Colin McMillan

For United States Senate

Fax to: Sen. McCain's Office

From: Selma Sierra

Subject: Sen. McCain's visit to New Mexico

The following is an update of our campaign.

1. Public opinion survey released by the Albuquerque Journal. See attached news article.

A. Colin has narrowed Jeff Bingaman's lead to 14 points. The last Journal poll (July) had Colin 26 points behind. FYI, the newspaper uses a strong Democrat as its pollster. We have every reason to believe the race is actually closer than the newspaper poll reveals.

2. Commercials

A. Our campaign has been running a few television spots including one that ties Jeff Bingaman to Clinton. The ad talks about Clinton's tax increase and how he counted on Bingaman for his vote to pass that increase. We also have one other ad on television that talks about Bingaman's votes to increase his pay since he has been a senator. He also voted for automatic pay increases.

B. Bingaman has been running television attack ads on McMillan. He is accusing Colin of misrepresenting his record as well as claiming that we are running a negative campaign. One ad talks about specific votes that Colin cast when he was in the state Legislature. See attached scripts. He is also running a spot attacking Colin for wanting to support major weapon systems now that the cold war is over. He is trying to convince voters that defense conversion is the way to go.

C. We ran radio ads from August 15 - September 1. We should be back on radio by early next week. Our first radio ads covered:

-- grazing fees. Jeff Bingaman is denying he ever voted to triple grazing fees. Colin says Jeff did. In fact, Sen. Wallop wrote an op-ed piece which will be sent out next week and Sen. Wallop is on radio with a statement that Bingaman did vote to triple grazing fees.

-- Bingaman's use of private investigators to look into Colin's personal business records (tied in the fact that Bingaman used the Freedom of Information Act on Colin when he is exempt from the same law)

-- Congressional reform, automatic pay raises, Bingaman's salary has more than doubled since he went to the Senate nearly 12 years ago,

--and more bio spots on Colin.

3. Issues

During a recent debate, Jeff went after Colin and called him a career politician and multi-millionaire. Jeff refuses to admit he voted to triple grazing fees. Also says that Colin has decided to run against the President and not against him. It's interesting to note here that in 1982, Bingaman attacked the Republican incumbent for voting 84 percent of the time with Ronald Reagan and therefore was out of touch with New Mexicans. In 1994, Bingaman votes 88 percent of the time with Clinton.

Bingaman is also attacking Colin for claiming he saved the taxpayers $49 billion when he was Asst. Sec. of Defense. FYI, we have documentation to substantiate claim including the Clinton/Aspin study that validates most of the cost savings under McMillan and Cheney.

When Bingaman is not calling Colin names, he is talking about working to help create high wage jobs, improve education and fight crime. He also talks about defense conversion. Sen. Nunn was in NM for Jeff about two weeks ago and claimed that Jeff was the person most responsible for getting New Mexico a huge chunk of defense budget money. It's interesting to note that two days after that, Jack Anderson ran a column regarding Sen. Byrd's influence to take 200 jobs from New Mexico's White Sands Missile Range and move them to West Virginia. See attached article. Where was Jeff?

During that debate, Colin spoke about the number one issue in the campaign and that is the Clinton Agenda and his rubber stamp Congress. Tied to the number one issue is;

- Congressional Reform (term limits, line-item veto, balanced budget amendment, eliminating automatic pay raises, and Congress should live by the same laws they impose on everyone else),

- health care,

- crime -- crime bill will not solve the crime problem,

- tax and spending agenda of the current administration,

- excessive government intrusion in our daily lives, and war on the west.

Jeff flip flopped on Haiti. Jeff went on the floor of the Senate last week trying to hide his previous voting record on Haiti. He was "urging the President to rethink an invasion of Haiti". Jeff voted 4 times to rubber stamp Clinton's policy to invade Haiti. See attached press release.

4. Senator McCain's comments should focus on the fact that Colin in closing in on Jeff and that we have an excellent opportunity to win in November. This recent poll demonstrates that the Clinton agenda is not right for New Mexico and it's not right for America. We need a real change in Washington -- and not the change Clinton talked about in 1992.

- Indian people issues are important to McMillan

- grazing fees(See attached op-ed)and Endangered Species Act. Endangered fish will have negative impact on Indian irrigated land project.

- Need a GOP Senate to get America back on track.

- need a majority to pass Congressional Reform.

- need a majority to pass health care that is right for this country and not Clinton's proposal.

- need a majority to stop Clinton's agenda(war on the west, excessive government intrusion, real crime bill, weak defense and inconsistent foreign policy).

Our line on Bingaman is "it's not what a politician says, but how a politician votes that counts."

NOTE: Senator McCain will be at a BBQ on Sunday afternoon. The host is originally from Cuba. He is a successful businessman in Alb. The reason I raise this is that some members of his family lost their lives about a month ago when they were trying to flee Cuba. He feels very strongly that the U.S. not relax its current policy toward Cuba, no lifting of sanctions, etc.

Op-ed by Senator Malcolm Wallop (R-Wyoming)

Grazing Fee Increases

I sponsored the amendment to protect western ranchers and jobs when they were threatened by Bill Clinton's grazing fee increases. Therefore, it is only appropriate for me to set the record straight regarding the grazing fee debate between Colin McMillan and Senator Jeff Bingaman.

First, senatorial candidate Colin McMillan is correct when he says Jeff Bingaman voted to triple grazing fees. Senator Bingaman voted against my amendment on March 23, 1993. A vote for my amendment was a vote to remove the fee from the Clinton budget and to stop further attempts by the Clinton Administration to increase grazing fees and other user fees.

Second, Colin McMillan is also correct when he says Jeff Bingaman voted for increased grazing fees when he voted on March 25, 1993 for Bill Clinton's budget.

It's important to note that Senator Domenici and I opposed Senator Bingaman on these two votes because of the increases grazing fees. We opposed the fee increases because most small and medium-sized ranchers and sheepherders would be driven out of business.

Third, Senator Bingaman says he sponsored and voted for a sense-of-the-senate amendment on grazing fees and other user fees. His amendment basically said that user fees would be set at amounts that permit affected industries to remain viable. But as everyone in the Senate knows, Senator Bingaman's amendment was just a gimmick to give himself political cover so he could vote for the increases in the Clinton Budget. His amendment had no force of law and would have done nothing to stop the increases. On the other hand, my amendment would have ensured that no increases would have been included in the Clinton Budget.

As I said on the floor of the Senate in 1993, Senator Bingaman's "amendment was nothing but a cover for your reputation, glossy covered fabrication and everybody here knows it. Everybody here knows that that thing did not require the Senate to do anything. But it gave the people a chance at home to say I did not vote to be a part of the Clinton assault on the West...this was not an honest gesture that the Senate just went through. The Wallop amendment is."

Senator Domenici said on the floor of the Senate, "The reason that I am not going to support the Bingaman amendment...is that this amendment is a facade."

Additionally, Senator Bingaman claims that my amendment was too broad and it would have increased the deficit by $752 million. In reality, my amendment was very specific about eliminating the fee increases. My amendment would have forced the Clinton administration to make one of two decisions -- look elsewhere for other sources of revenue to fund their proposed spending increases or reduce increases in government spending by $752 million. In fact, Senator Domenici said very clearly on the floor of the Senate that the deficit problem could be solved easily, and not at the expense of miners, ranchers, and sheepherders. On the floor of the Senate, Domenici said, "The only way to treat western America fair and not take jobs right out from under every small community in my state and western rural communities, is...take out $752 million out of $124 billion in increases in domestic spending...Why do we not do what is right and take it out and make sure western America is protected."

The issue is very simple. Senator Bingaman voted twice to triple grazing fees.

It's unfortunate for the voters of New Mexico that their junior senator decided to play this type of deception game with such an important issue. The bottom line is that when it counted, Senator Bingaman could have voted for ranchers, but he didn't. Senator Bingaman should come clean with New Mexicans by apologizing to Colin McMillan for calling him a liar. Just as important, he should admit the truth about his votes to support increases in grazing fees.

JUDD GREGG

United States Senator for New Hampshire

Elected to the United States Senate on November 3, 1992, and sworn in on January 5, 1993, Judd Gregg was promptly named to three of the Senate's most important committees: Budget, Foreign Relations, and Labor and Human Resources. Holding a seat on these committees has enabled Senator Gregg to have an influential voice on such vital issues as the federal budget, health care reform, education, and United States foreign policy.

Because of his demonstrated commitment to deficit reduction and responsible fiscal policy, Judd Gregg was selected to be a member of the Bipartisan Commission on Entitlement and Tax Reform in 1994. Senator Gregg was appointed to the Commission by the President, at the recommendation of the Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole.

Since taking office, Judd Gregg has added a voice of bedrock, common sense New Hampshire values to debates on federal policy and legislation. Senator Gregg is quickly becoming recognized for his commitment to a sound, responsible budget that will not pass the buck down to states and localities, or to future generations of Americans. His role on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee enabled him to stand up for a rational approach to health care reform that would build on the strengths of the market place and the private sector to address the problems in our health care system. On the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Gregg has had the opportunity to question the President, and top Administration officials, on the direction of United States foreign policy. Senator Gregg stresses that United States leadership should be exercised to protect America's national interest.

Prior to his election to the United States Senate, Judd Gregg served two terms as Governor of New Hampshire, 1989-1993; four terms as United States Representative for New Hampshire's Second Congressional District, 1981-1989; and one term as Executive Councilor for New Hampshire's District 5, 1979-1981.

As Governor of New Hampshire, Judd Gregg repeatedly demonstrated his commitment to environmental protection and economic development. He crafted a fiscally balanced state budget four years in a row in tough economic times. His efforts helped keep taxes down and state government small, yet responsive to the needs of New Hampshire's communities and citizens. Governor Gregg's successful efforts began the revitalization of New Hampshire's economy. His accomplishments included: the expansion of the Manchester Airport with state guaranteed bonding; the establishment of a large biotechnology industry at Pease International Tradeport; and the guarantee of state-backed bonding for the James River Corporation, ensuring the company's continued operation in the state. Governor Gregg also oversaw the restructuring of five of the largest banks in the state to ensure the future economic stability of New Hampshire. In 1990, Judd Gregg was unanimously elected Chairman of the New England Governors' Conference.

While serving in the United States Congress, Judd Gregg held leadership positions on the House Committee on Government Operations and the Committee on Science and Technology. In 1986, Mr. Gregg became the first Republican from New Hampshire to serve on the influential House Committee on Ways and Means in 125 years.

Mr. Gregg entered New Hampshire state government in 1978, when he was elected to the five-member Executive Council, an institution that predates the American Revolution, which must approve all state expenditures and appointments made by the Governor.

Currently, Mr. Gregg also serves as Vice President of the Crotched Mountain Rehabilitation Foundation, located in Greenfield, New Hampshire. This center for the multiply handicapped has been the focus of much of his attention for many years.

A native of New Hampshire, Senator Gregg was born in Nashua on February 14, 1947, educated in Nashua public schools, Phillips Exeter Academy (1965), and Columbia University (A.B., 1969). He received his J.D. in 1972 from Boston University Law School and his L.L.M. in tax law in 1975. Upon graduating from law school, Senator Gregg returned to Nashua and became a partner in the law firm of Sullivan, Gregg and Horton.

Senator Gregg is married to the former Kathleen MacLellan. They have two daughters, Molly and Sarah, and a son, Joshua. Judd and Kathy are residents of Rye where they attend the local Congregational Church.

Data requested prior to Sept. 24 meeting with Senator Dole, at 5:45, the Margate, in New Hampshire.

Maggy (Helen) Simony, 86 Main St., P.O. Box 1385, Meredith, N.H. 03253
(603) 279-8661. [Don't have a FAX, but I can pick up such messages at Office Options, 603-279-5790 if you let me know they are coming.]

I'm a registered Republican, voted for Perot because of trade/NAFTA issue, widow (since 1973), retired to N.H. in 1984, modest income, three children, six grandchildren. Worked as a court stenographer and secretary to local high school principal. I have a book, Traveler's Reading Guide, a bibliography published by Facts on File, which needs updating every few years, and earns modest royalties now and then.

Points I want to make vis a vis GATT/WTO

1. My goal on Sunday is simply to convince you to stand by your Wichita Eagle editorial and postpone GATT until 1995, not to discuss the contents of GATT/WTO. (My views on GATT are attached hereto should you care to read them.)

2. The GATT/WTO vote parallels that of Health Care. You, and Republicans, urged that Health Care be postponed until 1995 because it was too large a text, and too important an issue (14% of the economy) to vote on without educating the American public as to its contents, and adequate time to assess its implications. GATT is over 1000 pages of implementing legislation (still being written as I understand it) plus 22,000 pages of trade regulations, and affects 25% of the economy. Both should be held over.

3. The New York Times says: "Unless Mr. Dole changes his mind, the measure stands little chance of passage this year." My view is that if you DO change your mind it will be seen from out here as a cave-in to those same old pressures, that in the untidy closing days of NAFTA debate, made Congress and the presidency look so tacky. Changing your mind will return to haunt both you in the primaries and the Republican Party in November, 1996 by admitting that the bill was rammed through when Clinton wanted it despite knowledge of widespread opposition, and your own concerns for its complications.

4. Passing GATT in 1994 or 1995, will almost certainly bring Buchanan, and also possibly Perot, into the 1996 race--a disaster for the party as it splits along internationalist/nationalist and other fault lines. Passing it in 1994 will give them 3-4 months additional time to make the decision.

5. Passing GATT in 1994 will immediately follow the Capitol Steps Contract, and detract from its effect. If you are "contracting" to reform Congress and how it deals with legislation, how can you justify pushing GATT through when polls indicate 90% of the public know nothing about it? And that when basic facts are explained, 2/3 of those polled are AGAINST GATT.

6. Finally, Senator Dole, how about including intent to postpone GATT as part of that Capitol Steps Contract--now THAT would be a personal political coup for you, as well as a net gain of votes for the Party.

Why my interest in GATT/WTO/NAFTA?

My interest is purely on principal and ideology -- nothing financial. No child whose job went to Mexico or such. All my children are more successful financially than their Mom, which isn't true with several of my friends. One son-in-law benefits from GATT because he works for a Caterpillar subsidiary. So there's nothing personal to account for my avid interest.

My opposition to GATT/NAFTA/WTO is profound, philosophical, comes from a combination of patriotism and concerned citizenship for the kind of future I want, after I'm dead, for my grandchildren and for America. I think GATT/NAFTA have been financially and psychologically disastrous for America. I simply love this country too much to sit still and see it become just another consumer market in a global economy, run by the WTO, where people are nothing but economic entities -- all on the altar of so-called "free" trade.

The World Trade Organization is in my view, a betrayal of the constitution and the American people, and an Executive Branch power grab, a Congressional dumping of its constitutional responsibility. I believe in 10 years, people will look back and call those who voted for GATT, traitors.

There is no way that the implementing legislation, the kind of side deals Clinton made to pass NAFTA, could ever be changed to satisfy me. The way I read the WTO (I have a copy) when push comes to shove, WTO rulings prevail over any legislation Congress adds to GATT, so the implementing legislation (if it disagrees with WTO and some country wants to challenge it) isn't worth a damn.

And I'm not impressed either with economic theories. I'm a pragmatist economic theories that aren't working, whether its communism OR so-called "free" trade, are equally candidates for the ash heap of history, as Reagan put it. GATT is NOT working for the U.S.A.! Just look at the standard of living and wage statistics from 1973 on. We are being inexorably leveled down, as was always the intent of GATT and the WTO fans -- they just don't say it out loud to the lumpen proletariat.

(I have copy of a great N.Y. Times article about economic theories of professors who proclaim the joys of free trade and the benefits of competition but invariably have tenure themselves. Kind of like Phil Gramm and Newt Gingrich.)

What I want is fair trade that is good for America's economy, hopefully good for the other country's economy, implemented by bilateral trade agreements which have been negotiated by people who have not, and would not ever become lobbyists on behalf of other countries, and who do NOT think tariffs equate with original sin! After all, we lived that way most of our history.

6. Delay GATT until the people can be educated on this agreement.

MEMORANDUM

DATE: September 22, 1994
FROM: Rolf Th. Lundberg, Jr.
TO: Senator Dole
SUBJECT: GATT Talking Points

- ALTHOUGH THE HOUSE AND SENATE CONFEREES WRAPPED UP THEIR WORK ON THE TRADE BILL TUESDAY NIGHT, PROBLEMS STILL EXIST WITH THE IMPLEMENTING BILL.
- THE BILL IS CLEARLY NOT PAID FOR. THE FUNDING PACKAGE RAISES ONLY $6.8 BILLION OVER THE FIRST FIVE YEARS. NO ATTEMPT IS MADE TO PAY FOR THE SECOND FIVE YEARS. THERE IS A VIGOROUS EFFORT BEING MADE TO RE-DIRECT THE $1.7 BILLION IN SAVINGS IN AGRICULTURE PROGRAMS THAT WILL RESULT FROM IMPLEMENTING THE AGREEMENT TO OTHER, GREEN-BOX (GATT-LEGAL) AG PROGRAMS. THAT MONEY WILL THEN NOT BE AVAILABLE TO OFFSET THE COST OF THE BILL. A 60-VOTE POINT OF ORDER WILL LIE AGAINST THE BILL ON THE SENATE FLOOR -- THE ADMINISTRATION IS TAKING A BIG GAMBLE ON WINNING THE NECESSARY VOTES.
- THE RULE OF ORIGIN PROBLEM REMAINS. THE RETAILERS WANT TO KEEP THE PRESENT RULE, WHICH SAYS AN ITEM OF CLOTHING IS FROM THE COUNTRY WHERE THE FABRIC WAS CUT. OUR DOMESTIC MANUFACTURERS WANT TO CHANGE THE RULE TO SAY AN ITEM OF CLOTHING IS FROM THE COUNTRY WHERE THE ITEM WAS SEWN OR ASSEMBLED. SINCE THE CONFEREES WERE UNABLE TO REACH AGREEMENT ON THE EFFECTIVE DATE FOR A NEW RULE OF ORIGIN, THE ADMINISTRATION WILL DECIDE. FOR

SOME MEMBERS, SATISFACTORY RESOLUTION OF THIS ISSUE IS A CONDITION FOR THEIR SUPPORT OF THE BILL.

