PAID FOR BY THE HATCH ELECTION COMMITTEE

UNITED STATES SENATOR

Alvin Hatch

ESPECIALLY NOW

Talking Points
Senator Robert Dole
Fundraiser for Senator Orrin G. Hatch
March 28, 1994

•Introduction/Neighborhood Caucus Day: It is a particular honor to be with you today because it is Utah's Neighborhood Caucus Day (formerly called Mass Meetings: this is the meeting in Utah where republicans vote for delegates to the county and state conventions). It is important that fellow republicans participate in these meetings and make our voices heard.

•Especially Now: Orrin's Campaign Theme -- Especially Now -- sums it up the best way possible. The stakes for Utah are higher than they have ever been. Utah Needs Orrin Hatch in the United States Senate -- Especially Now. Orrin is committed to do everything in his power to counteract President Clinton's tax and spend philosophies. Orrin Hatch possesses an enormous amount of power and influence in Congress to get things done for Utah. He is seasoned, strong and highly effective.

•Liberal Establishment: The liberal establishment would love to see Orrin defeated. He is an obstacle in their path. The White House has spent an unprecedented amount of energy with the Utah Democrats to come up with a viable candidate to run against Orrin Hatch. For example, President Clinton met personally with Bill Orton; Al Gore met with Doug Anderson; and numerous other meetings have taken place between white house staffers and other candidates. In all my years in Washington, I have never seen the White House so actively recruit an opponent to run against a single United States Senator. Don't they have better things to do, such as, take care of Bosnia, or how about answer questions about Whitewater.

•Assault on the West: Utah needs Orrin Hatch to fight for Utah's way of life. There are issues unique to the West and to Utah. The Eastern liberal establishment would like to inject their philosophies on Utah and dictate how Utahns should live and work. Orrin provides the proper perspective and represents the majority of Utahns in balancing the needs for economic progress with environmental protection.

•Health Care: Utah needs Orrin Hatch to provide necessary leadership in the health care debate. He is in a strategic position for Utah because he sits on three of the most influential committees in Congress which will be instrumental in shaping the final outcome in the health care debate -- the Labor and Human Resources, Judiciary, and Finance Committees.

•Crime: Utah needs Orrin Hatch to help solve the number one issue facing America today -- crime. He is the Republican Leader on this issue, Ranking Republican on the Judiciary, and a leader in the passage of the Senate Crime Bill last year. Several provisions in this legislation were issues he insisted be addressed including: gang violence, rural crime, additional police officers, the expansions of prisons, and the crack-down on violence against women and telemarketing fraud.

•Support: Make your voices heard in your support for Orrin Hatch. It is vitally important that he is reelected to represent Utah.

RE: UTAH - SALT LAKE CITY

LOREN "L.G." SPARKS HOLDS THE FDA LEASE IN LENEXA, KANSAS, FOR THE FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION.

THE NEW FACILITY, DEDICATED ABOUT 18 MONTHS AGO, CONTAINS STATE-OF-THE-ART RESEARCH LABS AS WELL AS OFFICES.

SPARKS BOUGHT THE BUILDING DURING THE CONSTRUCTION PHASE
FROM THE SUCCESSFUL BUILDER/BIDDER WHO RAN INTO FINANCIAL PROBLEMS.

SPARKS WROTE TO SENATOR HATCH AND CALLED ME, REQUESTING AN EXTENSION OF THE LEASE TO 15 YEARS. THE LEASE IN FORCE WAS FOR 5
YEARS WITH A 5 YEAR OPTION. GSA TOLD HIM AND US THAT THE TERMS
WERE PART OF THE BID AND COULD NOT BE CHANGED. INDEED, THIS FACTORED IN MAKING HIM THE LOW BIDDER. RECENTLY, HE ASKED GSA
FOR A 20 YEAR LEASE.

BOTTOM LINE - WE HAVE NOT AUTHORITY TO INTERCEDE IN CONTRACTS - AND DID NOT.

HE MENTIONED BEING A HATCH/GOP SUPPORTER AND COULD SHOW UP AT THE LUNCHEON.

TO: Senator Dole
FR: Kerry

*Attached are some thoughts for use at GOP fundraisers during Easter recess.

*Both the Hatch and Furman campaigns have also said that you may want to highlight the Clinton "war on the west," and how important it is to have Senators standing up for property rights. Whit is preparing background information for you.

