.

The presence of independent Wes Watkins in the campaign will help the GOP.

In a move that "caught opponents and supporters by surprise," '90 candidate Vince Orza (R) dropped out 3/12 of the race for the GOP nod to succeed Gov. David Walters (D). Orza said he was withdrawing "so he can concentrate on the business he founded," Eateries Inc., the holding company for the Garfield restaurant chain (Ervin, TULSA WORLD, 4/13). Orza: "The success and growth of Garfield's and the obligation to my shareholders was instrumental in my decision not to run for governor" (Orza release, 3/12). His decision makes ex-U.S. Atty Frank Keating (R), "who has raised nearly $400,000, in the lead position." Other GOPers: State Sen. Jerry Pierce, businessman Tom Lay and farmer Jerry Kohyluk. OK GOP Chair Clinton Key: "I think it's obviously a very sudden decision and I am shocked by it." Pierce: "Now there is only one moderate Republican in the race instead of two. I am clearly the leading conservative candidate" (Greiner, DAILY OKLAHOMAN, 4/13). Also: LG Jack Mildren and ex-Rep./'90 candidate Wes Watkins (I). Filing 7/13; primary 8/23.

Senator Robert Dole
Hart Senate Office Building
Room 141
Washington, D. C. 20510

Dear Senator Dole:

You may recall I was State Chairman in Oklahoma when you ran for Vice-President with President Ford in 1976. In late 1987, I came into your Presidential campaign through Senator Brock and the late Bernie Windon. I still wish that had turned out differently.

Today, I am Campaign Manager for a gubernatorial candidate named Vince Orza. Vince ran for Governor in Oklahoma in 1990 and won the primary with 40% of the vote, but lost the runoff by less than 1%. He is close to announcing his candidacy again for Governor for the 1994 election.

We have just learned that you will be coming to Oklahoma City to help the state Republican Party raise monies for the special election in the 6th Congressional District. I understand the date for your appearance has been set for Saturday, April 23, 1994.

I am glad you have not been involved in the gubernatorial primary. We just may need you again in the general election this fall.

I certainly look forward to seeing you again at that time and to having you meet Vince. He has an incredible opportunity to become our next Governor.

Sincerely,

Paula Unruh,
Campaign Manager