- THE AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE HAS PUT TOGETHER A LONG LIST OF ITEMS
TO ADD TO THIS BILL, INCLUDING EXTENSION OF THE FARM BILL, EXTENSION OF THE CONSERVATION RESERVE PROGRAM, AND PRESERVING
THE USDA BUDGET. MY UNDERSTANDING IS THAT THE ADMINISTRATION MAY BE WILLING TO GO ALONG WITH INCLUDING SOME OF THESE ITEMS IN THE IMPLEMENTING BILL. REGARDLESS OF THE MERIT OF SOME OF THESE PROPOSALS, MANY MEMBERS BELIEVE THIS IS A VIOLATION OF THE FAST-TRACK PROCESS. FAST-TRACK REQUIRES THAT THE PROVISIONS OF THE IMPLEMENTING BILL BE EITHER "NECESSARY" OR "APPROPRIATE" TO THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE TRADE AGREEMENT. MANY MEMBERS WONDER WHY
THE ADMINISTRATION WON'T JUST DRAW THE LINE ON EXTRANEOUS PROVISIONS. THE ANSWER MAY BE THAT THE ADMINISTRATION IS CONCERNED ABOUT GETTING THE NECESSARY 60 VOTES.

- I INTRODUCED A PROVISION THAT WAS INCLUDED IN THE FINANCE AND WAYS & MEANS COMMITTEE PACKAGE THAT WILL GIVE THESE COMMITTEES
THE OPPORTUNITY TO VOTE ON NEGATIVE WTO PANEL DECISIONS. IF THE U.S. STARTS TO LOSE A LOT OF TRADE CASES IN GENEVA, I BELIEVE IT WILL BE IMPORTANT FOR CONGRESS TO EXPRESS ITS VIEW ON WHETHER THE WTO DECISION SHOULD BE IMPLEMENTED, AND IT MAY HELP CONGRESS
TO ADDRESS THE QUESTION OF OUR CONTINUED MEMBERSHIP IN THE WTO.

Sounds like a touchy subject as I understand you now support GATT and they are opposed to GATT.

FR : SEN. SMITH'S OFC

TO: JCC
FROM: LISA
RE: SOME POINTS AND LANGUAGE FOR NEWS AND NOTES

THESE ARE EXCERPTS FROM RELEASES -- EDIT AT WILL

I. CRIME

I voted against President Clinton's $30 billion Crime Bill, because it merely puts a nightstick and a badge on pork programs from the President's failed stimulus package.

The crime measure weakens sentencing provisions and "is soft on crime." I have criticized the provisions that: reduced the stiff mandatory sentences for crimes committed with a firearm which were contained in the original Senate version, eliminated the mandatory sentences for selling drugs to minors, cut additional prison construction funding from $13 billion to $8 billion, and added $6.9 billion in unproven social programs.

Also, the President's much-touted addition of 100,000 new police officers is a false promise, given that the bill only fully funds 20,000 new officers. States and communities will be forced to pay for the additional officers to meet the target.

We cannot afford this expensive social experiment. It is a feel-good bill with no teeth. We need a tough crime bill with truth in sentencing and tougher penalties for crimes committed with firearms. This bill does neither.

WEAPONS BAN (IF ROOM) -- This bill punishes gun ownership (assault weapons ban), but weakens the punishment for gun related crimes. It violates the letter and spirit of the Second Amendment and tramples on the Constitution, but refuses to mandate stiff penalties for crimes committed with a firearm. It is the ultimate hypocrisy.

II. DEBT AND DEFICIT (TIED IN TO SMITH "FREEZE AMENDMENTS")

Every man, woman and child in New Hampshire and America owes $17,000 of our nation's $4.6 trillion debt. This debt will reach nearly $7 trillion by the year 2000, with annual interest payments of over $200 billion. Interest payments on the debt are expected to surpass Social Security as the single largest government expense by 1996. Interest expenses will continue to rise until we balance the budget and pay off the debt.

Earlier this year I began an initiative which gave the Senate a chance to make the tough decision to freeze spending. During Senate consideration of the Appropriations bills -- those bills which spend taxpayer dollars to fund the government and its programs -- I offered motions to freeze 1995 spending at 1994 levels. There were five of these bills that increased funding over last year's level -- totalling $7.4 billion more spending.

If passed, my initiative would have kept spending for more than 10 federal agencies at the fiscal 1994 level and reduced the deficit. I pleaded five times to the Senate, "Let's not spend more than we did last time around," and each time the Senate refused in lopsided votes. How can the Senate continue talking about responsible spending but fail to act when given the chance? The Clinton Administration has stubbornly resisted further budget cutting measures since the passage of its so-called deficit reduction plan -- which, in reality, adds about $1 trillion to the national debt. The President is now crowing about the fact that the deficit for 1995 is projected to be "only" $167 billion. Although this is an improvement over the deficits we endured during the recessionary early 1990s, the Administration also projects that the deficit will again increase every year from 1996 until 1999 -- even if the economy stays strong and interest rates being stable. If growth slows or interest rates shoot up, which is a likely scenario, these rising deficits will soar higher still.

Despite all the rhetoric about change, the status quo remains. In Washington, this means more pork, more spending and more debt. Whether the issue is the Balanced Budget Amendment, my measures to freeze spending, or Bill Zeliff's "A to Z" bill, Congress continues to reject sensible attempts to put our nation on firm fiscal ground. The American people should flat-out reject this approach to governing.

III. IMMIGRATION

As the current Cuban and Haitian migrant-refugee crises dramatically demonstrate, the immigration issue remains one of our most urgent national priorities. Nearly eight years after the passage of the landmark Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, our Nation still has not secured its borders. Illegal immigration remains out of control.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service apprehends about 1,000,000 illegal aliens every year as they seek to enter our country. The INS estimates that at least 4,000,000 illegal aliens reside permanently in the United States and that the number grows by at least 300,000 per year.

For this reason, I am preparing to introduce the "Immigration Control and Reform Act of 1994," a bill that combines the best approaches to controlling illegal immigration and reforming legal immigration. My bill blunts the effects of the two most powerful magnets that draw illegal aliens into our country -- the hope of employment and the allure of the welfare state.

A Congressional Research Service study indicates that illegal aliens can get on the rolls of more than 100 federal benefits programs. My bill would put a stop to this by explicitly barring illegal aliens from receiving any such benefits -- like welfare and unemployment.

While it is true that we are a proud nation of immigrants, America simply cannot afford to continue legal immigration levels at about three times the historical levels when illegal immigration remains out of control.

In order to bring legal immigration down to more reasonable levels, my bill proposes a reduction of total legal immigration from the current annual level of approximately 880,000 to 300,000. The 300,000 figure represents the approximate historical average annual immigration from 1820 until the modern liberalization of legal immigration levels in 1965.

COMMITTEE PASSES SMITH SUPERFUND AMENDMENTS

During debate to approve the "Superfund" hazardous waste cleanup bill today, the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee unanimously passed two amendments introduced by Senator Bob Smith, a member of the Committee. One Smith amendment provides liability relief for property owners whose homes border a hazardous waste site; the second requires that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) provide potentially liable parties with information on the evidence EPA has against them -- a procedure which is not in place under current law.

Smith said he offered the amendments after hearing concerns from parties involved with two New Hampshire sites. The first measure prohibits EPA from naming the owner of property bordering a Superfund site as liable for cleanup solely due to the property location, as has happened under current law. The New Hampshire Senator said residents whose homes are adjacent to the Radio Beacon/Town Garage, formerly Holton Circle, hazardous waste site in Londonderry have "watched their property values sink and have lost hope for refinancing, since the banks are not willing to risk being dragged into the Superfund system."

The amendment also allows EPA to issue assurances of no enforcement and grant protection to the owner from any cost recovery or contribution actions.

Smith's second measure addresses concerns faced by some of the responsible parties at the Coakley Landfill in North Hampton. Smith said EPA often requires parties to clean up a site, even though the alleged polluter may not have been given information about the basis for their liability. He said this situation has plagued parties involved in the Coakley Landfill cleanup, and said his amendment will "remedy this inequity by requiring EPA to provide evidence and documents" detailing the accusations.

SMITH SUPERFUND NEWS RELEASE
AUGUST 3, 1994

"Under current law, EPA doesn't have to document allegations against potentially liable parties. These individuals, businesses, and municipalities are often left wondering if EPA has evidence it is withholding. These parties -- often small businesses -- are forced to participate in cleanup without really knowing whether they were actually responsible for polluting. EPA assumes that these parties are guilty until proven innocent. My amendment ends the intimidation and uncertainty in the process," said Smith.

He offered another amendment, which failed to pass the Committee, to eliminate the current law's "retroactive liability" for hazardous waste cleanup. This provision mandates that parties who contributed waste to a site prior to Superfund's enactment in 1980 can still be held responsible for cleanup, even if their actions were legal at the time. The Senator said he plans to offer this amendment again when Superfund comes to the Senate floor.

"The Administration's Superfund plan builds upon the flawed foundation of the draconian retroactive liability scheme in the current law. Retroactivity, in principle, is wrong. This is an issue of fairness and upholding the spirit of the Constitution, which states that no laws will be passed "ex post facto" -- holding people responsible for something that became law after the fact. Superfund liability is one of the most onerous, ex post facto laws and must be changed," Smith said.

Sen. Smith and Rep. Bill Zeliff (also R-NH) have introduced their own comprehensive Superfund alternative. Smith intends to introduce additional amendments, including one to reform liability, when the bill comes to the floor of the Senate.

The Superfund legislation regulates the cleanup of more than 1,200 hazardous waste sites across the country.

SMITH OFFERS MEASURES TO REDISTRIBUTE FEDERAL FUNDS
Criticizes "Select Group of Senators" for Inequitable Spending

New Hampshire Senator Bob Smith today offered two amendments to redistribute federal dollars under a Congressional spending bill considered by the Senate. Smith said that under his amendments, New Hampshire would have gained $7.5 million, simply by distributing the funding for water and housing projects in the bill on a fair, formula basis. Both amendments, which were offered to the annual VA, HUD, Independent Agencies (including EPA) Appropriations bill, eliminated earmarks in the legislation but did not change the overall funding levels of the bill.

The first amendment, which failed by a vote of 71-27, would redistribute $135 million in funding for "special purpose grants" for housing and community development projects in the spending bill. On the floor of the Senate, Smith said that three states -- West Virginia, Oregon, and New York -- receive more than one third of all the funding for these grants.

Smith said, "a select group of powerful Senators on the Appropriations Committee represent these states, and their back-room deals are preventing much-needed housing assistance from getting to other states. Fifteen states, including New Hampshire, will not receive any of this grant money under the Appropriations bill."

The New Hampshire lawmaker said under his proposal, the $135 million would be put into the existing Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program and given to states based on the CDBG formula. He says 30 states would gain under his amendment; New Hampshire would gain $410,000 for housing, community and economic development needs without increasing spending.

"This is an issue of fairness. Funding should be distributed in a more equitable manner. Why should West Virginia get $19 million and Texas only get $1 million? My proposal would remedy this inequity," Smith said on the Senate floor.

In a similar initiative this afternoon, Smith also sought to redistribute unauthorized special project funds for wastewater treatment projects. Under his second amendment, which failed 60-37, the New Hampshire Senator proposed transferring $697 million in water projects from this Appropriations bill to an existing State Revolving Loan Fund (SRLF) administered under the Clean Water Act. Smith, a member of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, again said more states -- 39, including New Hampshire -- would gain funding under this amendment. His amendment would have provided the Granite State with $7 million for Clean Water loans.

"All states are affected by the Clean Water Act mandates and I believe all states should get their fair share under a revolving loan fund formula. Under my amendment, funding for these water projects would be distributed under the existing Clean Water Act revolving loan formula, instead of based on the political power of the Appropriators," Smith said on the Senate floor. "Once again, the Senate refuses to take on the sacred cow of pork barrel politics."

Swett's Ads Hit a Nerve In Newbury

By JOHN DIS'ASO
Union Leader Staff

Newbury's three selectmen and police chief yesterday cused U.S. Rep. Dick Swett N.H., of exploiting for political gain their town and the 1993 town office shootings.

The officials complained officially about Swett campaign advertisements exhorting congressman's May vote in favor of banning various semiautomatic weapons.

"We wouldn't expect any candidate for office to stoop so much less a congressman or United States of America," they wrote in an open letter made public yesterday.

The public accusation came several days after Swett refused to pull the advertising, despite a request from the officials.

Swett, in a prepared statement, said "It would be a crime in itself to sweep this event under the rug," though he does "feel deeply" for Newbury residents.

The former town assistant administrator who survived the incident and is featured in the television and print ads defended NEWBURY, Page 17

Swett and his vote. She said she volunteered to help him.

"It really hurts that they are attacking Dick Swett," Carole Hockmeyer of Henniker said. "I'm sorry, it isn't meant to hurt anyone. I have a life, too, and I have to do what I have to do."

Hockmeyer, a Republican, said the advertising does not exploit the town.

"I'm part of the tragedy, and I don't feel that I'm exploiting anyone," she said.

In the print ad, which has appeared in several newspapers statewide, Hockmeyer is identified as "the only survivor of the Newbury Town Hall massacre."

She is quoted as saying, "I think Dick Swett's vote to ban semiautomatic weapons took a lot of courage. Even though I am a Republican, Dick Swett has my vote, because he did the right thing."

Swett voted in favor of banning 19 semiautomatic weapons in May. He admitted to a last-minute change of mind on the issue, but has been blasted since then by pro-gun activists, Republicans and conservatives as having committed a flip-flop and being dishonest with the voters. Swett has denied the accusation.

Selectman James L. Therrien said that when he first saw the print ads, prior to the Sept. 13 primary election, "it made me angry, and it made all three selectmen and the chief angry."

"But about mid-week last week, we saw the television ad and it changed from anger to really just emotion," he said.

The November 1993 shooting left two employees in the tax collector's office dead; Maribeth Swanson, 48, of New London, a receptionist, and Susan Webster, 44, a secretary.

The gunman, John Albro, 37, the son of then-Selectman Egbert Albro, then fatally shot himself in the head.

The television advertisements feature Hockmeyer supporting Swett's vote and shows the front page of The Union Leader with a picture of police outside the town offices and the headline: "Gunman Kills 2 Newbury Workers."

"All political ads these days seem

Therrien said Swett refused. "Basically, he felt it was a good way to get his message across," Therrien said.

He said he told Swett at the time that the next move by the selectmen and Chief James Valiquet would be to make their feelings public.

Yesterday, Therrien faxed copies of a letter to the "Citizens of New Hampshire" to The Union Leader and other media outlets.

The letter said the Swett ads "bring up a very sad, emotional and dark time for the citizens of our town."

"Now our tragedy is being exploited inaccurately for votes," it said.

Chief Valiquet, Therrien and Selectmen Henry E. Thomas Jr. and Scott Wheeler were registered as Republicans as of 1993, but Therrien said the public letter "has no political motive to it."

"It is simply to spare the people of our town from having to live through this again. We don't pretend this didn't happen, and certainly the press brings it up often enough, but a congressman should perhaps be getting his message across in other ways, maybe by quoting statistics," he said.

Therrien said one inaccuracy is the identification of Hockmeyer as the lone survivor. In fact, he said, several officials from the state Department of Revenue Administration also were in the building at the time of the shooting.

Therrien said a petition is circulating urging Swett to stop running the ads.

Swett's Republican opponent, former state Sen. Charles Baas of Peterborough, said, "I feel badly, very badly for the people in Newbury. This is a sad and very tragic event, and I don't think it has any business being in the political arena."

"Everyone was interested in me because I was a victim in Newbury," she said. "I was interviewed by ABC and the Japanese press. They wanted to talk to me because I was a survivor."

She said she intends to speak out in favor of gun control.

"I wanted to help Dick Swett because he was the only one of our congressional people who wanted assault weapons banned, and he also voted in favor of the Brady Bill. The other three did not," she said.

Swett's full statement said: "Violent crime has reached epidemic proportions in this country. Sadly, even those of us living in New Hampshire are no longer safe from the random killings and senseless violence we see daily on our television sets. Newbury is just one tragic example."

"While I feel deeply for everyone in the town and the tragedy they have endured, I feel it would be a crime in itself to sweep this event under the rug. I think it took tremendous courage for this fine Republican woman, Carole Hockmeyer, to speak publicly about this serious issue. If anyone has a right to speak out, it is Carole."

to exploit people's emotions beyond reality and necessity."

Therrien said, "But when a political ad exploits the emotions of a town, that's when we tried to take action to get him to pull the ad."

Therrien said he had a "20- or 30-minute conversation" with Swett on Sept. 16 and asked him to pull the ad.

``Dick has taken this abuse for six months, and now he's finally going to be able to respond to it. We feel very pleased with the position we are in at this point,`` Quinn said.

``Bass is trying to be all things to all people. At some point, he's going to have to say where he stands on some issues and that's when this race will break for us,`` Quinn said.

Bass campaign manager Bruce Berke said the survey results were consistent with how Bass has viewed the race.

``Charlie ran in the primary as the candidate that can best beat Dick Swett. Now, he has a very real chance to do that,`` Berke said.

In the 1st District race, two-term Zeliff led Verge 53 percent to 16 percent with 31 percent undecided.

