WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 3, 1971 ---- U.S. Sen. Bob Dole, Republican, speaking before party faithfuls in Wichita tonight at the Century II Civic Center outlined the job facing Kansas Republicans in the coming elections.

Dole said:

The specifics of the job here in Kansas are clear. We must first of all return Jim Pearson to the Senate, and Garner Shriver, Keith Sebelius, Joe Skubitz and Larry Winn to the Congress. We must regain the Governor's Mansion and another Congressional seat. And Certainly, we must do our part to insure Richard Nixon's second term in office.

Dole said he believed the the coming elections would require a lot of work from the Republicans, but said that "the record of this Administration is an easy one to support." He said:

In the last three years of responsive and responsible government, President Nixon has reversed the tide of war abroad so that Americans now dare to hope for peace ---- a full generation of peace. He has reversed the tide of violence and discontent in this country. He is winning the fight against inflation and has reversed the commonly held expectation that prices could do nothing but rise.

Dole predicted that "the Democrats will do whatever they can to confuse the issues and the choices before the American public." "And the danger," he said, "is that the Democrats in their confusion will also confuse those sincere Americans who expect and deserve in an election year to get a fair and truthful airing of the issues." He said:

Only desperate men with empty party coffers would attempt a twenty million dollar raid on the federal treasury in the form of the income tax campaign check-off provision. And only confused men could pull such a move in broad daylight and call it reform.
