The Honorable Robert Dole Hart Senate Office Building #141 Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Dole:

Kemarks Sun, Dec May 4 3

No Greater Love will commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the United States entry into World War II on Sunday, December 8, 1991. The ceremony will be held at 11:00 near General Omar Bradley's grave at Arlington National Cemetery. Fifty years ago on December 8th, President Roosevelt addressed Congress calling upon the Nation to answer freedom's call. At this tribute, a memorial tree and stone will be dedicated to those who died in World War II.

The Board of Directors of No Greater Love would be honored by your presence and participation in this special ceremony. We would like you (as a Veteran of World War II) to speak a few minutes during the ceremony. Among others we are inviting to give twominute remarks are Senator Robert Dole, Chief Justice William Rehnquist, actor James Stewart, Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone, cartoonist Bill Mauldin, Elie Wiesel, former baseball star Bob Feller and Walter Cronkite.

We are bringing together for the first time, from all across the country, sons and daughters of those who died during this war, for a national memorial service for their fathers. The ceremony will be videotaped and there will be a luncheon following this tribute.

I hope you can be part of this historic event. Thank you for your consideration of our request.

Sincerely.

Bush and Quayle, Again?

espite a Gallup poll last month indicating that 52% of the U.S. public would prefer that he seek a new running mate, President Bush bas in effect told his political advisers that Dan Quayle will be on the ticket with him again. It happened at the end of a secret session at Camp David. Bush turned to Quayle and said, "Before we break up. I'd like a few words from my running mate, reports a Washington insider.

One of the Bush advisers spoke up. "Mr. President, is this confirmation that you're going to run?"
"Well," the President

reportedly said, "there's no point in being coy."

Calling All Children Of WW II Casualties

o honor those who died during World War II, a ceramony will be held at Arlington National Cemetery on Saturday, Dec. 7, the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

If you lost a parent in World War II and want to attend, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the sponsor, No Greater Love, Dept. P. 1750 New York Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, and you'll receive an invitation. This is the group that started the "Tie a Yellow Ribbon" campaign.

Twiggy Lawson, helie Hagarty and Fron Drescher (I-r) co-stat in the new elicone Princesese wiggy Lawson may look like a princess, but she certainly can't talk like one and she knows it. In fact, while she plays a princess in the new CBS sitcom Princesses, scheduled to debut next Friday, the slender, 42-yearold actress admits that she's no Princess Di. The two met recently at a charity do.

Twiggy is No "Fair Lady"

Twiggy (real name: Lealey Hornby) says she had some input into her character, the English widow of a minor European prince. "When I got there, I found that they wanted me to do a very up-market sort of accent," the cockney former model told the London Daily Telegraph. "It was all wrong, and I knew I'd never be able to keep it up. I was petrified and up all one night worrying."

After her husband, the British actor Leigh Lawson, urged her to explain that she had to be harself, Twiggy's character was transformed into a former chorus girl with a working-class background like her own.

While the first eight episodes of the series are being shot and the ratings wait begins, Twiggy is settling into Los Angeles with her husband and children: 12-year-old Carly, her daughter from her marriage to the American actor Michael Whitney, who died of a heart attack in 1983; and 14-year-old Ace, Lawson's son by the British actress Hayley Mills.

State Tax Update

ax rates on sales. digarettes and gasoline change from wyear to year in many of our 50 states. Here are some figures as of Oct. 1: · California has the highest sales tax rate, at 7.25%. · Colorado and Wyoming impose the lowest, at 3%. . Five of the 50 states Alaska, Delaware, Montana, New Hampshire and Oregon—have no sales tax.

• Rhode Island charges the highest state gasoline tax— 26 cents per gallon. Connecticut is next, at 25 cents per gallon, followed by Nebrasica (23.7 cents), Washington (23 cents) and North Carolina (22.6 cents). Florida is the lowest, at 4 cents per gallon.

• Virginia has the lowest cigarette tax in the country, at 2.5 cents per pack, while Connecticut has the highest, at 45 cents per pack.

Little Joe, RIP

ichsel Landon's final television performance was the two-hour pilot for the aborted CBS series Us. But the late star is perhaps best remembered for his first TV series, Bonanza.

Back at the Ponderosa Ranch, a marker is going up for Little Joe in the make believe burial site where there already are tombstones for Ben and Hoss Cartwright, who were played by Lorne Greens and Dan Blocker.