Verge said it was significant that 34 percent were ``firm`` for Zeliff, compared with 9 percent for Verge.

``After four years, he's only got one in three people in the district who are firmly for him. We're just getting started in this race, and the poll says to me our job could be easier than I thought,`` Verge said.

Other findings in the poll:

Firm voters: Among those who had made up their minds, Swett led Bass, 25 percent to 23 percent.

Ideology: Swett led among ``liberals'' over Bass, 46 percent to 23 percent, while Bass led Swett among conservatives, 44 percent to 27 percent. Swett won over the moderates 37 percent to 26 percent.

Zeliff was preferred among ``liberal'' voters, 41 percent to 34 percent as well as moderates, 45 percent to 13 percent, and conservatives, 64 percent to 5 percent.

The poll did not include the Libertarian candidates Paul Lannon in the 1st District and John Lewicke in the 2nd District.

Nor did it include the independents who will appear on the Nov. 8 ballot Linda Spitzfaden in the 2nd District and Scott Tosti and Merle Braley in the 1st District.

Swett has fun with Bass' plan

◆ Charlie Bass says he will endorse a GOP contract that was co-written by his challenger for the 2nd Congressional District seat, Dick Swett. LET 9/21/94

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) — Democratic Rep. Dick Swett is having some fun at the expense of his Republican challenger, Charlie Bass.

A Republican "Contract with America," embraced by 2nd District candidate Bass, focuses on passing a bill introduced Congressman Swett.

"I thank the Republicans for acknowledging the importance of the Accountability Act, which I sponsored and fought for in the House," Congressman Swett said yesterday.

Mr. Bass, speaking to the Nashua Area Federation of Republican Women Monday, said he will go to Washington to endorse the contract proposed by House Minority Leader Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

The plan includes the Congressional Accountability Bill, which Congressman Swett co-wrote with Republican Rep. Chris Shays of Connecticut.

The Swett-Shays bill requires that all laws applying to the country also apply to Congress. It is the top priority of the Gingrich contract.

"I must be doing something right if my Congressional Accountability Bill is seen by the Republican leadership as the most important piece of legislation they will be pushing next year," Congressman Swett said. "Welcome aboard, Newt."

Congressman Gingrich dropped Congressman Swett's name from the plan on his contract to Republican candidates.

The Gingrich contract also calls for an independent audit of the House books, a three-fifths vote before any tax increase can be approved, a one-third cut in committee staff and term limits for committee leaders.

Congressman Gingrich has invited the 300-plus Republican candidates for congressional seats to the unity event.

Mr. Bass, who is running in the 2nd District, said the GOP contract represents what he will fight for if he defeats Congressman Swett in November.

Bruce Berke, a spokesman for Mr. Bass, said yesterday that Mr. Bass would support the Congressional Accountability Bill, but he believes the bill has some problems.

Mr. Berke said that under the bill, congressional fines are paid by taxpayers and Congress is the judge of who is accountable.

"Charlie would have voted for that act," Mr. Berke said. "However, it needs improvement."

Congressman Swett said Mr. Bass may want to take a better look at the contract before he offers his full endorsement, however. He said several tax credits spelled out in Congressman Gingrich's proposals could add billions of dollars to the deficit.

was good fortune that I was there when one of the biggest issues to hit the Senate in 25 years (HIT) and I ended up being a key player on it."

But there seems to be more at work than simple good fortune.

Every single member of the Republican minority leadership interviewed this week said Gregg is destined for a leadership role in the party. Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, the minority leader, called him "a very effective member of the Republican team in the Senate."

And Mississippi Sen. Thad Cochran, the Republican chairman of the conference, said: "Judd would be a credible candidate for any leadership position in the Senate."

That may come as a surprise to the state's political watchers, many of whom said that the telegenic Gregg was "no Warren Rudman" when Gregg was elected in 1992 to fill the shoes of that widely respected, vocal senator.

Is Gregg's increasing visibility a simple matter of a star on the rise, or is it a question of being in the right place (New Hampshire) at the right time (with presidential primaries looming in the not-too-distant future)?

"Look, it's a wide-open field out there for the Republican nomination," said Bill Schneider, a political analyst for the conservative think tank, the American Enterprise Institute. "Every morning, every single senator wakes up and says: 'I could be president.' And the next thing that comes to their minds is: 'I better stay on the good side of Judd Gregg.'"

The GOP leadership agrees.

"Every candidate will want to have (Judd Gregg's) advice and counsel and help in New Hampshire," said Cochran. "Candidates may have already done so - Bob Dole has been very friendly toward him, as well as Phil Gramm."

"I would think he'd be a very important keeper of the gate - that you would want to have his blessing there to further their designs for the presidency," said Wyoming Sen. Alan Simpson, the minority whip.

New Hampshire political leaders have always played important roles during presidential primary and election seasons. But Oldahoma Sen. Don Nickles, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, said not to attribute too much to the New Hampshire connection in terms of Gregg's new visibility. Instead, Nickles, who asked Gregg to play a big role in formulating the Republican strategy on health care and more recently worked with him on Haiti, pointed to Gregg's administrative skills and his willingness.

"The fact that he's from New Hampshire doesn't hurt for political considerations, but Judd Gregg would be a leader wherever he's from. He's asserted leadership - it's not so much a question of being drafted."

David Carney, the deputy executive director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee and the former chief of staff to then-governor John Sununu, said Gregg has taken advantage of his committee assignments by coming out early on a number of issues.

"He had strong views at a time when many others were still feeling around for their stances," said Carney. "It does help (that his conservative views) are in tune with the vast majority of his constituents."

Gregg is also a senator that the leadership can turn to when there's a crucial vote. Simpson, the minority whip, called Gregg a reliable voter on key issues.

"On most issues, yes - you can't have very much of an impact as a lone wolf down here," Gregg said. "You have to be willing to be a team player."

But being a team player and running point for your party does carry political risks; in the last presidential election American voters who went for independent Ross Perot gave a clear signal of their feelings about partisanship and the resulting political gridlock.

New Hampshire's other senator, Republican Bob Smith, said while he believes that Gregg would make a good party leader, it is not a role in which he sees himself. "It does rein you in some an restrict you because you're trying to please all sides - it's not what see as my role."

Gregg said he doesn't consider himself a partisan - his philosophies are simply in tune with those of the Republican Caucus.

And those sorts of views are less risky in the conservative Granite State than they might be elsewhere.

Asked why Gregg has been given so prominent a role rather than Smith, Simpson replied: "You can compare them ... Washington works in cycles. Sometimes the spotlight hits you and sometimes it bounces off."

For the moment, Gregg seems bathed in it. Cochran went so far as to say that it wouldn't be out of the question for Gregg to run for president himself.

"I think he'd be a good president," mused Cochran.

And while Gregg denies such aspirations - "you can absolutely rule that one out" - and indeed they seem far-fetched given his status as a freshman senator from a small state, he said if the opportunity came along for an elected leadership role in the Senate, he would take a hard look.

"I want to be able to contribute," Gregg said. "And to do that you have to move up in the Senate in a collegial atmosphere."

Gregg is stepping into limelight on many national issues

Sen. Judd Gregg is on the Grand Old Party's fast track.

He stepped up to the plate as the Republican Party's designated hitter on Haiti from the get-go, sponsoring two amendments to try to force Clinton to come before Congress prior to an invasion. And prior to that, he was also out front leading the battle against Clinton's health care plan, coordinating task forces and strategy for his fellow Republicans. He's also a deputy whip, which means he helps to round up and count votes for his party.

Those are high-profile partisan roles for a freshman senator, especially one who won election with only 48 percent of the vote. And it's a long way to come for a man who once stood on Clinton Street, running for Congress in 1990, with a sign that read: "I'm Judd Gregg."

"The reason I'm in the lead on (Haiti) is that I offered an amendment in June," Gregg said last week. "I'd like to think I'm doing my job."

Gregg's committee assignments - budget, foreign relations and labor - have coincided with the issues of the day.

"Health care worked out very well," said Gregg, who played the conservative Romeo on the labor committee to Republican Sen. Nancy Kassebaum's moderate Juliet. "It

NASHUA - Former Vice President Dan Quayle held several private meetings last weekend with Republican officials in New Hampshire, party officials said yesterday.

Quayle, encouraged by the sale of 500,000 copies of his book, "Standing Firm," has begun making speeches to see if he has support to run for president in 1996. His trip to New Hampshire was a quiet effort to touch base with Republicans in the state that holds the first primary.

Marilyn Quayle accompanied her husband, saying in a broadcast appearance that a decision to run would have to be made by January. Former Gov. John H. Sununu, White House chief of staff for part of Quayle's vice presidency, also accompanied Quayle.

"I think he's real smart to come in and start meeting with people one-on-one," said Robert K. Turner, one of the GOP leaders who met Quayle. "The others have all been doing public events."

DAN QUAYLE
Plans return to N.H. in December

Quayle has agreed to return Dec. 4 for a series of public meetings hosted by U.S. Sen. Robert Smith, who is running for reelection in 1996. "He told me he was willing to come up, so I guess that means he's considering running," Smith said. "And the groups he will be speaking to are the activists who know the most about grass-roots organizing and fund-raising in the state."

Smith has had other GOP presidential hopefuls at similar sessions. Another senior Republican official who met Quayle said, "It's pretty clear to me that he is planning to run for president." Though Quayle made no commitments, the official said, he compared his qualifications to other potential candidates.

"It makes sense," said Turner, who said he's undecided. "He's young, he's bright. Dan Quayle fits the mold of someone who could give Clinton a run for his money."

Quayle has an opponent. Sen. Judd Gregg, who does not think Quayle has the qualifications for the presidency, said, "I will do everything I can to make sure Dan Quayle is not nominated."

Quayle also left behind some ruffled feathers. At state GOP headquarters in Concord, rumors swirled that Quayle would drop by Monday. Aides cleaned up the office, but Quayle never showed.

Quayle speech hits Clinton Haiti policy

By Geeta Anand

BRIDGEWATER - Rolling up the sleeves of his crisp white shirt, Dan Quayle ambled onto the stage at Bridgewater State College last night and pummeled President Clinton on his intervention policy in Haiti.

In a theatrical speech, Quayle used humor and biting irony to win over a crowd of nearly 1,400 students who applauded and laughed as he attacked Clinton on health care, crime and foreign policy.

"Why Haiti?" he asked, as the crowd roared and cheered.

"To focus on Haiti and say whether Haiti has a democracy or sponse to student questions about his qualifications for office, he sounded every bit the candidate.

"The experience I had as vice president is quantitatively and qualitatively superior to being the governor of Arkansas," he said.

Quayle's appearance at the 7,000-student college began with a 20-minute press conference, where he was asked for his predictions on the Romney-Kennedy Senate race.

Quayle predicted a Romney win but was more eager to discuss the results of the primary in Washington state, where House Speaker Thomas Foley received only 35 percent of the vote in winning renomination to his congressional seat. Declaring his re-

Judging by the standing ovation he received from the crowd, Quayle seemed to think the answer was a positive one - at least last night.

"With that kind of enthusiasm and that reception here, how the heck did we lose?" in 1992, he said.

If he were at the helm of a presidential campaign, he said, things would be different.

"It would be my ideas, my campaign, not someone else's," he said.

Quayle used the greater part of his presentation to attack Clinton on his policy in Haiti. He noted exiled Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's reported ambivalence about the agreement brokered by Clinton's diplomatic team last week-

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) Rep. Dick Swett, D-N.H., is in a dead heat with Republican nominee Charles Bass but Rep. Bill Zeliff, R-N.H., has a big edge over Democratic nominee Bill Verge, according to a poll.

The University of New Hampshire Survey Center poll sought opinions from likely registered voters in the 1st and 2nd Congressional districts. Polling began the day after the primary last week and concluded during the weekend.

In the 2nd District, Swett led Bass, 35 percent to 33 percent, with 32 percent of the 226 respondents undecided.

Survey Center Director Kelly Myers said the split is well within the margin of error for the poll.

"This race will be won or lost among independent voters who are also very split at this point," Myers said.

Swett campaign manager Bob Quinn said the results are encouraging to the incumbent because for the past six months he's been hammered by '13 opponents."

Quinn described them as the nine Republican primary

Poll Shows Bass, Swett Locked in Tight Race

BOLD ON! Steve Merrill and Bill Zeitz are go fishing, but the fun's only beginning in the 2nd Congressional District, according to the latest New Hampshire Poll results by Dick Bass' American Research Group.

It's a virtual toss-up between Democratic incumbent Rep. Dick Swett and GOP challenger Charlie Bass.

A RAG's survey of 300 likely voters in a district-wide random sample, conducted Sept. 14-19, shows Swett with 48 percent, Bass with 40 percent, Libertarian John Lewicki with 3 percent and 11 percent undecided. The margin of error is about 5 percent.

That's pretty close to another poll whose results we've obtained — conducted for Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole's "Victory '97" political action committee. Bass leads 45 to 42 percent in that one, and has a favorable-unfavorable rating of 52 to 12, while Swett's is 49 to 37.

Bennett had done polling for the Bass campaign during the Republican primary, but says he has now severed all ties and is not sponsored by any candidate or party.

Bass, even as a Bass hire, Bennett's pro-primary poll numbers turned out to be pretty darned accurate.

His final pre-primary poll, conducted the Sunday before the Tuesday, Sept. 13, election, had Bass with 34 percent, Michael Hammond with 19 percent, Ward Scott with 17 percent, Jim Bassett with 10 percent, with the remainder for either the most candidates or undecided. The actual vote had Bass with 29 percent, Hammond with 23, Scott with 21, and Bassett with 13.

The new poll shows Swett leading strongly among Democrats, Bass with 51 percent of the Republicans, and, by a 68 to 33 percent margin, Bass also leads among undecided voters.

SCARY? The GOP often likes to accuse the pollsters at the University of New Hampshire of bias. But how dare they, when just the other day, the director of the UNH Survey Center so objectively described the latest SS-15 pro-Steve Merrill gubernatorial numbers as "a very ugly picture." That's right down the middle analysis.

Anyway, Bennett's numbers make UNH's look pretty, even if you're a Wayne King supporter. Bennett has it 74 to 12 in favor of Merrill, with less than a half a percentage point for Libertarian Steve Winter and 16 percent undecided.

The survey sampling is 650 likely voters interviewed Sept. 14-19. It shows Merrill winning among Republicans, Democrats (44 to 28 percent) and undecided voters.

Bennett asked about a statewide property tax. His question was straightforward — "Do you favor or oppose a statewide property tax?" — and included no bells, whistles, "ifs," "buts" or other conditions.

The people, by a margin of 64 to 10 percent, said no, with 17 percent undecided.

But even among those who favored such a tax, it's Merrill over King, 59 to 33 percent.

Among King supporters, 29 percent favor a statewide property tax, 28 percent oppose it and 13 percent are undecided.

Also, 86 percent of those polls approved of the way Merrill is handling his job, 8 percent disapprove with 6 percent undecided. Slightly percent approved of Merrill's handling of the economy, while 14 percent disapproved with 6 percent undecided.

Bennett noted that the numbers reflect the highest support for any candidate in a pre-primary poll since he began tracking gubernatorial races in 1978.

THE AFTERTHOUGHT. Oh, yeah, there's a congressional race in the 1st District, too.

Zeitz leads Democrat Bill Vergo, 56 to 36 percent, with no support for Libertarian Paul Lannon, and 19 percent undecided. The sampling is 331 likely voters surveyed Sept. 14-19.

Unlike King, Vergo at least leads among Democrats, 54 to 15 percent, while Zeitz leads among Republicans and, by a 38 to 26 percent margin, among undecided voters.

BATING BIVL. In the 1st Congressional District, 40 percent of all voters approve of the way Bill Clinton is handling his job as President, 32 percent disapprove and 8 percent are undecided, according to the ARG New Hampshire Poll. In the 2nd, the Clinton numbers are 41 percent approval, 49 percent disapproval and 10 percent undecided.

THE GO-ON GUY. Despite his pro-primary label as a liberal who waffled on the gun issue, Bass is not only going to secure the backing of the Gun Owners of New Hampshire and the National Rifle Association, he's going to do so with the top rating given by the local group.

Bass met with the GO-NH board of directors on Tuesday night, and, "He's going to get an 'A,'" says group President Al Rubega.

Bass explained to the board why he said in a Union Leader survey that he would not back repeal of the Brady Bill.

"He thought the bill would pop out of existence in a matter of five years," Rubega explained. "He thought there would be no need to repeal it." Rubega said. Besides, the gun lobby continues to despise Swett for his May vote to ban some semi-automatic weapons.

KATRINA'S COUP. The Republicans don't like it one bit, but there's nothing illegal about it and there's nothing they can do about it. So there.

Katrina Lantos-Swett, wife and top campaign and political advisor to her husband, the Kamcaguy, is co-hosting "Beyond Politics" on WMUR, Channel 9, on Sunday, along with long-time GOP activist and former State Department official Betty Tampusi (Betty, when are you going to return that call from 1991?). It's based on CNBC's "Equal Time," featuring Mary Malin and formerly, Jane Wallace.

Pro-Bass Republicans grumble that Mrs. Swett can't be objective about the 2nd Congressional District race, if and when it is discussed, and she won't be able to resist putting in a plug for Dick whenever possible.

They find it especially offensive when host Katrina also shows up in a Swett campaign ad. They're quietly asking for equal time, or better yet, to pull Katrina off the air.

We checked with the Federal Communications Commission, and, according to political branch chief Milton Grues, the government can't order Katrina or anyone else on or off the air. He said that if a candidate is advocated by a supporter on a program, it's still not a violation unless equal time is not afforded, and if anyone feels it is not, they should file a complaint.

Meanwhile, WMUR News Director Jack Heath assures the grumbling Republicans that Katrina has promised not to promote Dick on the '97.