*As we discussed, I leave for Oregon on Tuesday, March 29, to help Denny for a week or so. I'll have a computer and fax, and will be available at all times if you should need anything.

MEMORANDUM

TO: SENATORS DOLE AND SIMPSON
FR: RICHARD MCBRIDE
DT: FEBRUARY 24, 1994
RE: UTAH

At present there is no Democrat candidate. Congressman Bill Orton, a conservative Democrat who prides himself on openly abandoning the Democrats on high-profile votes, was poised to run, but then took himself out of the race. After much prompting from state party officials, Orton said he would reconsider, but finally announced that he would instead seek re-election to the Congress. Grethe (pronounced Gretta) Peterson, all but assured of the nomination, surprised everyone by dropping out of the race. Most recently, the Democrats have been working to recruit '92 Senate candidate Doug Anderson, who lost in the '92 Democrat primary to former Congressman Wayne Owens. Anderson has said that if he runs he wants the Utah Democrats to refashion the party into a broad-based movement that tolerates all points of view, and unlike in '92, Anderson does not plan to use his substantial wealth to finance his campaign. The Democrats are running out of time: the filing deadline is in 2 1/2 weeks (March 17).

Hatch has received his share of negative publicity in the state because of the BCCI scandal. However, both the U.S. Justice Department and the Senate Ethics Committee have cleared him of any wrongdoing. This makes Hatch less vulnerable and much harder to beat than was previously thought.

Hatch Nearly Escapes Utah's Filing Deadline Without Democratic Foe

At Last Minute, Former Hill Staffer Agrees to the Uphill Battle

By Craig Winneker

With just moments to go before the filing deadline, Utah Democrats fielded a challenger to three-term Sen. Orrin Hatch (R), but he's not the person they had hoped would make the race.

After several other candidates decided against running, the task fell to Pat Shea, a former Democratic National Committeeman and unsuccessful 1992 gubernatorial candidate.

Shea, 46, filed his candidacy with the Secretary of State on Thursday afternoon, just a half-hour before the 5 p.m. deadline.

A former chairman of the state Democ-atic party, Shea also has experience as a Congressional aide: He worked as an investigator for the House Judiciary Committee in 1973 during its probe of the Kent State shooting; as assistant staff director of the Senate Intelligence Committee in 1975-76; and as counsel to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in 1979-1980. He now works as a lawyer in Salt Lake City.

In the 1992 gubernatorial primary, Shea was defeated by former Judge Stewart Hanson, 57 to 43 percent. Hanson went on to place third in the general election — receiving just 23 percent of the vote and finishing 11 points behind Independent Merrill Cook. Hatch has watched as several potential challengers passed on the race — perhaps dispirited by Senate Ethics Committee and Justice Department decisions last year to clear him of any wrongdoing after probing his ties to the Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

The most prominent among the would-be candidates, Rep. Bill Orton (D), had scored well against Hatch in hypothetical general election matchups. (In the most recent survey, taken at the end of December by Dan Jones and Associates, Hatch was held below 50 percent and led Orton by just 6 points, 47 to 41 percent.)

But Orton said he didn't want to endure a hard-fought primary race against Democratic activist Grethe Peterson, who had already begun a campaign, and said he would instead run for re-election to his House seat. Peterson, however, then shocked party leaders in January by scuttling her campaign, citing fundraising frustrations.

Hatch reported a $1 million war chest at the end of 1993.

Orton said he would reconsider his decision but eventually reaffirmed his intention to run for re-election to the House. That left Democrats looking to businessman Doug Anderson, who had lost a bitter Senate primary in 1992 against then-Rep. Wayne Owens (D).

Anderson angered party leaders in that primary because of his relentless attacks on Owens, who went on to lose the general election. But those leaders were apparently ready to forgive Anderson if he would make the Hatch challenge. They also hoped he would be able to use his personal wealth to fund the campaign, as he had done in 1992 to the tune of $1 million.

Party sources said last week that Anderson decided not to make the race because his partner in a business consulting firm had health problems.

In a telephone interview, he said he had told party leaders three months ago that he was available for a Senate race if no one else would run.

"I think it's very important to have competition in our political process," Shea said.

Meanwhile, in Utah's 1st district, Rep. James Hansen (R) will face a challenge from Bobbie Coray, the Cache County economic development director.

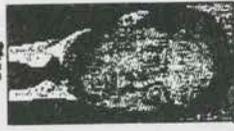

In the 2nd district, freshman Rep. Karen Shepherd (D) will have to take on two general election challengers: her 1992 opponent, Republican Enid Greene Waldholtz; and millionaire Independent Cook.