The Ponderosa Ranch, on the porth shore of Lake Tahoe, was the set for the filming of Bonanzs for six of its 14 years.
It was built at the spot where the "burning map" that opened each episode indicated the ranch would be south of Virginia City, Nev. Since the series

Jan jended in ion as Little los 1973, the ranch has attracted 300,000 visitors a year. During Landon's illness, wellwishers wrote him notes to be mailed from the ranch.

The actor died of cancer on July 1 at age 54. Memorial services held July 4 and 5 at the Ponderosa chapel were packed. A record 80,000 visitors made pilgrimages that month.

Today, guides at the Cartwright Ranch House still point to Little Joe's hat and coat, which hang on the wall next to those of Hoss.

It's odd how people can't seem to separate the actors from their characters.

Odd, too, is the fact that NBC originally developed the series featuring the wide-open West to help its parent company, RCA, sell the first color TV sets back in 1959.

My father gave his life in WW II and I would consider it a privilege to be at this ceremony. My sister and I were 4 1/2 and 6 years olds when our father was killed and there was no service here so we were never able to finalize his death. This event would possibly give us that opportunity.

I have enclosed one self-addressed envelope but would appreciate two invitations. One for myself and one for my sister.

Our father was PFC. Melvin Peter Gordon of Faribault, Minnesota.

Thank you.

Dedication of a Memorial Tree and the Unveiling of a Commemorative Stone to honor the casualties of World War II

Sunday morning, December 8, 1991 eleven o'clock Arlington National Cemetery Section 30

"IT'S IKE HIMSELF. PASS THE WORD."

Sgt. Bill Mauldin

The war's best known GI's, Willie and Joe, joined the Army when 22-year-old Sergeant Bill Mauldin began drawing cartoons in Sicily for the 45th Division's weekly newspaper.

He merited 64 days of KP duty in his first 120 days of military life, was awarded the Purple Heart, and won a Pulitzer prize for his military cartoons.

How This Ceremony Came About

In May 1974, when General Omar Bradley agreed to be No Greater Love's Honorary Chairman he said to Carmella LaSpada, founder of No Greater Love, "How unfortunate that No Greater Love wasn't around to comfort the children of those Americans who died in World War II." LaSpada promised NGL would do something for them, someday. In December 1990, the Parade Magazine cover story on NGL started a flow of letters from World War II "gold star" orphans. Through these letters, NGL became even more aware of the deep feelings of these forgotten sons and daughters of World War II casualties and their families.

In response to this outpouring of sentiment, NGL decided to have a tree dedication at Arlington National Cemetery on December 8, 1991, marking the 50th Anniversary of the United States entry into World War II. This dedication was planned as a living memorial not only to those Americans who died during World War II but also for all the loved ones they left behind.

The question was how to reach all the children and families of World War II casualties throughout the country. Walter Anderson, Editor of Parade, graciously agreed to place an announcement in Parade about No Greater Love's "So Proudly We Hail" tree dedication ceremony. The result of that announcement is that hundreds of you are here today to share in this special and historic occasion.

Louis M. Savary Vice President No Greater Love

A Salute to the Gold Star Sons and Daughters of World War II. . .

They are an old war's innocent victims, and their pain has shimmered across the years pure and undimmed. They continue through life with an empty room in their hearts where a father was supposed to live and laugh and love.

Theirs has been a life of questions that must not be asked because they cannot be answered. Am I all that is left of him? Just me and that box in the bureau with faded photographs, the letters and those ribbons and medals? Was he handsome? Did he love us best of all?

All their lives they longed to hear the footstep that would never fall, and wondered what might have been.

They will never forget and they are not forgotten. We salute them.

Joseph L. Galloway Board Member, No Greater Love

PARADE MAGAZINE September 22, 1991

We are all one, we are all an imperiled essence. If at the far end of the world a spirit degenerates, it drags down our spirit into its own degradation. This is why the salvation of the Universe is also our salvation, why solidarity among men is no longer a tenderhearted luxury but a deep necessity and self-preservation, as much a necessity as, in an army under fire, the salvation of your comrade-in-arms.

Nikos Kazantzakis

They Also Served

The adults around us at home were alternately scared and confident, discouraged and optimistic, weary and exhilarated. We kids felt the same full range of emotions in our confused, uncertain state, compounded by the tenderness of our years.