Dole, Perot expected in Granite State this weekend

MANCHESTER (AP) — It's presidential season in New Hampshire as prospective hopefuls for the country's top office arrive to pay their respects to those important in the nation's first primary.

Former Vice President Dan Quayle and former Republican presidential candidate Patrick Buchanan just completed visits to the Granite State. Senate Republican Leader Robert Dole and former In-dependant presidential candidate H. Ross Perot have scheduled visits this weekend.

Last weekend, Quayle and former Gov. John Sununu, White House chief of staff to former President George Bush, made the rounds and courtesy calls to the state's GOP leaders.

The Union Leader said Sununu ushered Quayle into meetings with U.S. Sen. Bob Smith, Gov. Steve Merrill, Manchester Mayor and Republican National Committee member Ray Wicczorek, Union Leader-New Hampshire, Sunday News Publisher Mackey Loeb and state Safety Commissioner Richard Flynn.

The newspaper said Quayle also visited Division of Motor Vehicles Director Robert Turner and Realtor Karl Norwood.

Quayle, a Republican, and his wife spent the weekend with Sununu and his wife, Nancy, in Salem. They left Monday, but Quayle will be back Dec. 4 to appear at two fundraising events for Smith's expected 1996 re-election effort, according to Smith staff director Jim Courtovich.

Sununu and Quayle's meeting with Mrs. Loeb came a day after she was host to another prospective presidential candidate, conservative columnist Buchanan, on Sunday.

"The (Presidential Primary campaign) season has begun," she said, while giving no hint as to whom her newspapers will endorse in the 1996 primary.

Wicczorek said he and Quayle "discussed some of the problems facing the country. He was interested in what we perceive as problems."

Wicczorek said he asked Quayle directly if he will run for president. "I did not receive an answer," the mayor said. "I assume he is just testing the waters here."

"As a national committeeman, I'm offering him or any other candidate any assistance or information they need."

Merrill aides said no significance should be attached to the governor's meeting with Quayle. They said Merrill has met with every potential presidential candidate who has requested to meet with him.

Senate Republican Leader Robert Dole will be the featured speaker Sunday at the Republican State Convention in Manchester.

Perot Back in NH for Pre-Election Rally Saturday at UNH

By MICHAEL COUSINEAU
Union Leader Staff

Maybe Ross Perot can borrow President Clinton's nickname, "The Comeback Kid."

Not because New Hampshire voters rescued his 1992 Presidential bid, but because the Texas billionaire literally keeps coming back — visiting New Hampshire for the third time in 15 months.

Perot brings his populist road show to the University of New Hampshire Saturday. He is the featured speaker for a pre-election rally at 8:30 p.m. in the Lundholm Gymnasium on the Durham campus.

"There is a recognition and people sit up and take notice nationally when something takes place in New Hampshire," said Greg Goyoni, state director of United We Stand America, a citizens-action group Perot founded in 1993.

The group's local chapter hopes to issue report cards on the state's two congressmen and their challengers before the November election. Members will be polled. Their feelings will be available to the public, Goyoni said. Hosting debates also is a possibility.

Perot's stop in Durham will be his only New England appearance during a 10-speech national tour this month. The event is free and open to the public.

When Perot came to Manchester in June 1993, he thanked voters for supporting his 1992

Presidential bid and kicked off membership to United We Stand America.

When he returned to New Hampshire four months later, the North American Free Trade Agreement was his main target.

And when Perot takes the stage at UNH Saturday, he will focus on the need for government and economic reforms to allow future generations to have the chance to live the American dream.

Goyoni said the college campus "locale is significant" since Perot will stress that decisions made today will affect future generations. C-SPAN will cover his speech.

Goyoni said he can't shed any light on speculation Perot may run for President in 1996. "I don't really give any thought to his involvement in Presidential politics," Goyoni said, stressing United We Stand America's non-partisan nature.

Both major political parties would like to attract Perot supporters. In November 1992, Perot captured 121,000 Granite State votes for President.

A week before the 1992 state primary, the New Hampshire Perot for President Committee endorsed candidates running for Congress after Perot supporters graded the candidates on a half-dozen issues. None of those endorsed candidates won office this November.

The New Hampshire group has a "significant membership."

Saturday's event will begin with a segment on POW-MIA issues. Bill Bell, president of the National Veterans Research Council, will speak.

Quayle takes N.H. trip

Makes the rounds of GOP officials in private talks

By John Milne
GLOBE STAFF

NASHUA - Former Vice President Dan Quayle held several private meetings last weekend with Republican officials in New Hampshire, party officials said yesterday.

Quayle, encouraged by the sale of 500,000 copies of his book, "Standing Firm," has begun making speeches to see if he has support to run for president in 1996. His trip to New Hampshire was a quiet effort to touch base with Republicans in the state that holds the nation's first primary.

Marilyn Quayle accompanied her husband, saying in a broadcast appearance that a decision to run would have to be made by January. Former Gov. John H. Sununu, White House chief of staff while Quayle was vice president, also accompanied Quayle. Most of the Republicans they visited had supported George Bush.

"I think he's real smart to come in and start meeting with people one-on-one," said Robert K. Turner, one of the GOP leaders who met Quayle. "The others have all been doing public events."

Quayle has agreed to return Dec. 4 for a series of public meetings hosted by U.S. Sen. Robert Smith, who is running for re-election in 1996. "He told me he was willing to come up, so I guess that means he's considering running," Smith said. "And the groups he will be speaking to are the activists who know the most about grass-roots organizing and fund-raising in the state."

Smith has had other GOP presidential hopefuls at similar sessions. Another senior Republican official who met Quayle said, "It's pretty clear to me that he is planning to run for president." Though Quayle made no commitments, the official said, he compared his qualifications to other potential candidates.

"It makes sense," said Turner, who said he hasn't made up his mind. "He's young, he's bright. Dan Quayle fits the mold of someone who could give Clinton a run for his money."

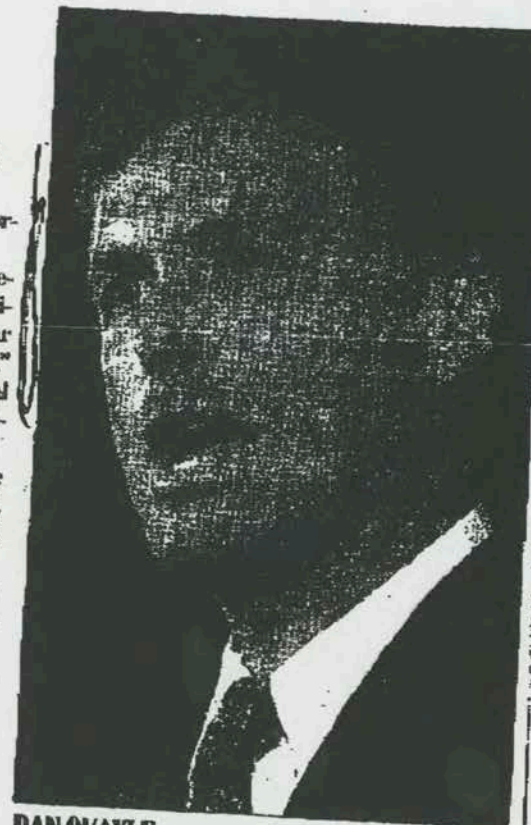

J. Bonnie Newman, a former White House official, said she met the Quayles and, "I think he's truly testing the waters."

Elizabeth M. Tamposi, who served as assistant secretary of state in the Bush administration, agreed.

"In my one-on-one meeting," Tamposi said, "he is articulate on the issues. He is sincere."

Quayle has one opponent. Sen. Judd Gregg, who does not think Quayle has the qualifications for the presidency, said, "I will do everything I can to make sure Dan Quayle is not nominated."

Quayle also left behind some ruffled feathers. At state GOP headquarters in Concord, rumors swirled that Quayle would drop by Monday. Aides cleaned up the office, even moving his photograph to a prominent place on the back wall. He never showed. The Nashua Area Federation of Republican Women, told that Quayles would drop by a dinner meeting Monday, brought out 60 activists, many carrying cameras and copies of the book. The Quayles did not appear.

Take Me to Your Leaders: Sununu Chauffeurs Quayle

Former Vice President, Then Buchanan Make Quiet Visits

By JOHN DISTASO
Union Leader Staff

Times change. Presidential administrations change.

Modes of travel change, but modes of politicking in the state with the first Presidential Primary in the nation stay pretty much the same.

Three years ago, it was Air Force One, Air Force Two and limosine-lined motorcades.

Monday, the mode of travel for former Vice President and possible 1996 Presidential candidate Dan Quayle was John Sununu's green sedan — with Sununu himself behind the wheel.

In a visit that the two men tried to keep from public view, Quayle and the former New Hampshire governor/former White House chief of staff made the political rounds and expected courtesy calls to the state's GOP movers and shakers in advance of a possible Quayle run for the Presidency.

In no particular order, Sununu ushered Quayle into meetings with U.S. Sen. Bob Smith, Gov. Steve Merrill, Manchester Mayor and Republican National Committee member Ray Wiecezorek, Union Leader/New Hampshire Sunday News Publisher Nackey S. Loeb and state Commissioner of Safety Richard Flynn.

Also known to be on the Quayle itinerary were state Division of Motor Vehicles Director Robert Turner and prominent Realtor Karl Norwood.

Quayle and his wife spent the weekend with John and Nancy Sununu in Salem. They departed Monday evening, but Quayle will be back on Dec. 4 to appear at two fundraising events for Smith's expected 1996 re-election effort, according to Smith staff Executive Director Jim Courtovich.

Quayle will also have autographed copies of his book, "Standing Firm," available at that time, Courtovich said.

Sununu and Quayle's private meeting with Mrs. Loeb came 24 hours after the publisher hosted another prospective Presidential candidate.

Conservative columnist Patrick Buchanan, his wife, Shelley, and sister, Bay, had breakfast with her on Sunday.

"The (Presidential Primary campaign) season has begun," she said, while giving no hint as to where her newspaper will end up when it comes to making editorial endorsements in the 1996 Primary race.

Wiecezorek said he and Quayle "discussed some of the problems facing the country. He was interested in what we perceive as problems."

"We talked about things on the front burner everywhere — health care, for instance," Wiecezorek said.

Wiecezorek, who termed Quayle a "pretty sharp guy," said he asked Quayle directly if he will run for President.

"I did not receive an answer," said the mayor. "I assume he is just testing the waters here."

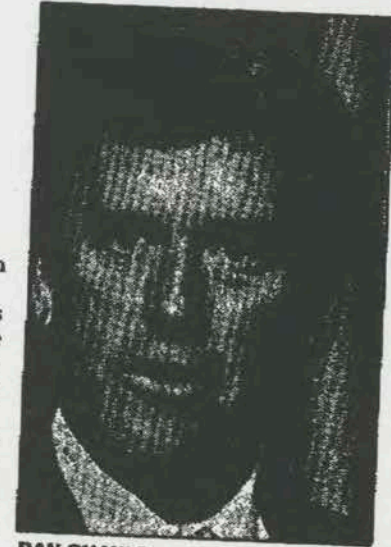

"As a national committeeman, I'm offering him or any other candidate any assistance or information they need."

Sources close to Merrill said there should be no significance attached to the fact he met with Quayle. They noted that Merrill, out of courtesy, has met with every potential Presidential candidate who has come into the state and requested a meeting with him.

Senate Republican Leader Robert Dole is scheduled to be the featured speaker at the Republican State Convention Sunday afternoon in Manchester.

Dole will also appear at fundraisers for U.S. Rep. Bill Zeliff on the Mount Washington tour boat on Lake Winnepesaukee and for 2nd Congressional District Republican candidate Charles Bass in Concord.

Meanwhile, 1992 independent Presidential candidate H. Ross Perot is scheduled to speak at the University of New Hampshire in Durham on Saturday, while, on Monday, Sept. 26, another possible Presidential contender, U.S. Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., is the scheduled featured speaker at a breakfast fundraiser in Bedford for the Conservative Political Victory Fund.

Democratic Senate Hopefuls Divided Over King Tax Plan

By DONN TIBBETTS
State House Bureau Chief

CONCORD — Eight Democratic Senate candidates, including six incumbents, yesterday said that rather than just talk about taxes like their Republican counterparts, they have been actively getting major legislation passed for the benefit of the entire state.

But when it came down to whether they were backing the statewide property tax plan of Sen. Wayne King, the party's gubernatorial nominee, only one — Sen. Peter Burling of Cornish — was definitely voting for it, one was voting against — Sen. Beverly Hollingworth of Hampton — one was likely to vote for it — Greg Hanselman of New Ipswich — and the others qualified their positions.

Wednesday, all 23 Republican Senate candidates, including 10 incumbents, pledged they would vote against a statewide property tax which King contends will equalize tax rates for basic education and provide a $690 local property tax break for an average household.

The Senate Democrats were unified in faulting Republican Gov. Steve Merrill for not presenting a specific plan of his own to deal with lowering local property taxes.

"I'm prepared to tell you right now unequivocally that I support the program to equalize property taxation through distribution over a statewide basis," said Burling.

"I vigorously oppose his (King's) statewide property tax. My district comes first and that tax would be very detrimental to my district," said Hollingworth.

"I'm not completely opposed to it," said Hanselman. "If there's a flaw, it's that it still funds education on property tax. I might vote for it if I saw it in its final form," he said. Then he added, "I'll support anything that provides tax relief."

"I've been consistent," said Sen. Burton Cohen of New Castle. "I would oppose any new broad-based tax unless there is a constitutional amendment guaranteeing that most of the money would go back to the cities and towns to reduce property taxes and help pay for education. I have yet to see a plan that I can buy fully," he said.

Sen. Jeanne Shaheen of Madbury said that a statewide property tax "deserves further consideration," but she insisted any plan that comes forward must be "equitable in reducing property taxes."

Sen. Barbara Baldizar of Nashua echoed the comments of Cohen and Shaheen. "It would have to appeal to a majority of the people, have to equalize property taxes statewide, and have the protection of a constitutional amendment. I have some concern about long-term property values, but for right now I think we need further study," said Baldizar.

"I'm not saying yes, I'm not saying no, I'm saying we'll see. I don't have all the facts on it. There will be a public hearing and we'll learn more about it," said Sen. Debora Pignatelli of Nashua.

Sen. Carole Lamirande of Berlin said she does not consider King's statewide property tax a new tax. "It has a lot of merit and a lot of good points. I see this as a reform. It's very workable. I hope to look at it in more depth so I can give you a more definite answer but I like what I see. I'm inclined to support it if it will take the place of the tax we have right now," she said.

Senator Clesson Blaisdell of Keene and John King of Manchester did not attend yesterday's news conference.

Perot Assails Clinton's 'Haiti Fiasco,' Predicts It Will Backfire in Elections

By JOHN DISTASO
Union Leader Staff

H. Ross Perot yesterday accused President Clinton of getting tough on Haiti primarily for political reasons, and he predicted the move will come back to haunt Clinton and the Democratic Party in the mid-term elections this November.

While refusing to hint at his own future political plans, Perot, who will deliver a speech at the University of New Hampshire tomorrow, said he senses a stronger anti-incumbency mood among the electorate than there was even in 1992.

He said he has "a feeling it is really being magnified by this Haiti fiasco."

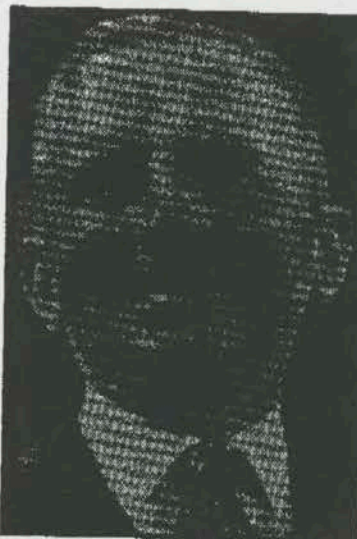

"When you put our fighting forces' lives at risk for any reason other than very important national interests, if it was to get a block of votes for the crime bill, if it was to be a bump in the polls before November, I guarantee you, you won't get a bump in the polls," Perot said in a telephone news conference.

Perot said that tomorrow, he will encourage Granite Staters to get involved in the political process, and, if nothing else, to vote.

It bothered Perot to learn that New Hampshire voters stayed away from the polls in droves during the recent primary elections.

As an independent candidate for President in 1992, Perot drew 17 percent of the vote nationally and 23 percent of the vote in New Hampshire.

"You can't have apathy in New Hampshire," he said. "I'll be hitting that one hard when I get up there. The owners (of the country) can't abdicate their responsibility. If they do, we're in trouble."

Clinton "went from waffling to John Wayne right as he was getting his crime bill passed." He said he "can't think of a worse reason" to put American troops in harm's way.

"The good news is we were able to get into Haiti without the loss of life," Perot said. "But the real issue is why we are in Haiti, anyhow. Aristide is portrayed as the second coming of St. Peter. But you know Aristide's background of brutality. I can't imagine one member of our fighting forces breaking a fingernail to put that man back in power."

"You couldn't get me to say" what it will take for him to decide whether he will run for President again in 1996, he said.

He said he and his United We Stand, America grassroots organization are focused on 1994 and on trying to get "both parties to be sensitive to the people and not the special interests." Perot said he believes his organization's members provided the "swing vote" which ousted incumbents in congressional and gubernatorial elections in Oklahoma, Georgia, Texas, New Jersey and Arkansas.

"I have no personal goals,"

Perot insisted. "Never had any."

"All these people (in United We Stand America) can make a difference. The focus is on the issues."

Perot said his organization has "a significant number of people who want to form a third party, but that is not our purpose."

Perot said he had no vendetta against the Clinton administration, but said, "I don't care what anybody thinks about what I say. I think the office of President is one all of the American people revere and respect. Whoever is in the office has to earn our respect by his actions every single day."