And in the 3rd district, three Republicans are vying for the nomination to face Orton: Emery County Commissioner Dixie Thompson; banker Brent White; and Utah County Commissioner Gary Herbert.

Hansen and Orton are heavy favorites for re-election, but the three-way 2nd district race promises to be hotly contested.

Shea will challenge Sen. Hatch

By RALPH WAKLEY
SALT LAKE CITY — Pat Shea is a local Democrat who is a former state party chairman and online candidate for Utah governor.

Shea

So it was natural for him to try to help the Democrats find a U.S. Senate candidate to challenge Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch.

"I kind of took me by surprise. I kept arguing other people to do it and eventually I was the only one left," said Shea, who filled out the Senate candidacy form and paid the $971 fee just 30 minutes before Thursday's filing deadline.

As one prominent Democrat after another dropped out of the race to go against Hatch, a three-term senator, it appeared state Sen. Scott Howell of Murray eventually would be the party's choice.

"I was ready to jump in," said Howell, holding up the form he already had filled out. "It was close. But, in the end, it was personal finances. The money gap was just too big."

So, instead of Hatch, Howell went in the Lieutenant Governor's Office with Shea to lend his support. Earlier this week Salt Lake businessman Doug Anderson also stepped aside because his partner is undergoing lengthy cancer treatment. They joined Congressman Bill Orpin and Greibe Peterson on the sidelines.

From 1B
oath, Kelleen Leishman, state director of elections, asked Shea, "Are you a member of an established party?"
Shea smiled and responded, "I'm a member of the Democratic Party."
Hatch campaign manager Charlie Evans said, "We've always expected the Democrats would come up with a strong candidate."
In his unsuccessful 1992 gubernatorial campaign, Shea spent only about $425,000, but he also ended up in the black. He vowed his Senate campaign also "will be run without debt." His first goal is to raise more than $500,000 — enough to be noticed — and then in the range of $1.5 million if he is to have a real chance of winning.

"Running for the Senate makes it easier to raise money," said Evans. But he said running against Hatch will dry up some funding sources while opening up others "because there's an anybody-but-Orrin-Hatch mentality on the East Coast."
Hatch reportedly has spent nearly $800,000 already and Evans said, "We have well over $1 million cash in hand." He said Hatch expects to spend up to $3 million in this year's Senate race.
Shea said he hopes to cut expenses by running joint campaigns with Orton. Congresswoman Karen Shepherd and with Bobbie Coray, who is running against Republican Jim Hansen in the 1st District Congressional race. Coray was Shea's lieutenant governor running mate in the 1992 campaign.
The other candidates for the U.S. Senate are: Republicans Kent Butler of Santaquin, Stephen Christian Heidt of Magna, and Gilbert Majcher of West Valley City; Democrat John W. Benson of Midvale; independents Craig Oliver of West Jordan and Bill Rigley of Sandy; Nelson Gonzales, Salt Lake, of the Socialist Workers Party; Lawrence Topham, Salt Lake, of the Independent American Party; and Gary R. Van Horn, Sterling, of the American Party.

In addition to Coray, Hansen also will face independent Dub Lawrence, a former Davis County sheriff and county commissioner, in the 1st District. Lawrence ran unsuccessfully against Hansen two years ago as the Independent Party's candidate.
Shepherd is the only Democrat in the 2nd District Congressional race. In her bid for a second term, Shepherd is being challenged by Republicans Martin Banta, Teri Hendricks and Enid Greene Waldholtz of Salt Lake, and Jim Foley of West Jordan; and by Independent Party founder Merrill Cook of Salt Lake and Socialist Workers' candidate Brian Pugh of Salt Lake.

The 3rd District is virtually a mirror of the 2nd, with incumbent Democrat Orton looking at five Republicans — K. Dale Despain and Tom Dracshil of Provo, Gary Herbert of Orem, Dixie Thompson of Orangeville and Brent White of Elsinore — plus Barbara Greenway, Salt Lake, of the Socialist Workers Party.
This year's next political deadline is March 28, when the parties hold their neighborhood caucus meetings. The county nominating conventions then can begin the next day, March 29, and will run through April 30.
The parties will have the first two weeks in May to hold their state nominating conventions, followed by primary election day on June 28.