There was something new at the movies. Before the first showing of the day—the one o'clock matinee—the house lights went out and everyone stood at attention in the dark for the playing of our national anthem while the American flag filled the screen.

The government quickly slapped limits on all kinds of food, clothing, and other essentials we could buy in stores. The list of rationed items quickly grew long—meat, butter, fats, oils, coffee, canned foods, gasoline (four gallons a week at first, later cut to three), even shoes. Ham was fifty cents a pound, plus seven ration points. Other items were restricted—toasters, coffee percolators, waffle irons. plumbing fixtures, flashlights and batteries, even garbage cans. The production of toothpaste and shaving cream was ordered back to 1940 levels—and when you bought a new tube, you had to turn in your old one.

Families with members in the service proudly displayed a white satin flag with a red border and gold trim in the front windows of their homes, a blue star in the middle for each member in uniform. Those with someone who paid the last full measure of devotion took down the window flag with the blue star and sadly replaced it with one showing a gold star.

Two million women were working in defense jobs, building our airplanes, warships, tanks, guns and ammunition while we sang a musical salute to them, "Rosie, The Riveter."

"Man must evolve for all human conflicts a method which rejects revenge, aggression and retaliation. The foundation of such a method is love.

Victory program, scrap salvage campaign in Washington D.C., May, 1942. It was a bittersweet year (1943). American fathers, sons, husbands and boyfriends were being killed in massive numbers, in strange waters and far-off places we'd never heard of before. But we had held our own through 1942, and in '43 we were beginning to win. We began to believe in ourselves...

That's why the story of those four years is worth telling now to those too young to have lived through them, and retelling to those of us who did.

"Children Like Me"

A selection of responses to No Greater Love's invitations to "So Proudly We Hail" from sons and daughters of Americans who gave their lives during World War II.

"Thank you for giving us the opportunity to do something to honor my father's memory."

Kathleen Zoppi Hopatcong, NJ

"My father was a Navy pilot who died in the service of our country in 1945. I know that he would be proud for me to be part of this ceremony."

Patricia Baldewicz Stevenson Oklahoma, OK

"At least now children like me will have the opportunity to say goodbye."

Adeline M. Sotelo Moreno Valley, CA

"My father was killed in World War II. The bomber he was in was shot down over the North Sea, and, of course, no bodies were recovered. Never having had a gravesite to go to, I feel this will be my only chance to show my respects to my father—a man I never got to know."

Connie Rittichier Poway, CA

"I am very proud of the sacrifice my Daddy made for all of us to enjoy the freedom we take so much for granted."

Nancy Anne Rougvie Providence, RI

"I would deeply appreciate attending this ceremony. You see, it would be a part of my past made more visible and understandable."

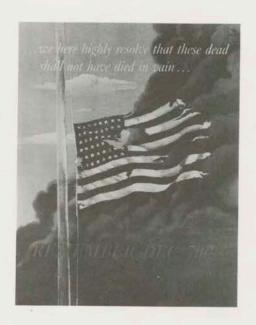

William E. Kiaune New London, CT

"Thank you No Greater Love for giving us an opportunity to have our "parade."

Isabel Teller Spruce Pine, NC

"It is nice to know that someone realizes that American soldiers did die in World War II and that there were war orphans left behind."

Leslie Ann Decell Newport News, VA

"War should belong to the tragic past, to history: It should find no place on humanity's agenda for the future."

Pope John Paul II

"My father was killed on Iwo Jima, March 9, 1945. I was 18 months old. So, of course, I have no memory of him. But I did grow up with an empty place in my heart and a longing for the father I never knew. So much attention has been focused on the families of servicemen killed in more recent wars, as well as our hostages. I think that's great, it's healthy and it heals. It is nice after all these years to see a little of that love aimed at children like me."

Sandra L. Keiser Reading, PA

"My father gave his life in World War II and I would consider it a privilege to be at this ceremony. My sister and I were 4½ and 6 years old when our father was killed and there was no service here so we were never able to finalize his death. This event would give us that opportunity."

Mary Jane (Gordon) Knutson Oakdale, MN

"I feel the capacity to care is the thing which gives life its deepest significance."

Pablo Casals

Newspaper extra on December 7, 1941, in Redding, California.

World War II

World War II began when Hitler's Germany attacked Poland by land, sea and air without the formality of a declaration of war.