"That's (President Clinton's) basic problem now," Perot said. "You can go back through the list of broken promises."

Perot said Clinton reneged on promises made to gain support for the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

Poll: Property Tax Reform Plan Remains a Tough Sell to Voters

CONCORD (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wayne King has a hard fight convincing voters property tax reform will help them, according to a University of New Hampshire Survey Center poll.

By nearly 3-1 — 44 percent to 15 percent — voters believe a property tax reform plan will increase their property taxes.

King says his statewide property tax plan would lower taxes for most homeowners.

The poll is based on 577 responses and has a margin of error of 4.1 percent.

The poll showed most New Hampshire voters know little about proposals to change how the state pays for public education. Those who know about proposals prefer the limited approach of Republican Gov. Steve Merrill, the poll says.

The poll sought to determine how many voters have been following the debate over education financing that has marked the race for governor.

UNH Survey Center Director Kelly Myers said most voters want property tax reform but few support a particular plan.

The "Voters' Voice Project" poll was conducted for The Telegraph of Nashua, The Portsmouth Herald, New Hampshire Public Radio, New Hampshire Public Television and WGOT-TV.

The survey found 53 percent knew nothing or very little about the proposals of King and Merrill. Only 18 percent said they knew "a great deal" about those efforts.

But 53 percent said they would support changing the way education is financed, while only 8 percent opposed the idea.

Among those who had heard about the plans and had an opinion, 12 percent supported King's tax. That tax would replace local property tax money raised to pay for state requirements for public schools.

King claims that would lower property taxes for residents in 93 percent of cities and towns.

About 34 percent favored Merrill's pledge to redistribute $47 million in state aid to education to give more money to poor school districts and less to richer ones.

But Democratic Party Chairman Joe Keefe suggested the poll was skewed against King's plan and in favor of Merrill's.

For example, the question identified King's "plan for a state property tax" and Merrill's "plan for reallocating current state funds."

"It was put in the most favorable light to the governor and the worst light for Wayne King."

Keefe said he's not surprised there's little recognition about the plans. Republican gubernatorial candidate Fred Bramante was the only one discussing a state property tax through the summer, he said, and Bramante spent little money and got less than 10 percent of the GOP vote.

"This is just getting on the radar screen for many voters," Keefe said.

But Republican strategist Tom Rath said King's plan is dead.

"The governor has already succeeded in defining the issue better than King has," Rath said.

Other findings in the survey, conducted last week:

- Party differences: Support for education funding reform is not partisan as Republicans, 48 percent, were only slightly less likely to support changes than Democrats and independents, both 59 percent.

- Party support: Democrats favor King's plan over Merrill's 24 percent to 20 percent, while Republicans back Merrill's 41 percent to 7 percent. Large numbers of Republicans and Democrats, 46 percent and 47 percent respectively, say they are unsure about either one.

- Optimism about changes: Among those who think their taxes will go up, 49 percent support changing the system.

The poll did not specifically seek opinions on the property tax rebate proposal of Libertarian gubernatorial candidate Steve Winter.

Winter's proposal would give cities and towns authority to give a home owner a 50 percent rebate for sending a child to a non-public school and saving the local taxpayer that cost of education.

CHARLIE BASS
Runs like an underdog

Bass Says NH Wants A Change

By DONN TIBBETTS
State House Bureau Chief

CONCORD — Despite polls showing him in a close race with Democrat two-term U.S. Rep. Dick Swett in the second District, Republican candidate Charlie Bass said yesterday, "I'm running like a 20-point underdog."

"But I do think these poll numbers indicate that people are ready for change," asserted Bass.

Bass accused Swett of "flip-flopping on U.S. involvement in Haiti."

Bass asserted that in January 1991, in the debate over whether President Bush should seek congressional approval before launching Desert Storm, Swett declared that the "Constitution clearly gives Congress and only Congress the authority to decide on whether our country goes to war."

"But flip-flop Congressman Swett of 1994 has changed his tune and it comes as no surprise. Congressman Swett of 1994 didn't feel it was necessary for his boss, President Bill Clinton, to seek congressional approval to invade Haiti," Bass told reporters at a news conference.

"Congressman Swett of 1994 did nothing and American lives are now at stake because President Clinton has weaved a web of confusion in Haiti and it's bad policy. What kind of President calls a military regime a pack of thugs, murderers and rapists and then cuts a deal with those thugs, murderers and rapists which allows them to stay in power until the middle of October," asserted Bass.

Bass cited the objections of U.S. Senators Bob Smith and Judd Gregg and U.S. Rep. Bill Zeff prior to Clinton's national speech on the Haitian crisis.

"If we wanted to say that, we would have said that," said Tilley. "That was not the point. The point is that Dick has the courage to stand up and say what needs to be said."

But some Newbury residents say Swett is exploiting the tragedy for his own ends.

While two town selectmen, including Scott Wheeler and Jim Therrien, Police Chief James Valiquet and the families most affected say they'll never forget that day, they don't want to see it used to further Swett's campaign. And they said when they asked Swett on Friday to pull the ads, he refused.

At that point, they wrote a letter asking New Hampshire residents to vote against Swett.

"(The ads) bring up a very sad, emotional and dark time for the citizens of our town," reads the letter the group sent to every major news outlet in New Hampshire. "Now our tragedy is being exploited inaccurately for votes. We wouldn't expect any candidate for office to stoop so low, much less a Congressman of the United States of America."

Despite the fact that Valiquet, Wheeler and Therrien stressed that they were not criticizing Hockmeyer, she has taken their effort to be an affront.

"How can they not be mad at me?" asked Hockmeyer. "I went to Dick Swett."

"If they cared about me, they would have called and said 'we're concerned about this,'" Hockmeyer told the Valley News of West Lebanon. "They haven't called me since I walked out (of the job) in January."

Meanwhile other victims' families are outraged.

Wayne Swanson, whose wife was killed in the shootings, said Swett should stop the ads.

"When I saw that ad, it just did me in . . . it brings it all up again, and my daughters and I are trying to move along," Swanson said yesterday. "It's in poor taste, and it's for political gain."

Swanson said he was particularly outraged by the commercial, which cuts to an exterior shot of the Newbury Town Hall.

Therrien said many town residents have asked him to do something about the ads. A petition to Swett begun yesterday already has a hundred signatures, he said.

"But maybe he's written off a lousy few hundred voters in the town of Newbury and said: 'Who cares about their emotions? I've got bigger fish to fry,' said Therrien.

Swett's campaign showed no signs yesterday of pulling the ad, instead releasing a joint statement with Hockmeyer.

Swett's statement pointed to the epidemic proportions of violent crime nationwide.

"While I feel deeply for everyone in the town and the tragedy they have endured, I feel it would be a crime in itself to sweep this event under the rug," Swett said.

"Now I know why God spared me — to fight this type of ignorance. I am ready to stand up and fight for what I believe in, and I will not allow the Town Selectmen to bully me," she said in the statement.

But Chief Valiquet said yesterday that it's the method, not the message, that's got people in his town angry.

"Gun control is for the powers that be to decide," he said. "But I don't know that we have to exploit the residents of Newbury to drive that point home. People here are still trying to mend."

Swanson said that he absolutely believes in gun control.

"But why can't the issue stand on its own?" he asked. "We need the gun control, but there's no need at all to have to use this tragedy."

Town calls Swett's ads exploitative

He quotes shooting victim

By JO BECKER
Monitor staff

NEWBURY - A group of angry town officials and the families of those killed in last year's Newbury Town Hall shooting yesterday accused Congressman Dick Swett of exploiting the tragedy for political gain.

In television and newspaper ads that began running this month, the sole survivor of the shooting, Carole Hockmeyer, is featured supporting Swett's controversial vote in the House to ban assault weapons.

"I think Dick Swett's vote to ban semiautomatic weapons took courage. Even though I'm a Republican, Dick Swett has my vote, because he did the right thing," Hockmeyer says in the ad.

In a statement yesterday Swett defended the ad, saying that if anyone had a right to speak out, it was Hockmeyer.

But Hollis Webster, whose wife was killed in the shootings, disagreed.

"Carole Hockmeyer will say she's allowed to say what she believes in," he said. "Well, the question is, at what cost? Now the wounds are open again It's bad enough that I come home to an empty house. I don't need to be reminded on television."

Hockmeyer was shot five times but survived the double-murder suicide at Newbury Town Hall last November. But Webster's wife, Sue, the town secretary, and receptionist Meribeth Swanson, were killed when John Albro, a resident enraged over property taxes, opened fire with a .45-caliber semiautomatic submachine gun and a .22-caliber pistol. Albro then turned a gun on himself.

In May, Swett switched his position and voted for the assault weapons ban, providing the winning margin as the measure passed 216-214. The vote angered many gun advocates.

Swett's spokeswoman, Shireen Tilley, said the ad was not suggesting Albro's weapons would have been banned under the measure.

Democrats bash Merrill, Republicans

Senators blame GOP for stealing their ideas

By M.L. ELRICK
Monitor staff

Senate Democratic candidates yesterday criticized their Republican counterparts and Gov. Steve Merrill for unanimously condemning the statewide property tax but failing to do anything to reduce property taxes.

One day after Merrill and the GOP's 23 Senate candidates signed a pledge against the statewide property tax, Madbury Democratic Sen. Jeanne Shaheen led seven Democrats and one independent charging that Merrill was a do-nothing governor who took credit for their good ideas.

"Without the Democrats in the Senate there would have been no pro-active agenda in the last two years," she said.

Shaheen said it was Democrats who insisted on sending $10 million to towns and cities instead of adding to the rainy day fund in the 1993 budget, who wanted to give towns and cities a larger portion of the rooms and meals tax and who saved the state $1 million by scrutinizing Merrill's plan to accept the Union Leader's former building and convert it into a Manchester courthouse "to repay his political debts."

She said Democrats also led reform efforts on workers compensation, health care and domestic violence laws "that Steve Merrill has been taking credit for."

Three of the five bills in the governor's health care reform plan were sponsored by Democrats. The fourth was sponsored by Concord Sen. Susan McLane, a Republican who often sided with Democrats and helped craft the 11 Democrat-two Republican coalition that dominated the Senate.

Merrill campaign manager Steve Edwards said the five health care reform bills that passed last session were "the governor's plan which both Republicans and Democrats supported."

Democrats, like New Castle Sen. Burt Cohen, also slammed Merrill for not coming up with a plan to reduce property taxes.

Cohen called Merrill "Johnny One Note ... playing 'tax and spend' over and over again" and criticized Republicans for saying "no new taxes," but offering no plan to reduce property taxes.

Edwards fought back, noting that Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wayne King was not present at yesterday's press conference.

"Their support of Wayne King's campaign is hurting their own personal campaigns and they're going to now try and distance themselves from him," Edwards said, adding that King's statewide property tax proposal would be dead on arrival in the Legislature because only one of the Democratic candidates publicly committed to it yesterday.

Of the eight candidates, only Hampton Democratic Sen. Beverly Hollingworth said she was opposed to the plan. Five of the Democrats said the plan had merit but they wanted to see a final version of it before committing to vote for it. Independent candidate Greg Hanselman of New Ipswich said he liked the plan.

Edwards, however, said "the majority of the Democrats present refused to support the tax plan. So the King plan no longer has legs to stand on."

Both Shaheen and King refuted Edwards's assertions that Democrats were running from King.

"Steve Merrill and the Republican Senate candidates have taken a pledge to do nothing in the next two years about property taxes that are destroying families (or) about the quality of education that is undermining our economy," King said. "The Democrats are united behind the principles of this (statewide property tax) plan."

Shaheen said King was not intentionally excluded.

"We were trying to respond (to the Republicans) as quickly as possible," she said.

She and King said Senate Democrats and the King campaign were trying to work out joint appearances and events in the near future.

Bass blasts Swett on Haiti stance

Challenger says
incumbent was weak

By M.L. ELRICK
Monitor staff

Congressman Dick Swett's opposition to military involvement in Haiti isn't enough for Republican challenger Charlie Bass, who yesterday criticized Swett for not unequivocally opposing it before President Clinton's televised address last week.

Bass has opposed U.S. military involvement in Haiti throughout the summer and supports requiring congressional approval before any military action is taken. He said America has no strategic or economic interest in Haiti and that restoring deposed Haitian President Aristide was "not worth spilling one drop of American blood."

Swett last week said he also opposed military involvement in Haiti but wanted to hear what Clinton would say during a nationally televised address before making a final decision. Swett said after the address that he continued to oppose military involvement.

But Bass yesterday called a press conference in the Legislative Office Building to hammer Swett for not definitively opposing involvement in Haiti all along.

"(Swett) said he was opposed, but here's what Congressman Swett had to say in a televised report on the eve of Bill Clinton's speech," Bass said, quoting Swett as saying: "At this time I'm opposed, but I certainly need to hear what the president has to say and, as things progress, I'm going to get back to you with any changes."

"Once again, when three-fourths of New Hampshire's congressional delegation was standing firmly against an ill-conceived Clinton administration policy, Congressman Swett was waiting to receive his marching orders from Bill Clinton," Bass said.

The Swett camp responded to Bass's charges by calling them "a transparent attempt to turn the situation in Haiti into nothing more than a political sideshow."

"The only person who seems disheartened by the accord negotiated by Colin Powell, Jimmy Carter and the Haitian dictators is Charlie Bass," said Swett campaign manager Bob Quinn. "Apparently he sees his political aspirations diminished by the prospects for peace in Haiti."

Democrats change plans

WASHINGTON — Congressional Democrats, headed for a scary election season, took up the protective banner of reform yesterday with a push to change campaign financing and restrict gifts from lobbyists.

The Senate voted 96-2 to go ahead with debate on the campaign finance bill, embroiling the chamber in a talkfest that Republicans pledged to carry on for at least 30 hours. Majority Leader George Mitchell, a Maine Democrat, threatened to keep the Senate in session all night to burn up the clock.

The immediate issue was whether the House and Senate should work out a compromise bill that would provide for voluntary limits on overall campaign spending in exchange for federal matching funds for candidates who comply, and would limit special-interest money flowing into campaigns — a puzzle that has eluded solution for 12 years.

Sen. Mitch McConnell, A Republican from Kentucky, said he hoped to kill the bill and at the same time beat up Democrats over the measure's public financing provisions: "Taxpayer financing of elections is a disaster, and it's terrific for us politically."

Zeliff's A-Z Plan

September 22, 1994

MEMORANDUM TO THE REPUBLICAN LEADER

FROM: David Taylor Daniel

SUBJECT: UPDATE -- Rep. Zeliff's A-to-Z Plan

The A-to-Z Plan, H.Res. 407, establishes a procedure for House consideration of amendments to cut spending to reduce the deficit. the bill is a blank slate that contains a mechanism to lock in all savings from these amendments for deficit reduction by reducing the discretionary spending caps and keeping any entitlement savings off the pay-as-you-go scorecard.

The underlying bill, H.R. 3266, has 231 cosponsors: 56 Democrats and 175 Republicans.

The big push to move this issue came on the discharge petition. Zeliff ended up with 204 signatures: 167 Republicans and 37 Democrats (he needed 218 signatures). Gephardt was able to convince conservative Democrats not to sign the discharge petition by promising them House floor votes on several budget reform issues. They never got their votes.

Zeliff plans to re-introduce the A-to-Z Plan next year.

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS

- I DISAGREE WITH THOSE WHO SAY WE SIMPLY DECLARE VICTORY ON THE DEFICIT. THAT IS WHY EARLIER THIS YEAR I SUPPORTED THE REPUBLICAN ALTERNATIVE TO THE PRESIDENT'S BUDGET. OUR PLAN WOULD HAVE REDUCED NON-DEFENSE SPENDING TO CUT THE PRESIDENT'S PROJECTED 1999 DEFICIT IN HALF.
- IT'S IMPORTANT THAT WE TAKE THE ADDED STEP OF LOCKING IN ANY SAVINGS FROM THESE CUTS FOR DEFICIT REDUCTION. THAT IS SOMETHING THAT BILL ZELIFF'S A-TO-Z PLAN AND THE 50-POINT $50 BILLION SPENDING CUT PLAN I INTRODUCED EARLIER THIS YEAR HAVE IN COMMON.
- IN FACT, I HOPE THAT NEXT YEAR, WHEN BILL ZELIFF GETS THE 218 SIGNATURES HE NEEDS TO GET HIS A-TO-Z PLAN TO THE FLOOR, HE WILL LOOK AT MY SPENDING CUT PLAN (s. 1843) FOR IDEAS FOR POTENTIAL SPENDING CUT AMENDMENTS.

Swett Avoids the Issues, Resorts to Name-Calling 90 Days to the Election; showing signs of breaking under the stress

Dick Swett and his cronies can't seem to address the issues, and instead have resorted to lies and distortions about his detractors.

First, Joe Keefe on WMUR's "Close Up New Hampshire" political show, referred to those who have been attending Swett's public meetings as "goons." He alleged that the behavior of some people attending Swett's public meetings is inappropriate, and tried to link these people to gun owners. This is a gross exaggeration, something Keefe is used to making. The issues which angered his constituents were conveniently glossed over.

During the same weekends that Joe Keefe was beating his chest, Swett ran a campaign ad, a re-run of an ad he ran two years ago. In the ad, he said that some people are saying nasty things about him, and they are wrong. Again, no issues were raised.

Second, Swett sent out a fund raising plea, calling his detractors "booing, jeering, fanatics." Of course, he failed to mention that he was only booed once at his re-election announcement. He also failed to mention that he agreed with these people prior to his May 5th vote, before he flip-flopped. No issues were brought up, just the whining, sympathy generating tone and a smear of his constituents.

Next, Swett called the Republican Primary contest "pathetic" and sniveled about a "10 ring circus." He complained that they weren't attacking each other, only him. A hearty round of laughter arose from the Union Leader building, allegedly heard several towns away.