NEARING DEADLINE

Shea joins the race as field is set for '94

By Bob Bernick Jr.
Deseret News political editor

Pat Shea

Some think they can really win and know they can make a difference in government. Others just want a little attention, maybe hoping that fate will give them a chance to serve.

Whatever their motivation, the large field of candidates for the 1994 elections is set following Thursday night's filing deadline. (A complete list of all candidates will run in Saturday editions of the Deseret News).

Top on the ticket finds late-comer Pat Shea, a Democrat facing 18-year incumbent GOP Sen. Orrin Hatch in the U.S. Senate race. Shea stepped up to the plate after Democrat Doug Anderson took himself out of the race Wednesday and state Senate Minority Leader Scott Howell jumped aside Thursday afternoon.

Last-minute Republicans Warren William Hardy, Kent Butler, Stephen Christian Heidt and Gilbert Majcher also filed against

Hatch, but their $971 filing fees are probably wasted. Barring any unforeseen disaster for Hatch, he'll be the Republican nominee. Other last-minute filing surprises:

• Former Davis County sheriff and county commissioner Dub Lawrence is once again challenging U.S. Rep. Jim Hansen within the Republican Party. Lawrence ran as a Republican against Hansen four years ago but was soundly defeated in the 1st Congressional District race. Lawrence then switched to the Independent Party in 1992 but lost again. Now he's filed as a Republican, again. Democrat Bobbie Corey will be Hansen's main challenge in his bid for an unprecedented eighth term.

• Utah Senate President Arnold Christensen, R-Sandy, will retire. During the 1994 Legislature, Christensen confirmed that he wouldn't run again for Senate president but hinted he'd seek reelection. He won't. He (failed to file and will retire after 16 years in office, a decade as president.

Please see POLITICS on B2

• Former Salt Lake City/County Health director Harry Gibbons is getting into politics, filing for the state Senate. Also, AFL-CIO state executive director Ed Mayne filed for the Senate. So did Mayne's wife, Karen. In fact, they both filed for the same seat as Democrats and so officially are challenging each other.

But the real news of the day is Shea.

Thursday, Shea said he'd been thinking about the race for some time. Other Democrats — mainly Anderson and Howell — were ahead of him. And Shea had had enough of Democratic primaries — this would be his race alone or he wouldn't get in.

In 1992 Shea ran for governor. Against him was fellow Democratic attorney Stewart Hanson Jr. Shea, a practicing Catholic, early on said he supported Utah's 1991 anti-abortion law — at the time still being challenged in federal court — that basically stopped abortion on demand. Hanson was pro-choice, and his campaign soon became a rallying point for pro-choice advocates and various women's groups. The anti-abortion law was struck down, and Shea lost the Democratic primary election. Hanson went on to place third in the governor's race — an embarrassing showing for the party.

Now Shea will have the nomination without a primary fight. (John Benson also filed as a Democrat in the race, but party officials have never met the man. Benson, a conservative constitutionalist, is given little chance of surviving the state Democratic Convention). And, Shea says, he'll have the support of traditional Democratic groups. "We had a luncheon meeting on Thursday and all the groups were there and voiced their support, including Utahns For Choice," Shea said. "I want to be a unifying force in this campaign, not a divisive one."

Shea says his "fresh" approach to politics and government — compared with Hatch's "long, long" record — will be the main issue of the campaign.

Picking up on the state Democratic Party's theme in the Hatch race: "24 Years Is Too Long, Down The Hatch," Shea said: "Eighteen years is sufficient. You become so ensconced after so much time. We need a fresh look at the problems. We also need someone who has some pull with Washington — with this administration."

Hatch already has more than $1 million in his war chest and could easily raise and spend $4 million. Shea says he'll be competitive on the money side, raising and spending upwards of $1 million. But money won't matter that much, he believes.

"In 1992, $12 million was spent in Utah's Senate race. About 80 percent of that went to TV and other advertising. It got to the point where people tired of it (the advertising)."

Shea, always big on debates and forums, says he wants a lot of those this campaign season. And he'll probably shine in debates. Shea is a graduate of Stanford University, where he was student body president. Like President Clinton, Shea was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University in England. Following that honor, he went to Harvard Law School. He is 46 years old, married to a nurse and is the father of two boys. He was the corporate counsel for KUTV Channel 2 for several years but is now in private law practice.

He has considerable ties to Washington — which he hopes will help him with some national fund raising — having worked twice on Congressional committees. He was Utah State Democratic Party chairman 1983-85. He was Utah's national committeeman 1988-92.