If you were in New York that day, you could pick up the last edition of The Sun and, beneath, startling three-deck banner headlines, read that the Germans were denying that war had broken out. Their attack was "merely a counterblow in retaliation for last's night's alleged Polish attack on Gleiwitz."

War it was, nonetheless, and a war that remains the seminal event of our time, eclipsing in importance everything since, from the birth of the atomic age to the exploration of outer space. In fact, the atomic bomb that made possible almost instantaneous mass extinction of human beings and the rockets that have permitted humans to explore space are among many legacies of that war. The world that exists today, its problems and opportunities, is a direct result of events set in motion September 1, 1939.

The lives of everyone on the planet, the great majority of whom were not born then, were affected by that war and its outcome. Whether or not they know it, people everywhere continue to be influenced by those forces. Major events this summer in Europe, the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe and China are reminders of how inseparably linked to the past is the world today.

The war shaped existing national boundaries and international tensions. It led to emergence of the Soviet Union and the United States as the major competing superpowers and subsequently to China becoming a second great communist power.

The series of major and minor conflicts that have flared around the globe in the last half century—Korea, Vietnam, Cuba One (Bay of Pigs), Cuba

Two (missile crisis), Israel versus the Arab world, Afghanistan and countless guerrilla actions—are part of the ideological divisions left by the war. Out of that conflict came partition of Germany, the appearance of the Iron Curtain sealing off the Eastern bloc and the Cold War that has defined East-West tension for decades.

And, of course, the war inflicted a ghastly price—and especially for Europeans, one extracted for the second time in a generation. World War I had resulted in 38 million casualties, figures dwarfed by the carnage that began 50 years ago today. In the Soviet Union, about 20 million military and civilian lives were lost; in China, more than 7 million, primarily civilian; in Germany almost 7 million; and in Japan, about 2 million. The United States, which virtually alone among the warring nations escaped untouched at home by destruction, lost 405,399 lives from battle and other causes. Another 670,846 Americans were wounded.

From the U.S. standpoint, the war had three profound consequences. It thrust the nation into the position of world leadership that it continues to hold, though less securely and with new uncertainty. It reinforced the mythology of American invincibility and superiority, which in turn created costly complacency for which the nation now is beginning to pay in the face of far stiffer competition. Finally, it kindled a unity of spirit and national purpose that lasted for years and helped the United States to make stunning advances, though this unity has eroded steadily in recent years, making national consensus more difficult to achieve.

But it is not difficult to overstate the meaning of World War II, both the enormous suffering it created and the extraordinary changes it wrought. We are, all of us, everywhere, living with the results of the new world that war produced and will continue to do so for the rest of our lives.

No Greater Love Pledge of Peace

Hundreds of thousands of children throughout the world have made this pledge, created by No Greater Love during the United Nations International Year of Peace in 1986.

This is an on-going program in cooperation with the United Nations Peace Studies Unit. Its purpose is to make children aware of the power and responsibility that each human being has to help bring about world peace.

The No Greater Love Children's Pledge of Peace laser disk, containing signatures of children from 100 countries, was flown as part of the official flight kit aboard the orbiter "Challenger," January 28, 1986. The disk was recovered after the tragedy and was displayed at the United Nations and the U.S. Capitol.

As a legacy and gift to the children who will be born and live on this Planet Earth, I hereby commit myself to fostering peace. I promise to do everything I can to help create a common future of peace and justice for all human beings.

Unveiling of Memorial Stone and Dedication of Tree Sons, Daughters and Grandchildren of World War II Casualties The Peace to End All Wars

Let us think no more of the "war to end all wars" for only in complete destruction of all would that be possible.

So let us think of the Peace to end all wars and perhaps finally, working with the right tool we can create the goal.

Norma J. Griffiths

"It isn't enough to talk about peace.
One must believe in it. And it isn't enough to believe in it. One must work at it."

"Those who say that the greatness of forgiveness belongs only to God are the ones unable to show this quality themselves. Those who develop the power to forgive don't look for easy excuses not to use it but rather search for reasons to forgive others."

"Each time a man stands up for an ideal, or acts to improve the lot of others, or strikes out against injustice, he sends forth a tiny ripple of hope... and crossing each other from a million different centers of energy and daring those ripples builds a current that can sweep down the mightiest walls of oppression and resistance."

Robert Kennedy