The most recent taunt came from a letter from Swett's campaign addressed to "Republicans and Independents for Swett." This little ditty called those who favor Second Amendment rights "extremists". Remember, he agreed with those "extremists" only a few weeks ago.

Some interesting points about the signers of the letter:

1. Harry Hadaway, husband of Jill Hadaway, close friend and campaign worker for Swett,
2. Bill Grenert, husband of Beverly Grenert, Dept of Education employee demoted for disseminating anti-Christian, pro-abortion & pro-homosexual materials (instead of abstinence-based materials) to school districts.

Many issues were brought up at Swett's public meetings that had nothing to do with guns, yet Swett tries to paint all his detractors with that brush. People have closely questioned Swett about taxes, spending, entitlements, health care, GATT, and foreign aid, yet because they disagree with the Congressman, they are now labeled "extremists." In High School Debate, we learned that when the opponent's attacks turned personal, they had run out of substance. The same seems to be true about Congressmen.

Swett "Congressional Accountability Act" is a Sham Toothless bill faced little opposition

If Congressman Dick Swett were really interested in making Congress accountable to the same laws as you and me, he would have voted for it when he had the chance. But he didn't, and that makes his "Swett-Shays Congressional Accountability Act" inherently suspect.

Swett has had several opportunities to show he believed in making Congress accountable. First, there was the bill reauthorizing the Independent Council Act. An amendment was proposed which would have made Congress accountable under the law (i.e. Independent Council's could have been appointed to investigate scandals in Congress). Did Swett vote to make Congress accountable to this law? NO. Swett also had the chance to make Congress accountable to the Family and Medical Leave Act. Did Swett cast his vote for Congressional accountability? NO. (Vote 21, 2/3/93)

Close inspection of Swett's bill reveals that it is essentially toothless, which is why the House Democrat leadership is allowing it to proceed through the House.

Does Swett's bill make Congress accountable to federal agencies like OSHA, EPA, etc.? No, it establishes a new office in Congress (as if the legislative budget isn't bloated enough) staffed with people appointed by the leadership. Can you pick your own jury? No, but Congress can under Swett's bill, and what do you think the chances are someone will be fined? Practically nil. Does Swett's bill make Congressmen pay fines? No, the fines are paid for out of a fund established by appropriation, i.e. taxpayer money. Can you get your neighbor or co-worker to pay your fines for you? No, but Congress can.

Does Swett's bill bring Congress under the domain of the Freedom of Information Act? It did, until Swett compromised that part out.

Don't be fooled by the Swett Accountability Act - it is a first class sham.

First Lady Heckled During Speech in Seattle

7/23/94 - Newsday reports that Hillary Rodham Clinton faced a sea of loud, jeering protesters in Seattle as she defiantly persisted in her call for health-care coverage for all Americans.

"When you stop all of the arguing and the debating back and forth, what's really at stake is, will every American who works hard and plays by the rules be able to be secure that he or she will have health care when it is needed?" Clinton shouted over chants of "Go home, Hillary" and whistles blowing.

Hmm. Did she "play by the rules" when she was investing in cattle futures?

Clinton was also met in Boston on Sunday, July 31 by Americans angered by the potential destruction of 1/7th of the economy. Clinton was met by broom-wielding protesters ("So she has transportation back to Arkansas."). An aide to Senator Ted Kennedy pushed one protester, grabbed her sign, and tore it up.

Bill Clinton was in Independence, Missouri the same weekend. What was described as a public meeting was filled early by bused in supporters, then roped off so no one else could get in. Two dump trucks were positioned so that no protesters could be seen by the President, and in a shocking display of arrogance against the First Amendment, police grabbed any anti-Clinton Health Care sign and tossed them into the dump trucks.

This is the party of Dick Swett and Bill Clinton. Intolerance. Arrogant. And they want you to re-elect them.

The Health Care Reform "Task Force" - Did They or Didn't They?

"The White House yesterday abandoned its 18-month effort to hide membership of its health care reform task force, acknowledging that the panel was largely made up of representatives of pro-reform special interests. But the White House's lawyers suggested that the task force, chaired by first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, had no influence on the content of President Clinton's health care bill."

Washington Times, 7/27/94

"The goal of the inter-agency task force is to prepare comprehensive health care reform legislation in the next 100 days." -- White House health care adviser Ira Magaziner in a staff memo submitted to the court on 5/4/94

Swett Supports Democrat Cover-ups

It is definitely interesting to see Dick Swett call the Clinton Administration handling of the Whitewatergate hearings an example of the "new openness" in the conduct of government.

Contrast that with Swett's vote to cover-up the House Post Office Scandal, and with his leadership's exclusion of 98% of the Whitewatergate issues from the hearings.

Government Controlled Health Care vs. Freedom

Freedom gets the short end

Thomas Sowell recently observed: "Of all the questions raised in discussions of the various health care bills in Congress, the most important question is seldom mentioned: Freedom."

"Even the so-called 'moderate' Republican bills use the word 'require' dozens of times and the Clinton bill uses it 901 times, according to a count by the National Taxpayers Union. Terms like 'ban,' 'enforce,' 'penalty,' 'prison,' 'fine,' etc., occur nearly 1,500 times in the Clinton bill, which contains 85 new civil and criminal penalties."

As you can see, Government is not about "asking" people to do things, as the Clintons claim they are doing. Government is about force, by the point of a gun if necessary.

Sowell continues: "The idea that doctors, patients, insurance companies and pharmaceutical manufacturers will all get their marching orders from Washington is so staggering that the many details of the various health care plans which the media and the politicians are wrangling about seem almost irrelevant."

And that, is the primary issue. Are there problems with our health care system? Sure, noone denies this. But practically all of the problems can be addressed by some simple carpentry, yet our elected officials insist on using a 12 pound sledge hammer.

This is the most troubling aspect of all. Dick Swett claims to represent New Hampshire, the "Live Free or Die" state. It seems that under the Clinton-Swett health care plan, or any of the Democrat alternatives, our motto may as well be reduced to "Live, or Die." With the government controlling health care, the choice will be further reduced to "Die." Given these bonds of slavery, I would prefer to die fighting for my freedom. Let's stop it before it gets that far.

NH Citizens Against Corruption is a grass-roots organization that sprang up to protest what we saw as gross deception on the part of Dick Swett. Many people are cynical of our government functions because an anointed few have engorged themselves at the public trough, or through other corrupt practices, maintained power over the people of the United States and New Hampshire. We oppose corruption in public office wherever it may be.

The "Crime/Stimulus" Bill: Swett Votes the Shirt Off Your Back, and Sends it to California!

House votes down the rule, Swett on short end.

Dick Swett voted for the procedural "rule" that would have brought the "Crime/Stimulus" Bill to the floor of the House of Representatives.

Of all the bills that have been through Congress this year, this bill looks like the ultimate of pork. These programs would have been funded by the so-called "crime trust fund," which contains approximately $30 billion over six years purportedly funded by federal employment reductions. The basic funding plan breaks down as follows:

Assistance for state & local law enforcement: $10.6 Billion; Federal law enforcement $2.5 Billion; Prisons $8.3 Billion ($1.8 Billion of which goes only to illegal alien incarceration); Social spending/"prevention" $9.1 Billion.

The Total Funding from Trust Fund: $30.5 Billion (Not including $2.2 billion of non-trust fund money)

One of President Clinton's favorite lines about the "crime/stimulus" bill is the alleged 100,000 new police officers on the street. But this bill has many problems with that funding

1. There is an assumption that states will apply for the grants. The conference report puts so many conditions on receiving these funds that many state officials have already said that they aren't going to apply because the program would cost them money.
2. The funding for police is gradually phased out over the five-year funding period so that the states eventually assume the full costs of the officers. When the funding runs out, local governments will be strapped with the salaries and pensions of these officers.
3. Grant applicants also have to comply with expensive and intrusive minority hiring preferences, and social worker/police coordination programs.

As Mayor James Sharpe of Newark, NJ, says, "The crime bill says we'll give you 100,000 police officers. If they were to remove the burden of unfunded federal mandates, they wouldn't have to give us police officers. We could hire our own." (National Journal March 26, 1994)

What's this? Dick Swett, self-proclaimed fiscal conservative, voting to impose more Unfunded Federal Mandates?!?!? Taxpayers: Beware of Democrat Congressmen bearing grants!!

The conference report contains an unconstitutional ban on the manufacture of 19 named so-called "assault weapons," weapons with specific features, so-called copycat models, and ammunition clips of more than ten rounds. Usually, this is mentioned in the mainstream press as "only 19." The problem is that it is not "only 19." Letters between Congressmen and the BATF reveal that the true number of banned firearms is close to 300 (140 Congressional Record, S-4939-05).

But the big news, as yet widely unreported by the media, is the new social spending in the name of "crime prevention." As the Republican National Committee as noted, the Crime Bill is essentially Clinton's defeated "Stimulus" package from last year. Now that polls show that people are more concerned about crime than jobs, the federal funds have been re-labeled "crime prevention." But the bottom line is that the crime bill will channel $9 billion in federal funds to various state and local interests through a labyrinth of new federal programs

The ugly truth of this so-called "Crime Bill" is that it beefs up social spending at the expense of real crime control (more prisons and police). The other unacceptable theme is the massive federal involvement in what are local matters. Dick Swett supported this so-called "Crime Bill" and he should be held accountable for selling out New Hampshire in the process.

Breakdown of the Social Spending in the so-called "Crime" Bill, and Paid for by YOU:

(That's almost $9.1 Billion tax dollars, coming back with huge strings attached!!)

One analysis of the crime bill came to the conclusion that there is 100% funding for between 3 and 4 social workers for every police officer funded (at 20%). Does that tell you where Clinton and Swett feel the priorities must be?

Swett says "NO" to Term Limits on Committee Chairmen

Keeping his Democrat friends in power

On January 5, 1993, Bob Michel (R-Ill) presented a motion to the House, which would have instructed the House Rules Committee to place a 6 year term limit on Members of Congress serving as a committee chairman or as a ranking member. Did Dick Swett favor this term limit measure?

No, of course not. Then he would have had to buck those who control his purse strings.

The motion also instructed the Rules Committee to remove the rule allowing delegates from the territories to vote in the Committee of the Whole House. Did Dick Swett support the one-man, one-vote concept ensconced in the Constitution? No. He voted for a large Democrat power grab. So much for representing the interests of New Hampshire. (Vote 6, 2/5/1993)

Swett Wants YOU to pay for his Campaign!!

"Out of the Mainstream, Out of Touch"

On April 9, 1992, Dick Swett voted for public financing of congressional campaigns, not just once, but 3 times!! (Votes 77, 78, 79, 4/9/1992)

Do you really want your tax dollars to go towards promoting beliefs that you don't hold? Whether you are Democrat, Republican, Independent, or Libertarian, you should be shocked at this brazen grab for the federal Treasury.

In a time when we are running deficits and making our children and grandchildren pay for the folly of foolish spendthrifts in Washington, does Swett really represent the average voter when he votes like this?

I think not.

MEMORANDUM TO THE REPUBLICAN LEADER

FROM: David Taylor David

SUBJECT: S. 993, Kempthorne/Glenn Federal Mandate Accountability and Reform Act -- UPDATE

Kempthorne is looking for an opportunity to get a vote on S. 993 which was unanimously approved by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee. One option would be to propound a unanimous consent request to take this up and have Mitchell object. Another would be to offer the bill to an appropriations conference report that has amendments in disagreement. The House will not take up this measure unless it passes the Senate.

A one-page summary of the bill and a list of endorsements are attached.

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS

- FOR YEARS, THE DEMOCRAT-CONTROLLED CONGRESS HAS ATTEMPTED TO HIDE THE TRUE COST OF THEIR EFFORTS TO EXPAND THE REACH OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.
- THEY DO IT BY PASSING LAWS THAT WREAK HAVOC ON STATE AND LOCAL BUDGETS BY GIVING THEM NEW RESPONSIBILITIES BUT LITTLE IF ANY OF THE MONEY THEY NEED TO COMPLY. THE PRESIDENT TRIED TO DO THE SAME THING ON HEALTH CARE BY IMPOSING A "MANDATE" ON EMPLOYERS.
- THE PRACTICE OF UNFUNDED MANDATES MUST BE STOPPED.
- DESPITE 63 SENATE COSPONSORS (INCLUDING BOB SMITH AND JUDD GREGG), UNANIMOUS APPROVAL IN COMMITTEE, ENDORSEMENTS BY PRESIDENT CLINTON, THE BIPARTISAN NATIONAL GOVERNORS ASSOCIATION, THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COUNTIES, AND THE NATIONAL LEAGUE OF CITIES, THE DEMOCRAT LEADERSHIP IN CONGRESS HAS BLOCKED EFFORTS TO BRING THIS ISSUE TO A VOTE.
- IF I BECOME MAJORITY LEADER, WE WILL WORK TO PUT AN END TO THE PRACTICE OF UNFUNDED FEDERAL MANDATES.

S.993, Kempthorne/Glenn Federal Mandate Accountability and Reform Act

This legislation has been unanimously approved by the Senate Government Affairs Committee. Currently, states and local governments can have unfunded mandates imposed against them without ever knowing the cost of the mandate and without a roll call vote by the Senate on the mandate's imposition. S.993 reforms this by providing unprecedented protection from unfunded mandates for state and local governments, including the following:

1. Legislation imposing mandates greater than $50 million in any fiscal year on state and local governments can be considered by the Senate only if it:
 - Contains a Congressional Budget Office identification, description and estimate of the cost of any mandate in the bill on state or local governments.
 - Authorizes funds in the bill to fully pay for the cost of mandate.
 - Identifies the funds in the bill to be used to pay for the mandate.
2. The Congressional Budget Office must consult with state and local elected officials to determine the cost of mandates on state and local governments. Federal agencies must also consult in writing federal regulations that affect state and local governments.
3. Legislation that does not meet these requirements will be blocked from Senate consideration by a point of order.
4. This point-of-order can only be overridden in the Senate by an on-the-record roll call majority vote. The Senator who wants to impose the mandate must go to the Senate floor to argue that the unfunded mandate is more important than its cost to state and local governments.
5. The authorizing bill must include payment from the Federal Government of any mandate over $50 million dollars in any fiscal year. The entire amount of the mandate for the life of the bill must be included (not just the amounts over $50 million).
6. The bill provides for new CBO analysis of private sector mandates over $200 million.

This bill has been enthusiastically endorsed by: * U.S. Conference of Mayors * National Assn. of Counties * National League of Cities * National Governors Assn. * National Conference of State Legislatures * Council of State Governments * National School Boards Association * U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Endorsements For The Kempthorne-Glenn Unfunded Mandate Reform Act

With the support of 63 Senate co-sponsors, the Senate Government Affairs Committee unanimously approved S. 993, the Kempthorne-Glenn bill reforming the imposition of unfunded mandates on state and local governments. This bill is strongly endorsed by:

"I support the modified Glenn-Kempthorne initiative and I agree with Senator Dole — we ought to pass it, and we ought to pass it now...I think it is a very important thing to do."

— President Bill Clinton

"If there is one thing that Congress could do to restore balance to the federal-state relationship, it would be to pass the Kempthorne-Glenn bill now..."

— Senator Bob Dole, Republican Leader

"On behalf of The United States Conference of Mayors, I am writing to express my strong support for the Kempthorne-Glenn Bill, S. 993, and to urge immediate passage of the legislation... "This consensus bill...is strong, serious mandate reform. It requires Congress to 1) know how much a new mandate will cost state and federal government; 2) agree to pay for the costs of the mandates; and 3) go on record as recommending tax increases or spending reductions in other programs to pay for the mandates. I truly believe that the light shed by these three requirements will turn the tide against new unfunded federal mandates."

— Victor Ashe, Mayor, Knoxville, TN and President, Conference of Mayors

"The immediate passage of this legislation is a top legislative priority for counties across the country...Last week (at our) annual conference...over 4,500 delegates attended from counties in almost every state...(the) full membership unanimously endorsed a resolution urging Congress to pass S. 993 at once."

— Ronald Franke, Commissioner, Marion County, OR
and President, National Association of Counties

"The National League of Cities...are doing everything in our power to...pass the bill in this session...(it's) responsible, politically viable legislation that offers significant reform which will benefit every city and town and consequently every citizen in the nation."

— Sharpe James, Mayor, Newark, NJ and President, National League of Cities

"I am delighted that the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee voted to pass the Kempthorne-Glenn bill last week...Hopefully, a concerted push by the Big 7 (groups representing state and local officials) can lead to a Senate floor vote in the near future."

-- George Voinovich, Governor of Ohio

"S.993 creates, for the first time, a mandate score card on every new cost Congress imposes on state and local governments...anything that would cause these governments to raise taxes or cut services...This is the taxpayer protection act against hidden or new trickle-down taxes via federal mandates. That's accountability."

-- Ray Scheppach, Executive Director of the National Governor's Association.

"As Mayor of the City of St. Louis, Missouri, I write you to urge immediate action on S. 993, the Federal Mandate Accountability and Reform Act of 1994...This legislation is critical to America's cities and states...(which) are entitled to know how much a federal mandate will cost; that Congress will agree to pay for the costs of the mandates and go on record as recommending tax increases or spending reductions in other programs to pay for the new mandates."

-- Freeman R. Bosley, Jr., Mayor, St. Louis, MO

"Today, school children throughout the country are facing the prospect of reduced classroom instruction because the federal government requires, but does not fund services or programs that local school boards are directed to implement."

"On behalf of more than 95,000 local school board members nationwide, (I)...offer strong support for S. 993. This legislation would provide much needed relief to school districts which must spend billions of local tax dollars every year to comply with unfunded federal mandates."