Demo Attorney Shea To Oppose Hatch In U.S. Senate Race

By Dan Harris and Tony Semerad
THE SALT LAKE TRIBUNE

Republican U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch was among the first to learn Thursday that attorney Pat Shea would be his Democratic challenger in this year's election.

Sandwiched between a closed-door meeting of Democratic insiders and the deadline-beating filing of his candidate papers, Shea called Hatch, who is a friend.

"I have a great deal of respect for him. But there were issues, including the length of service in the Senate, that we would differ on," said Shea.

Indeed, the 59-year-old Hatch's 18 years in the Senate will be the Democratic drumbeat until the Nov. 8 election.

Hatch and Shea are the top mainstream candidates from among a field of 11 in the U.S. Senate race.

In the other major congressional races, Democratic Rep. Karen Shepherd faces a rematch with Republican Enid Greene Waldsohl. But this race won't be as simple: Independent Party candidate Merrill Cook and Republicans Teri Hendricks, Jim Foley and Martin Santa have entered the race. Also running is Socialist Workers Party candidate Brian Pugh, a 25-year-old steelworker.

Democratic Rep. Bill Orton, who considered but ruled out a Senate bid, will run again for his seat in Utah's 3rd Congressional District. The former tax attorney is unopposed within his own party in his bid for a third term. But five Republicans have filed for the seat.

GOP hopefuls include Utah County Commissioner Gary Herbert; Emery County Commissioner Dixie Thompson; Salina banking executive Brent White; and two Provo residents, K. Dale DeSpain and Tom Draschil. Running as a Socialist Workers Party candidate is Barbara Greenway of Salt Lake City.

Republican Rep. Jim Hansen has filed to retain the 1st Congressional District seat he has held for 14 years. At 61, the Farmington native says major campaign themes will be military cutbacks and public-land policies of the Clinton administration.

Democrat Bobbie Coray, a 47-year-old Cache County economic development director, has her party's nomination for the district seat. Coray ran for lieutenant governor on a ticket with Shea in the 1992 election.

William "Dub" Lawrence, a former Davis County commissioner, is challenging Hansen for the Republican nomination.

Missing from the pack of dozens of candidates filing for state legislative offices was Senate President Arnold Christensen.

The Sandy Republican decided to give up his seat and the top leadership spot he has held for a record-setting 10 years.

As crowded as most races are with candidates, Democrats almost drew a blank in the only statewide contest.

Shea snatched in to file his candidacy in the state election office with just 20 minutes to spare.

HATCH

Democrat Shea Jumps Into Race Against Hatch

Putting him on the back as he signed the forms were two Democrats who had considered getting into the race. But Doug Anderson and state Sen. Scott Howell decided in the final hours to stay out.

Shea said the challenge fell to him by default: "If there's no one else willing to step up to the mark, I'm willing to do it."

Hatch declined public comment on the challenge. But campaign spokesman Charlie Evans said he was surprised that the Democrats' party-backed candidate was Shea,

"who I never heard mentioned in this race until yesterday."

Shea, a 46-year-old attorney, is no stranger to politics. A longtime Democratic activist, he served as state party chairman from 1983-1985 and ran for governor in 1992.

A conservative Democrat, Shea was defeated in the gubernatorial primary by pro-abortion rights candidate Stewart Hanson Jr. Hanson then went on to finish third in the final election behind winning Republican Gov. Mike Leavitt and Independent candidate Merrill Cook.

The abortion rights forces who helped end his 1992 campaign have not yet made a commitment to support him this time around. But Utahns for Choice director Beverly Cooper said, "we need to have a good long talk with him."

Hatch and Shea start at the head of a pack of 11 candidates, from West Jordan to Sterling, representing seven different political parties.

Three Republicans want to unseat Hatch: Stephen Christian Heidt of Magna, Santaquin resident Kent Butler, and Gilbert Majcher from West Valley City.

Shea goes up against John Benson, a Salt Lake City Democrat.

Also running for the U.S. Senate are two Independent Party candidates, Bill Rigley from Sandy and Craig Oliver, a West Jordan resident who ran unsuccessfully as a Democrat against now-retired Sen. Jake Garn in 1986.

Nelson Gonzalez will be the U.S. Senate candidate for the Socialist Workers Party. Lawrence Topham from Salt Lake City is running as an Independent-American Party candidate, and Gary Van Horu of Sterling is on the American Party ticket.

