WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Senator Bob Dole (R.,Ks.) expressed his wholehearted support for President Nixon's nomination of Clarence M. Kelly to be director of the FBI.

" Chief Kelley has roots in the state of Kansas. He is an alumnus of the University of Kansas and as chief of the Kansas City Police Department ~~and~~ has worked closely with Kansas Law enforcement officials. Since coming to Kansas City, Missouri, he has demonstrated an impressive capacity to respond to changes and has built a national reputation for his use of the tools of modern police science and technology. Having served with great distinction in the FBI, he knows the bureau, and the basics of law enforcement on a personal level. He understands the FBI's responsibility, its mission and its history. I am pleased to support his nomination."