-- Michael A. Resnick, Senior Associate Director
National School Board Association

"I urge...immediate action to schedule S. 993 for debate on the Senate floor"

-- Marc Morat, Mayor, New Orleans, LA

"This bill will, for the first time, force members to be accountable for their actions...we believe this legislation will have a significant impact on curtailing the number of future unfunded mandates that Congress enacts."

-- Yvonne Brathwaite Burke, Supervisor
Los Angeles County, CA Supervisor

"The basic problem of unfunded mandates is so obvious it should not need a law. But it does, and Glenn-Kempthorne meets that need."

-- Editorial, New York Times

"This vital piece of legislation deserves passage."

-- Editorial, Dallas Morning News

"Its passage (S. 993) would mark a fundamental change in the way Congress does business by requiring senators to say how their measure would be paid for anytime the cost is more than $50 million a year. If lawmakers don't identify costs and sources of funding, the bill would be ruled out of order and couldn't be considered, except by a recorded majority vote.

Thus the proposal would stop Congress from imposing costly regulations on states and localities unless it is willing to send along a check. These regulations, called unfunded mandates, are the No. 1 problem undermining the fiscal health of local governments. Curbing them is a measure much needed and long overdue...

"If the full Senate and the House don't get the message before Election Day to stop spending money they don't have, then voters will have a chance to deliver it at the ballot box."

RE: Barbara Russell Meeting
DATE: 9-23-94

Over the last several months, I have been talking to Barbara Russell about coming on board in a paid position soon after November 8th to organize the Dole supporters in New Hampshire.

Barbara, as you know, is from Kansas. She was at the Bill Treat dinner last May.

She is now ready to make that commitment and I wanted you to spend time with her to help solidify her decision.

She is very well regarded by all the major players in the state. She is very organized; outgoing; and trust worthy. I do not envision her running the New Hampshire effort, but she is a good first hire.

Her concerns relate to the amount of time she would have to give right away after the election. She is currently running the campaign for a Republican State Senate challenger, working seven-day weeks. I told her that although we obviously would work toward that kind of schedule, we could give her some flexibility at the beginning in terms of allowing her time for certain family activities that are important to her.

I would tell her that you understand that she and I have been talking; that after a lot of consideration she's just about ready to say yes to accepting this position; and that you really need and want her to be a part of your team.

Bass finding favor with voters

Lisa and Charlie Bass take time from a busy campaign schedule to pose for the cameraman with their children, Jonathan and Lucy.

A man right for the times

He's bright, sincere and carry's a respected family name.

He's energetic, and fiscally conservative.

And he's running for Congress in the Second District.

He's Charlie Bass.

His ties to New Hampshire are long and binding. He was raised here, and he's now raising his own family here. In 1974, he graduated from Dartmouth college and he has helped run a small manufacturing business in Dublin, New Hampshire since 1980.

Charlie believes his fiscal conservatism and his record of achievement makes him the man to unseat the Democrat incumbents.

He believes it's past time for a change, and he believes in changing it one seat at a time.

Unlike the incumbent he stands for the values on which New Hampshire was built, common sense in all things, frugality, integrity and a strong work ethic.

Charlie was a member of the New Hampshire House of Representatives from 1982 to 1988.

"I know I can beat
Dick Swett in November."

He served in the NH Senate from 1988-92. He was chairman of the Public Affairs and Ethics Committee, Co-Chairman of the Economic Development Committee.

Bass wasn't just a lawmaker doing his civic duty. He was a mover. He brought accountability by creating and fighting for passage of the NH legislative Ethics Committee.

His Campaign spending Limit Law, created fairness and reasonable limits on campaign spending in the state. So well thought of is the law that it has been used as a model by other states.

He's a member of the Amoskeag Veterans and the Altemont Lodge, F A&M. He is also A trustee of the NH Higher Education Association, and the NH Humanities Council.

He's right for the job.

Second Dist. Poll reveals Bass still setting fast pace

Voters in the sprawling Second Congressional District are taking a long second look at the voting record of the two-term incumbent.

What they see is an incumbent who says one thing to voters and votes something very much different when he leaves the Granite State and returns to Washington...

Voter resentment of this political duplicity is beginning to show up in the polls. District-wide samplings show a dramatic shift away from the incumbent to the man, a majority of district voters believe, has the best chance to help bring change to a Congress that is out of step and out of tune with the ideas and ideals of New Hampshire.

In a recent unweighted poll, voters in communities across the district agreed that Congress has for too long operated under the artificial lights of promises and more promises rather than the sunlight of meaningful performance which considers the needs of all people not the special interest wants of militants and the greedy.

The poll shows show that like the walls of Jericho, voter support for the incumbent is tumbling down.

Voters in the district are no longer swayed by the old campaign promises of the incumbent.

They have lost faith in his word. They are even less willing to express support for his efforts to recycle old and outworn panaceas in the guise of new ideas.

As a fiscal conservative Charlie Bass' stand on taxes sits well with voters.. For ten years in the NH legislature he fought attempts to pass a sales or income.

Voter's agree with Bass when he states, "It's time to put the 2nd District seat back into the hands of a fiscal Conservative, in the tradition, of Perkins Bass, Jim Cleveland and Judd Greg.

"I believe the Second District needs real, honest representation in Washington. I'm from New Hampshire and I'm for New Hampshire."

Bass will oppose unfunded federal mandates, support balanced budget, term limits

Charlie Bass, the Republican Candidate for Congress from Peterborough believes that economy in government and reforming Congress will be with us long after most of the other issues have weathered away.

The man, people believe can defeat the Democrat incumbent in November, has a clear message for voters. It's a message void of double-talk.

His speeches are being heard and read with close attention. He has won praise for stimulating purposeful discussion on the "real issues" confronting Congress and the nation.

He shares with First District Congressman Bill Zeliff the belief that until we get our financial house in order all other national priorities must become secondary.

He tells audiences that the Second District needs "a Congressman who will face the budget deficit squarely and who will be willing to vote for difficult and painful cuts including capping entitlements, removing people from public assistance who don't need or qualify for it, and passing new and innovative mechanisms to cut pork out of the budget such as the Zeliff 'A to Z' program.

Bass communicates confidence as he delivers his message to every city and town. He says we need a Congressman in the Second District who will support passage of a balanced budget amendment to the U.S. constitution, term limits for members of Congress and a Congressman who will oppose any and all unfunded federal mandates.

The time has come to take this District back from the special interests in California, New York and Washington, D.C.

Bass declares that district voters need a Congressman who will sponsor a measure to reform the electoral process and make Congress more responsive and accountable.

The candidate puts forth no simple cure-alls. He believes it is political deception to preach economy and then vote for spending programs.

"Government has a job to do and that job must be done in a business like way."

Swett's record panned

Congressman Dick Swett stands accused of using a bag of political tricks to keep himself in office.

Peterborough Businessman Charlie Bass said "A review of the incumbent's record reveals a pattern of broken campaign promises, indecision and flip-flopping on important issues."

"Swett," he said, "may have portrayed himself as an outsider, but now he's part of the political establishment in Washington. He's the absolute quintessential member of the incumbent party."

Bass notes, when Dick Swett was elected in 1990, he was able to convince voters that he was a new breed of office seeker.

"But," Bass adds, "voters in the Second District now know differently. Swett is all maneuver, maneuver and maneuver. He doesn't have a real philosophy. He really cares about nothing. He's not really for this or that. He changes his mind whenever the Democrat powers in Washington tell him to. He lacks conviction."

Bass maintains the district deserves better representation and he views himself as the man voters would do well to send to Congress. He cites among his qualifications, lifelong residency in New Hampshire, someone who has lived in the state more than a year before running.

He has worked to make a living in business in New Hampshire through good times and bad.

Unlike the incumbent he has actively participated in the life of New Hampshire, participating in voluntary causes in his community and all over the state.

He has served in state government for more than a decade, establishing a record of performance and achievement.

Unlike the incumbent he is a person who is not afraid to make tough decisions, who has made tough decisions and has stood by them.

He can win in November.

Merrimack County GOP Spring Dinner

was a gala night for county Republicans and Charlie Bass was among the political celebrities in attendance. He and his wife Lisa exchange political views with former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. Since the picture was taken Charlie has become a candidate for Congress in the Second Congressional District. He has set his sights on defeating the incumbent Democrat in November.

NH U.S. Senator Robert (Bob) Smith and Second Congressional District Candidate Charlie Bass take time out from the Amherst Fourth Of July parade to discuss, what else, politics. Bass' young daughter Lucy is not certain that she understands the conversation but she loves parades and the campaign trail.

Bass labels Swett, political chameleon

Indecision!

Flip-flopping

Broken campaign promises.

These are the hallmark of Dick Swett's four years in Congress.

So charged Charlie Bass, a candidate who knows he can beat Dick Swett in November.

In a gloves off type of campaign the Second District challenger accused the incumbent of compiling a voting record that better represents the interests of big labor, and the political ideology of a Democrat representing New York City or California than New Hampshire.

"And little wonder," Bass said, "since much of the money used to support his political machine comes from New York, California and Washington D.C."

Candidate Bass was referring to the estimated $600,000 that Swett has received from out-of-state sources during his tenure in Washington.

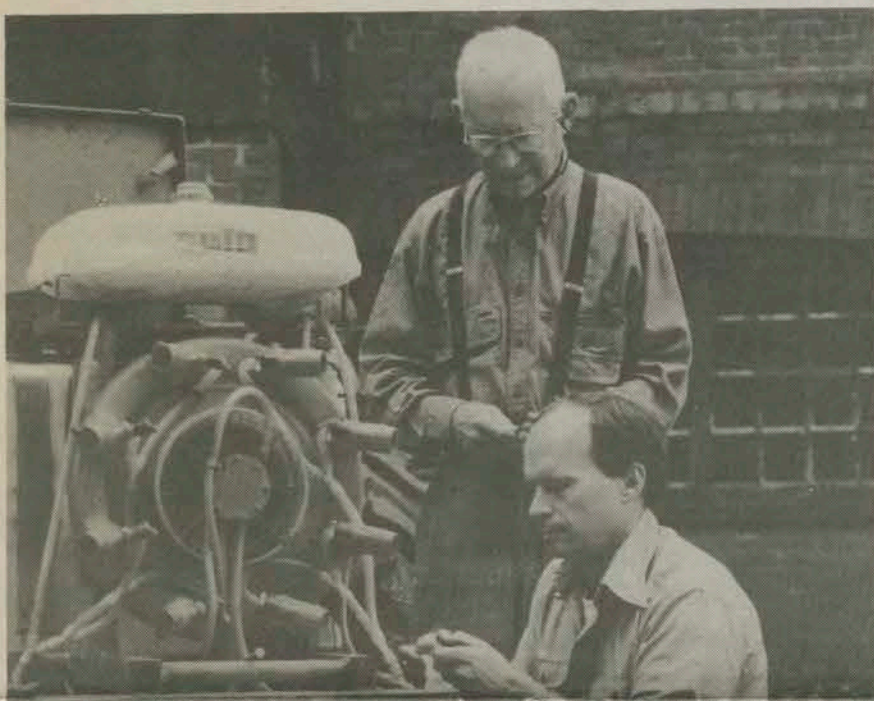

Bass, the son of former Congressman Perkins Bass, has won praise from district voters for his forthright discussion of those issues that are of major importance to New Hampshire voters.

Candidate Bass an outspoken anti-tax Republican is an advocate of a responsible national fiscal policy that matches spending to income. He wants fewer government controls, a smaller bureaucracy and lower taxes.

He supports the passage of a Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution, terms limits for members of Congress and opposes any and all unfunded federal mandates.

He puts his candidacy in perspective when he states that the time has come to take the Second District back from the special interests in California, New York and Washington, D.C. and return control of the district to those of us who live and work here.

We need a Republican Congressman who will work with GOP Leaders not Bill Clinton.

Charlie Bass works on farm machinery maintenance with his father Perkins Bass in the quiet of a Peterborough morning. Perkins Bass represented the Second District in Congress 1954-1962.

An Editorial

Now more than ever

Change is needed in the Second Congressional District.

The time has come to take the district back from the big out of state interests.

Incumbent Dick Swett has broken faith with his constituents..

Republican candidate Charlie Bass said it best when he announced his candidacy for Congress.

Swett's fund raising tactics just plain wrong, unethical

In a hard hitting speech to District Two voters, Charlie Bass lashed out at his Democrat opponent for continuing to allow California Congressman Tom Lantos, Dick Swett's father-in-law, to attempt to buy his reelection with out-of-state, special interest money.

"This type of fundraising is just plain wrong and unethical," Bass said. "Tom Lantos, sitting chairman of a Sub-Committee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, should be ashamed for soliciting campaign funds from defense contractors on behalf of his son-in-law, Dick Lantos Swett."

Bass charged that Lantos has a clear conflict on both a professional and personal level.

"Clearly, Lantos work as the chairman of a Sub-Committee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and as a senior member of the United States House of Representatives allows him to exert a disproportionate amount of influence," Bass said.

And...

"What this influence is really buying for Mr. Lantos and the state of California," Bass stresses, "is a 53rd Congressman and a job for his son-in-law, leaving the people of New Hampshire's Second District unrepresented."

Bass notes that such questionable tactics would not stand public scrutiny if Dick Lantos Swett was a member of the New Hampshire Legislature..

As a state senator, Bass successfully sponsored legislation which brought about campaign finance reform and solid ethical standards.

"New Hampshire voters," Bass adds, "have come to expect the adherence to these principles from their elected officials."

Bass called it unfortunate for New Hampshire to have a Congressman who does not truly represent the people of New Hampshire but rather the interests of California and the Democrat power brokers who control Congress.

Bass has set himself on a course to change this.

Bass supports Zeliff's alternative health plan

Health Care problems are a major concern of Congressional candidate Charles Bass. He understands the need to improve our system, but he rejects any plan for a wholesale government takeover of the health care industry..

The Second District Republican supports Congressman Bill Zeliff and a bi-partisan group of 103 other Congressmen who have offered an alternative health plan. The plan includes the core set of issues which are in nearly all of the health care proposals to date.

"These," Bass said, "are not radical measures like the Clinton-Swett bill, but represent real accountability and reasonable changes to a system in need of reform."

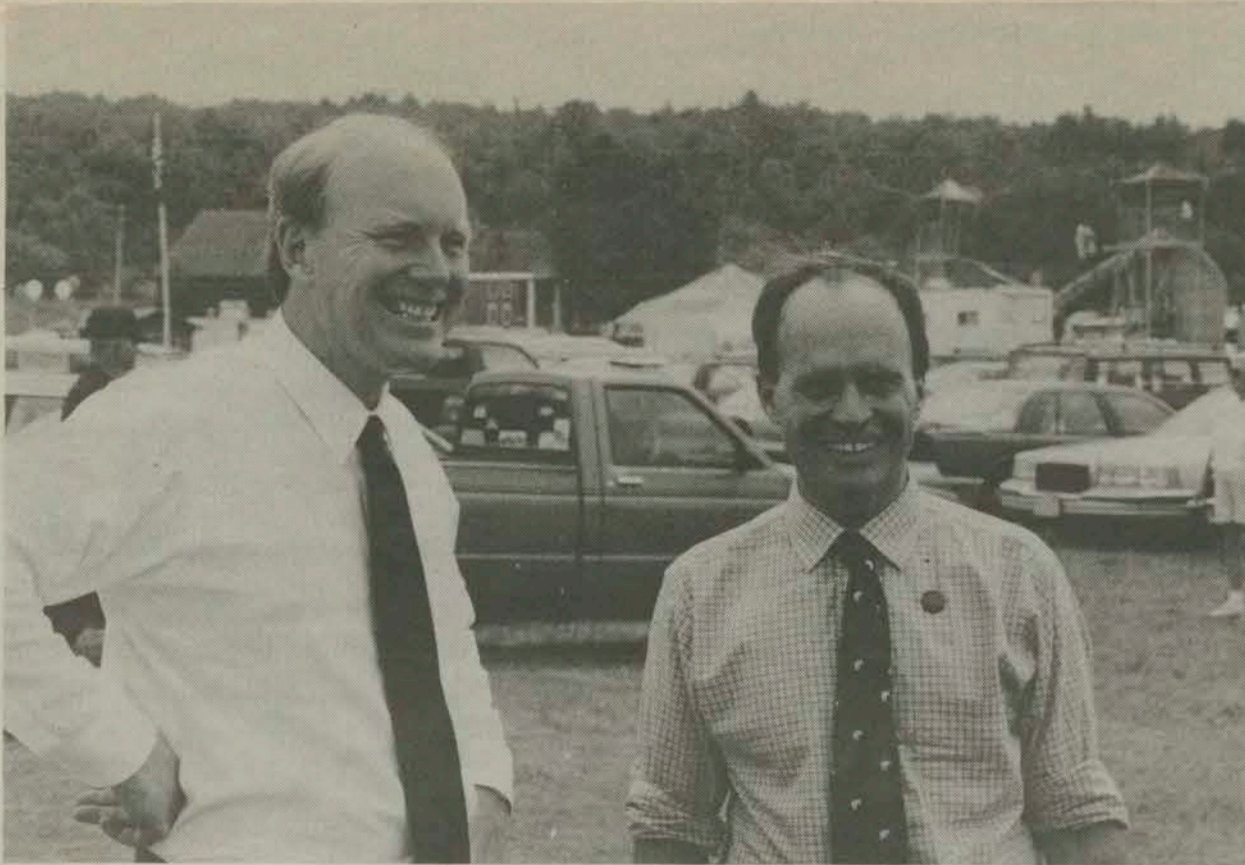

Bass believes in fixing only what needs fixing so that quality health care is affordable and accessible to everyone who wants it.. He believes cutting costs is the first priority and supports measures to reduce fraud, and a tax policy designed to stimulate competition between health care companies.

Bass believes small businesses should be given incentives to cut costs, not mandates to provide coverage.