The Salt Lake Tribune EDITORIALS

Utah's '94 Statewide Election Prospects Include Mixed Review of Possibilities

Utah's congressional contests now have a full and formal field for this year's elections. Whether ensuing campaigns will generate excitement, significance or the unexpected is another question.

In the only statewide contest, for U.S. senator, the initial impact is a let-down caused by the Democratic Party. As a last-minute candidate, volunteering because, apparently, no one else would take the chance, Salt Lake City lawyer Pat Shea declared himself the Democrat opponent to Republican incumbent Orrin Hatch, who is a cinch to overcome nuisance competition from political unknowns Warren Hardy, Kent Butler, Stephen C. Heldt and Gilbert Majcher.

Prospects for the eventual partisan contest aren't auspicious. If a challenge to Mr. Hatch's bid for a fourth term is to be credible, it must be wholehearted, well managed and organized and, above all, heavily financed.

In most of those regards, Mr. Shea enters trailing badly. Recruited because no one else could be, he seems less than enthusiastically committed. Agreeable to the chore at Thursday's filing deadline, his organization is substantially behind Sen. Hatch's.

Moreover, while it's reported that the senator has already raised $1 million for his campaign, Mr. Shea was until recently still retiring debts from an unsuccessful primary attempt to run as the Democrats' candidate for governor in 1992. At this point, Sen. Hatch can be considered the clear front-runner.

The fault, if there is any, is with the Democrats as a party, not Mr. Shea. Loosely organized, they dozed after Grethe Peterson, a community activist with no previous experience as an elective office-seeker, announced she would lead them against Sen. Hatch. When she abruptly withdrew and the only other likely replacement, 3rd District Congressman Bill Orton, preferred to run again for the U.S. House, stunned Democrats were caught lacking a back-up. Well-run political parties don't operate that way.

As a matter of fact, on their own, Mr. Orton and the other Democrat in Utah's congressional delegation, 2nd District Rep. Karen Shepherd, have efficiently prepared for their re-election campaigns this fall. Not that they aren't considered vulnerable.

Unopposed for her party's primary, Rep. Shepherd looks so beatable to others that Republicans Teri Hendricks, Jim Foley, Martin Santa and Enid Greene Waldholtz have all declared for the privilege. They're joined by perennial Independent Party candidate Merrill Cook and Socialist Workers Party nominee Brian Pugh.

Also uncontested by any other Democrats, Mr. Orton can watch Republicans Gary Herbert, Dixie Thompson, Brent White, K. Dale DeSpain and Tom Draschil scrap for the opportunity to oust him and shoulder aside the Socialist Workers Party contender, Barbara Greenaway.

Interestingly, seven-term Congressman Jim Hansen, the 1st District Republican, has an inner-party rival, Dub Lawrence, while his Democrat opponent, Bobbie Coray, has no primary challenge.

For now, the House contests are the more intriguing. Conventional wisdom holds that Rep. Hansen will reach the general election ballot, as will Ms. Waldholtz, in a repeat contest against Rep. Shepherd.

Mr. Cook's presence complicates the 2nd District forecast. A proven vote-getter, but never a victor, does he help Rep. Shepherd or Ms. Waldholtz?

The 2nd District GOP preliminary cavalry charge should engage the oddsmakers. Maybe, as election day draws near, the Hatch-Shea collision will also throw more sparks than now seems probable. Politics can confound predictions; election campaigns do provoke surprises. Utah isn't immune to either.

By tonight, Demos will have a viable candidate — maybe

No, definitely, party chief says — and the hopeful will be Howell or Shea.

By Bob Bonick Jr.
Deseret News political editor

First it was Bill, then it was Grethe, then it was Doug. Now, it's nobody.

But by 5 p.m. tonight, Democrats will have somebody filed to run against GOP Sen. Orrin Hatch this year. Maybe.

All right — it won't be "maybe," promises Democratic state Chairman Dave Jones. It will be Scott Howell or Pat Shea.

You'd think holding the honor of challenging Hatch would be fought over. Instead, it's like root canal work — do it only when you absolutely have to.

Doug Anderson decided Wednesday not to run against Hatch. Yes, Anderson said he was 90 percent sure he would. Yes, he'd traveled back to Washington, D.C., a week ago to talk with Senate big shots and Vice President Al Gore. Yes, he was all ready to do it.

But then he decided not to. Jones says one of Anderson's partners in his international consulting firm has become seriously ill, an illness diagnosed just two weeks ago. "His partner supported him (two years ago) when Doug ran before (for the Senate). He just couldn't leave his business now, he has to support his partner like he supported him."

So, Anderson — who ran but lost the Democratic Senate nomination in 1992 to Wayne Owens — is out of the race. It's almost three strikes and you're out for the Democrats, since Anderson is the third viable candidate to refuse to run.

First, U.S. Rep. Bill Orton seriously considered the race. But he decided not to run against Hatch after Grethe Peterson formally announced in early December. Orton out, Peterson in. But then Peterson "lost the fire in the belly" to run, and she got out in January. Democrats went shopping.

Anderson, who agreed to think about it, did more than that. During the last week of the Legislature, he attended a House Democratic caucus and couldn't have talked more like a candidate if he'd tried. He then flew back to Washington for a round of talks.

But with nine hours until the filing deadline, Democrats are looking again.

"I think Scott will run," says Jones. "If not, Pat will. Pat wants to run but will defer to Scott. I think."

For Howell, the minority leader of the Utah Senate, a campaign this year would be his third in six years. If Shea runs, it would be his second major contest in two years.

Howell, an IBM executive, ran for the state Senate in 1990 and 1992. Shea, a local attorney and former state party chairman, ran

Demos Try to Scrape Up Last-Minute Senate Candidate

By Paul Rolly 3/17/94
THE SALT LAKE TRIBUNE

Going into the final day for Utah candidates to file, Democrats have no one to challenge three-term incumbent Sen. Orrin Hatch.

Doug Anderson, who last week said he was more than 90% sure he would run for the Senate, told Democratic leaders Wednesday he would not file because of private business pressures.

He even went to Washington, D.C., with Utah Democratic Chairman Dave Jones last week at the invitation of Democratic leaders in the U.S. Senate and met with Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell and Vice President Al Gore. But, he informed Jones on Wednesday that his business partner in their international consulting firm had become ill, forcing Anderson to continue the business operations himself.

Democrats, scrambling for a mainline candidate ever since Grethe Peterson of Park City decided in December to withdraw from the race, first had placed their hopes on 3rd Congressional District Rep. Bill Orton of Provo.

He waited until February to say he would seek re-election to his present seat.

Anderson has been the only establishment political type courted by party officials, although constitutionalist John Benson announced Saturday he would file as Democrat. He had not as of 5 p.m. Wednesday.

"At this point, we don't have a candidate," said Jones. "We are having meetings [today], and by deadline we will have a candidate."

Meetings have been scheduled today with State Senate Minority Leader Scott Howell, a Salt Lake City businessman, and Salt Lake attorney Pat Shea, who was defeated in the Democratic primary for governor two years ago.

Howell has indicated he would run if Anderson did not run, but he hedged Wednesday. "I thought all along Anderson would run," he said. "Now I'll have to make a decision and I will have a decision by tomorrow."

Jones said the Democrats have "no other options [other than Howell and Shea] at this time, unless Doug Anderson changes his mind."

That possibility is not expected to happen.

Mr. Shea is an attorney and currently runs a private lobbying/legal practice in Salt Lake City. He is a former staff member of the Senate Foreign Affairs committee, and has represented and lobbied for many of Utah's largest media interests.

Mr. Shea is also the former chairman of the Utah State Democratic Party. In 1992, he ran an unsuccessful primary campaign for Utah's gubernatorial seat. He is an effective fundraiser and is well-known in Utah and Washington.

Several news clippings re: Mr. Shea's announcement are attached.

EVANS-NOVAK POLITICAL REPORT, March 22, 1994

Iowa: Gov. Terry Branstad (R) has started to tie Rep. Fred Grandy (R) to the Clinton Lite health care plan he co-sponsored, but Grandy has responded by hitting Branstad as a tax hiker. Grandy has begun to outline his tax cut proposals amid the Branstad salvos the upshot being that this contest will continue in a negative vein. Leaning Republican Retention.

New York: The messy search for a GOP candidate got more confused with the announcement that former Rep. Bill Green (R) was entering the fray. Green's run does nothing to unite the warring factions arrayed behind State Sen. George Pataki (R) and NYU Dean Herb London (R) and the pro-choice Green is unlikely to garner much support from conservatives. With Gov. Mario Cuomo (D) looking his most vulnerable in years, the GOP is on the verge of cleaving so deeply that Cuomo could win in a walk. Probable Democratic Retention.