He accused Swett of supporting the Clinton plan which will cost New Hampshire jobs and drive up the cost for employers and hurt the state's economy.

Bass said the alternative plan features portability of benefits and deals with coverage of pre-existing medical conditions as well as providing expanding access to preventive care.

"Dick Swett is not in the mainstream on perhaps the most critical issue that Congress is addressing in 1994."

It Was a Great day For the fair and two popular New Hampshire political figures, Governor Steve Merrill and Second Congressional District GOP candidate Charles Bass exchange views on the upcoming election at the Haverhill Fair.

Editorial

"My friends," he said, "the time has come to take this District back from the special interests in California, New York and Washington, D.C....to return control of this District to those of us who live and work here...To elect a Congressman who truly cares for our future, our well-being, and our needs."

In 1990 and 1992 voters in the Second District listened to the lullaby words of the Democrat incumbent as he pledged to help bring change and help restore accountability to a discredited Congress.

"Now in 1994, New Hampshire voters are realizing that in reality they elected a Congressman who has turned out to be nothing more than a political chameleon," Bass said.

A recent comparison of what the Democrat incumbent tells voters he will do and what he actually does reveals a telling difference in what the Congressman says and what the Congressman does.

A torrent of syrupy words about what he has done for the District cannot wash away the fact that the incumbent's voting record represents the interests of big labor, the political ideology of big city Democrats and the demands of Democrat power brokers in Congress.

It's time for a change.

Ordinary logic and observable facts rule against returning Dick Swett to Congress. The district needs an intelligent, dedicated Congressman who will encourage change and opportunity without resorting to deception and wild spending proposals.

Charlie Bass is the right choice to bring needed change to the Second District.

Bass wants no Haiti intervention without Congressional authority

In renewing his opposition to a U.S. invasion of Haiti, Congressional candidate Charlie Bass, announced his support for U.S. Senator Judd Gregg's Senate amendment to give Congress authority over any U.S. intervention in Haiti.

Bass called on Dick Swett to introduce a similar measure in the House of Representatives. Bass said:

"I support the Gregg Amendment as does New Hampshire Senator Bob Smith and First District Congressman Bill Zeff. This amendment would give Congress the ability to debate and approve or reject any U.S. invasion in Haiti before it happens.

The Gregg amendment, Bass notes, "is similar to what President Bush sought and received before going into Kuwait and Iraq."

In expressing his opposition to military intervention in Haiti, Bass stressed the fact the United States has no economic or national security interests there.

"The United States," he said, "has never been able to successfully complete its mission there in the last 100 years in which we have been involved in Haiti.

Bass disagrees with the administration's efforts to return Jean-Bertrand Aristide to the Haiti presidency.

He states: "Jean-Bertrand Aristide has a history of being anti-U.S. and there is no reason to believe that he would not continue to be this way after we have reinstalled him."

Bass further believes that the U.S. should not act alone in Haiti.

Other Western nations have as great, if not greater interest in that country, particularly England and France.

"Why," he asks, "are they not willing to participate in this campaign?"

He tells audiences that he applauds the Gregg amendment because if Congressional approval is sought and obtained, there will be more national unity of purpose and understanding of our interests, interventions, and goals in Haiti.

Bass urged Swett to submit similar action on the House side.

"If Swett is really opposed to military action in Haiti he should follow Gregg's lead and introduce similar action in the House."

A quick look at Bass on the tough issues

On Crime: When Charlie Bass says he'll be tough on crime, he has a record to back it up. He voted for the death penalty and truth in sentencing as a legislator.

On Taxes: As a fiscal conservative, Bass has consistently fought attempts to pass a sales or income tax in NH.

On Health Care: Bass understands the need to improve our system, but he rejects a wholesale government takeover of the health care industry.

On Ethics and Reform: His record of leadership in reforming the New Hampshire Legislature is unparalleled.

Rochester Condo Sales Under Federal Scrutiny

By TOM FAHEY
Union Leader Staff

Federal authorities are investigating the history of a 112-unit
Rochester condominium project in which the New Hampshire
Housing Finance Authority and Dime Savings Bank were major lenders.

The Woodland Green project by Northeast Community Development Group was built in the late 1980s under a $7.5 million construction loan from NHHFA.
Dime Savings Bank and NHHFA wrote mortgages on sales of the condominiums in the project.

An NHHFA internal auditor warned the authority in 1989 that questionable loan practices were being used in sales of condominiums at Woodland Green. The auditor later quit, alleging that he was being harassed because he voiced his concerns.

Now, The Union Leader has learned, federal investigators are looking at the history of sales at the development. The government is seeking records from Northeast Community Development Group and the NHHFA.

man Steve Duprey was general partner in the Northeast development group. His attorney, Steven Gordon of Concord, said yesterday that his understanding "is that the investigation pertains to the lending practices of Dime Savings Bank and the activities of its loan originators."

He would not comment on the issue of federal subpoenas.

U.S. Attorney Paul Gagnon said he would not comment on the case.

Claire Monier, executive director of the NHHFA, said her office has been notified that its records on Woodland Green will be subpoenaed. "We are expecting the marshals at our front door any day," she said yesterday.

NHHFA provided Northeast with the construction loan and financed mortgages on 47 of the units that were sold. Dime Savings Bank was the prime mortgage lender on other units at the development.

David Totaro, spokesman for the Dime in New York City, said yesterday that federal investigators have not contacted the bank about Woodland Green loans.

Dime Savings has suffered severe losses on mortgage loans it made in New England between 1986 and 1989, when it pulled out of the region. Since then it has foreclosed on roughly one-third of its 10,000 mortgage loans in the three states, most made under a low-documentation "Impact" program. Impact offered easy applications, no verification of income statements and approvals in 48 hours for buyers who could make 20 percent down payments.

During the past year, the Dime reached settlements with the attorneys general of New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut in which it agreed to offer Dime borrowers a chance to refinance their loans and to set aside money to help those who lost their homes through foreclosure. Throughout, Dime has said it was a victim, not a perpetrator, of fraud.

The Woodland Green sales practices NHHFA auditor Douglas L. Richard questioned in 1989 involved "gifting" in connection with condominium sales.

Under gifting, a seller secretly reduces the price of a housing unit for a buyer. The purchaser then applies for a mortgage, claiming that the purchase price is the higher value. This practice often allowed buyers without money for down payments to finance the entire cost of a residence, and left lending institutions with little security.

In a complaint to the state Department of Labor after he quit NHHFA, Richards alleged the difference between documented and actual selling prices in 10 different Woodland Green cases averaged $15,000.

Monier said that Richards found discrepancies when he looked over loan settlement papers that Dime loan officers provided to NHHFA after each sale. NHHFA required the papers to be sure its construction loan was being paid off according to terms of its agreement, she said.

NHHFA deputy director Dean Christon said loan settlement documents "reflected something not conventional with regard to down payments."

NHHFA legal counsel William Craig of Manchester said in 1989 that the authority investigated Richards' allegations and found them to be true. He also said he didn't think they broke any laws or regulations.

On Craig's advice, NHHFA sent letters to all parties involved — Duprey's company, the Dime and the real estate company involved. "We told them all to cut it out," Monier said.

NHHFA never notified any other authorities, she said. Craig said the issue was between the banks and Northeast. NHHFA was not at risk because its loan was being paid off.

"We got all our money out of Woodland Green. The project was a success for us," she said. By following legal advice, Monier said, "I'm very confident I've done the right thing."

Gregg is stepping into limelight on many national issues

By JO BECKER
Monitor staff

Sen. Judd Gregg is on the Grand Old Party's fast track.

He stepped up to the plate as the Republican Party's designated hitter on Haiti from the get-go, sponsoring two amendments to try to force Clinton to come before Congress

prior to an invasion. And prior to that, he was also out front leading the battle against Clinton's health care plan, coordinating task forces and strategy for his fellow Republicans. He's also a deputy whip, which means he helps to round up and count votes for his party.

Those are high-profile partisan roles for a freshman senator, especially one who won election with only 48 percent of the vote. And it's a long way to come for a man who once stood on Clinton Street, running for Congress in 1980, with a sign that read: "I'm Judd Gregg."

"The reason I'm in the lead on (Haiti) is that I offered an amendment in June," Gregg said last week. "I'd like to think I'm doing my job."

Gregg's committee assignments - budget, foreign relations and labor - have coincided with the issues of the day.

"Health care worked out very well," said Gregg, who played the conservative Romeo on the labor committee to Republican Sen. Nancy Kassebaum's moderate Juliet. "It was good fortune that I was there when one of the biggest issues to hit the Senate in 25 years (hit) and I ended up being a key player on it."

■ See GREGG - Page A-8

But there seems to be more at work than simple good fortune.

Every single member of the Republican minority leadership interviewed this week said Gregg is destined for a leadership role in the party. Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, the minority leader, called him "a very effective member of the Republican team in the Senate."

And Mississippi Sen. Thad Cochran, the Republican chairman of the conference, said: "Judd would be a credible candidate for any leadership position in the Senate."

That may come as a surprise to the state's political watchers, many of whom said that the telegenic Gregg was "no Warren Rudman" when Gregg was elected in 1992 to fill the shoes of that widely respected, vocal senator.

Is Gregg's increasing visibility a simple matter of a star on the rise, or is it a question of being in the right place (New Hampshire) at the right time (with presidential primaries looming in the not-too-distant future)?

"Look, it's a wide-open field out there for the Republican nomination," said Bill Schneider, a political analyst for the conservative think tank, the American Enter-every single senator wakes up and says: 'I could be president.' And the next thing that comes to their minds is: 'I better stay on the good side of Judd Gregg.'"

The GOP leadership agrees.

"Every candidate will want to have (Judd Gregg's) advice and counsel and help in New Hampshire," said Cochran. "Candidates may have already done so - Bob Dole has been very friendly toward him, as well as Phil Gramm."

"I would think he'd be a very important keeper of the gate - that you would want to have his blessing there to further their designs for the presidency," said Wyoming Sen. Alan Simpson, the minority whip.

New Hampshire political leaders have always played important roles during presidential primary and election seasons. But Oklahoma Sen. Don Nickles, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, said not to attribute too much to the New Hampshire connection in terms of Gregg's new visibility. Instead, Nickles, who asked Gregg to play a big role in formulating the Republican strategy on health care and more recently worked with him on Haiti, pointed to Gregg's administrative skills and his willingness.

"The fact that he's from New Hampshire doesn't hurt for political considerations, but Judd Gregg would be a leader wherever he's from. He's asserted leadership - it's not so much a question of being drafted."

David Carney, the deputy executive director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee and the former chief of staff to then-governor John Sununu, said Gregg has taken advantage of his committee assignments by coming out early on a number of issues.

"He had strong views at a time when many others were still feeling around for their stances," said Carney. "It does help (that his conservative views) are in tune with the vast majority of his constituents."

Gregg is also a senator that the leadership can turn to when there's a crucial vote. Simpson, the minority whip, called Gregg a reliable voter on key issues.

"On most issues, yes - you can't have very much of an impact as a lone wolf down here," Gregg said. "You have to be willing to be a team player."

But being a team player and running point for your party does carry political risks; in the last presidential election American voters who went for independent Ross Perot gave a clear signal of their feelings about partisanship and the resulting political gridlock.

New Hampshire's other senator, Republican Bob Smith, said while he believes that Gregg would make a good party leader, it is not a role in which he sees himself.

"It does rein you in some and restrict you because you're trying to please all sides - it's not what I see as my role."

Gregg said he doesn't consider himself a partisan - his philosophies are simply in tune with those of the Republican Caucus.

And those sorts of views are less risky in the conservative Granite State than they might be elsewhere.

Asked why Gregg has been given so prominent a role rather than Smith, Simpson replied: "You can't compare them ... Washington works in cycles. Sometimes the spotlight hits you and sometimes it bounces off."

For the moment, Gregg seems bathed in it. Cochran went so far as to say that it wouldn't be out of the question for Gregg to run for president himself.

"I think he'd be a good president," mused Cochran.

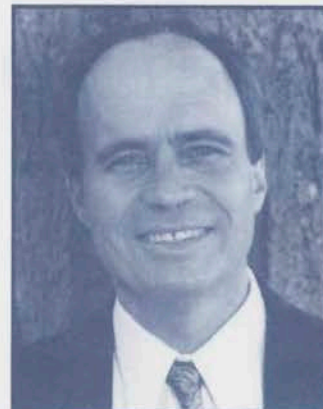

And while Gregg denies such aspirations - "you can absolutely rule that one out" - and indeed they seem far-fetched given his status as a freshman senator from a small state, he said if the opportunity came along for an elected leadership role in the Senate, he would take a hard look.

"I want to be able to contribute," Gregg said. "And to do that, you have to move up in the Senate in a collegial atmosphere."

Dear Friend,

This document is from the collections at the Dole Archives, University of Kansas
<http://dolearchives.ku.edu>

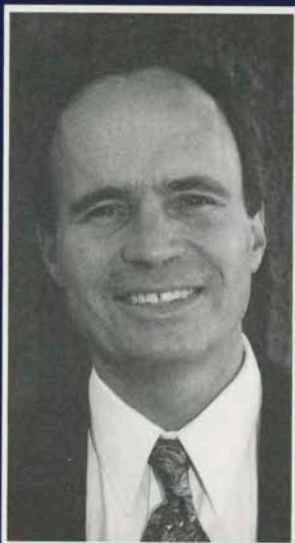

I believe the people of New Hampshire's 2nd Congressional District need real, honest representation in Washington. I'm from New Hampshire, and I'm for New Hampshire. I help run a family business here, and I'm raising my family here. My father, Perkins Bass, served with distinction as a U.S. Congressman from the 2nd District from 1954-1962. I know that traditional New Hampshire values such as integrity, frugality, good old Yankee common sense, and hard work are what we come to expect from our representatives in Congress.

I believe it's time to put our 2nd District seat back into the hands of a fiscally conservative Republican, in the tradition of Perkins Bass, Jim Cleveland, and Judd Gregg. I know that we as Republicans differ on certain issues, but we agree on many more than we disagree.

And I know we all agree it's time to send Dick Swett back to California. I can beat Dick Swett in November. I hope you'll join the Bass team.

CONGRESS

From New Hampshire...for New Hampshire

Charlie Bass, a Republican for Congress, in the New Hampshire tradition.

Charlie Bass is a Republican whom New Hampshire can be proud of in the U.S. Congress. He led the fight to reform the New Hampshire Legislature, and he'll bring that leadership to Washington. A fiscal conservative with a strong record of achievement for New Hampshire, Charlie Bass is the most qualified candidate to win the 2nd District seat for Republicans. Charlie believes it's time to change Congress, and he believes in changing it one seat at a time.

Charlie and Lisa Bass with their children, Lucy and Jonathan.

Charlie Bass, from New Hampshire . . . for New Hampshire.

Charlie Bass knows New Hampshire. He was raised here, and now he's raising his own family here. In 1974, Charlie graduated from Dartmouth College and, since 1980, he has helped run a small manufacturing business in Dublin, New Hampshire. Charlie's record of public service is strong. For six years, he represented the people of Peterborough, Hancock, and Greenfield in the New Hampshire House of Representatives and, for four years, he served with distinction in the State Senate. A devoted husband and father, Charlie lives in Peterborough with his wife, Lisa and their young children, Lucy and Jonathan. Unlike Dick Swett, Charlie stands for the values on which New Hampshire was built: common sense, frugality, integrity, and a strong work ethic. With your support, Charlie Bass can beat Dick Swett in November.

Charlie Bass on the Issues

On Crime: When Charlie Bass says he'll be tough on crime, he has a record to back it up. As Vice Chairman of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees, Charlie supported reinstating the death penalty in New Hampshire. He supported D.W.I. roadblocks, drug-free school zones, and enhanced penalties for those convicted of hate crimes. Charlie supports truth in sentencing, to ensure that violent criminals serve their full sentences. He supports mandatory sentencing for drug lords, and he believes violent repeat offenders should be locked up for life. But, unlike Dick Swett, Charlie does not believe taking guns from sportsmen and law-abiding citizens is the answer to stopping violent crime. Charlie Bass supports every American's Second Amendment right to bear arms.

On Taxes: As a fiscal conservative, Charlie Bass has consistently fought attempts to pass a sales or income tax in New Hampshire. In fact, he's the only Republican candidate in the 2nd District with a clear record of opposing broad-based taxes for ten years in the Legislature. When there was a budget surplus, Charlie supported putting that money aside in the Rainy Day Fund, as well as efforts to reduce the state's Business Profits Tax. When it was time to make tough decisions, Charlie supported cutting spending, as opposed to slashing aid to cities and towns. Charlie has always believed that less government is good for taxpayers, and he'll bring that common sense frugality to the U.S. Congress, where we need him most.

On Health Care: Charlie Bass understands the need to improve our system, but he rejects the Clinton-Rostenkowski-Foley plan for a wholesale government takeover of the health care industry. Charlie supports fixing only what needs to be fixed, so that quality health care is affordable and accessible to everyone who wants it. He believes cutting costs is the first priority, so he supports measures to reduce fraud, and tax policy designed to stimulate competition between health care companies. Charlie believes small businesses should be given incentives to cut costs, not mandates to provide coverage.

On Choice: Charlie Bass supports a woman's fundamental right to choose. He believes government has no right to regulate the single most important and personal decision a woman can make.

On Ethics and Reform: Charlie Bass' record of leadership in reforming the New Hampshire Legislature is unparalleled. He brought accountability to Concord by creating and fighting for passage of the New Hampshire Legislative Ethics Committee. And Charlie's Campaign Spending Limit Law, which created fairness and reasonable limits on campaign spending in New Hampshire, has been used as a model by other states across the country. Congress needs a leader like Charlie Bass to fight for accountability, integrity, and ethics reform.