Senate '94

Maine: Rep. Tom Andrews (D) and Rep. Olympia Snowe (R) are already sparring over support for the balanced budget amendment, setting the stage for what could be the most evenly matched race this year. The latent clout of retiring Sen. George Mitchell (D) gives Andrews the early edge, but it should remain close through November. Leaning Democratic Retention.

Ohio: Legal services entrepreneur Joel Hyatt (D) may be losing some of his luster as a recent poll shows Cuyahoga Co. Commissioner Mary Boyle (D) closing somewhat. Hyatt still has a big money edge, although Boyle is picking up support from EMILY's list which could grow if she makes a move.

Texas: Businessman and Perotite Richard Fisher (D) is given the edge in the April 12 runoff against former State Atty. Gen. Jim Mattox (D). Fisher is given a better shot than Mattox against Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison (R), but is still considered a decided underdog. Probable Republican Retention.

Utah: Republicans received very good news that one of their most vulnerable, Sen. Orrin Hatch (R), will be challenged by a third-tier Democrat, former DNC committeeman Pat Shea (D). Hatch still has negatives, but Shea is not the caliber candidate Democrats hoped to recruit. Probable Republican Retention.

Virginia: The hands of Nancy Reagan, former Sen. Paul Laxalt (R.-Nev.) and Sen. John Warner (R.-Va.) are clearly visible in former President Ronald Reagan's letter condemning ex-NSC Aide Oliver North (R). North is so far ahead for the nomination at the state convention that it is doubtful ex-OMB Director James Miller (R) can overtake him, but the Reagan letter hurts for the general election against Sen. Chuck Robb (D). Two other developments could chip away at North: supporters of home-schooler Mike Farris (R) are re-thinking blanket support of North as a possible waste of their new clout, and Gov. George Allen (R) is being pressed by Miller supporters, including Warner, to join the anti-North crusade.

Meanwhile, the re-airing of stories of his sexual indiscretions have hurt Robb, confirming the prospect of two badly weakened candidates meeting in November and again stirring interest by ex-Gov. Douglas Wilder (D) to run as an independent. Leaning Republican Takeover.

Wyoming: Gov. Mike Sullivan (D) continues to keep Democrats guessing about whether he will take on Rep. Craig Thomas (R). Sullivan has skipped several self-imposed deadlines for announcing his intentions in '94, but the filing deadline is not until June. Thomas is regarded as a tough foe with a track record of winning statewide as an at-large congressman, but a recent poll found his name ID relatively low. Should Sullivan stay out, Secretary of State Kathy Karpan (D) is

*17 UT 02: COOK ENTRANCE HAS UTAHNS THINKING THREE WAY

'92 independent Gov. candidate Merrill Cook (I) "is back. The five-time election loser has not had enough." Cook was scheduled to announce his candidacy for frosh Rep. Karen Shepherd's (D) seat 2/22 in front of Salt Lake City's ZCMI Center. Cook: "I would say I have lost my way up the ladder ... This is my time. This is my race." The "millionaire industrialist who can boast of a Harvard business degree and a rich personal and professional life, is still hungry for the one star that has eluded him after a decade of trying -- election to public office." Cook has lost bids for Salt Lake School Board, Salt Lake City mayor, Salt Lake County commissioner and twice for gov. Cook: "In 1992, the incumbent promised not to raise taxes and then voted for the biggest tax hike in America's history. Karen Shepherd has lost the trust of the people of Utah and should not be returned to Congress." Later, in an interview: "I don't intend to lose this race ... This is a winnable district for me. I tied [GOP Gov.] Mike Leavitt in this district" in the '92 gov. race. His 2nd place finish in '92 "marked the first time someone other than a Republican or Democrat placed in the top two spots in a governor's race" (Rolly, SALT LAKE TRIBUNE, 2/22). GOPer: '92 nominee Enid Greene Waldholtz (R).

HE'S EVERYWHERE: The UT House "overwhelmingly approved" a bill to limit state legislators and statewide elected officials to 12 years in office. "Lurking behind" the debate was Cook's petition drive to get term limits on the 11/94 ballot. Cook said he will abandon his petition -- "and the 50,000 signatures he has already collected" -- if the bill passes the Senate and is signed by Gov. Leavitt. Cook's petition includes a provision for a runoff for candidates who receive less than 50% of the vote. The GOP-controlled House defeated a measure to impose the same limits on U.S. House and Senate members from UT (TRIBUNE, 2/23).
