SENATOR BOB DOLE
SENATE REPUBLICAN CONFERENCE
PHILADELPHIA

A LITTLE OVER 200 YEARS AGO, A GROUP ABOUT THE SAME SIZE AS OURS MET HERE IN PHILADELPHIA. THEY HAD NAMES
LIKE GEORGE WASHINGTON,
JAMES MADISON, AND BENJAMIN
FRANKLIN....I THINK STROM MAY HAVE BEEN HERE, AS WELL.

THEY MET TO WRITE A DOCUMENT WHICH LEFT NO DOUBT WHAT AMERICA STOOD FOR, AND WHAT CITIZENS COULD EXPECT FROM THEIR GOVERNMENT.

AND AS WE MEET THIS WEEKEND AND LOOK AHEAD TO
THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS, IT SEEMS TO ME THAT IN THE

COMING WEEKS, REPUBLICANS IN
THE SENATE AND HOUSE SHOULD LEAVE NO DOUBT WHERE WE STAND, AND LEAVE NO DOUBT
OVER WHAT AMERICANS CAN EXPECT IF THEY GIVE US
CONTROL OF CONGRESS.

*I WAS IN QUITE A FEW STATES OVER THE RECESS,
MAKING THE PITCH FOR VOTING

REPUBLICAN THIS FALL...AND WHEREVER I WENT, I HEARD THE SAME QUESTIONS: WHAT DIFFERENCE WOULD IT MAKE IF
WE GIVE REPUBLICANS CONTROL
OF THE HOUSE? WHAT
DIFFERENCE WOULD IT MAKE IF
WE GIVE REPUBLICANS CONTROL
OF THE SENATE?

I BELIEVE IT WOULD SERVE
REPUBLICANS VERY WELL THIS NOVEMBER IF WE WERE ALL
PREPARED TO ANSWER THAT QUESTION. DESPITE THE FACT THAT WE ALL KNOW IT WOULD MAKE A MAJOR DIFFERENCE,
THERE ARE A LOT OF PEOPLE
OUT THERE WHO THINK THAT A CHANGE IN THE PARTY THAT

CONTROLS THE HOUSE AND THE SENATE WOULDN'T CHANGE THE STATUS QUO.

*IF WE ARE TO HAVE ANY CHANCE OF TAKING THE MAJORITY, WE NEED TO CONVINCE THE AMERICAN PEOPLE THAT IT MAKES A BIG,
BIG, DIFFERENCE IN THEIR LIVES
WHETHER ORRIN HATCH OR JOE

BIDEN IS CHAIRMAN OF THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE--
WHETHER NANCY KASSEBAUM OR TEDDY KENNEDY IS CHAIRMAN OF THE LABOR COMMITTEE--
WHETHER PETE DOMENICI OR JIM
SASSER IS CHAIRMAN OF THE BUDGET COMMITTEE.

WHAT I WOULD LIKE TO ARRIVE AT IN THE NEXT FEW WEEKS IS A LIST OF 10 OR SO
ISSUES...A LIST WE CAN TAKE TO
THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND SAY,
"GIVE REPUBLICANS A MAJORITY
AND HERE'S WHAT WILL BE ON TOP OF THE AGENDA."

A BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT.

A LINE-ITEM VETO.

A CAPITAL GAINS TAX RATE REDUCTION.

REPEALING THE CLINTON RETROACTIVE TAX.

AN END TO THE GUTTING OF OUR ARMED SERVICES.

AN END TO TURNING OVER OUR FOREIGN POLICY TO THE UNITED NATIONS.

 R E D U C T I O N O F
REGULATORY INTRUSION ON SMALL BUSINESSMEN AND WOMEN.

REDUCTION OF COSTLY AND FRIVOLOUS LITIGATION THROUGH CIVIL JUSTICE REFORM.

TOUGH ANTI-CRIME
LEGISLATION THAT DOESN'T PULL ITS PUNCHES.

 AN END TO UNFUNDED GOVERNMENT MANDATES ON STATES AND CITIES.

HEALTH CARE REFORM
HELPING THOSE WHO CAN'T AFFORD, CAN'T GET, OR CAN'T KEEP HEALTH INSURANCE--

WITHOUT TURNING THE SYSTEM OVER TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

A "CEASE FIRE" IN THE CLINTON ADMINISTRATION'S
"WAR ON THE WEST."

ONCE WE REACH A LIST WE ALL CAN STAND BEHIND, THEN
EVERY REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE CAN SIGN THIS DOCUMENT, AND

TAKE IT TO THE VOTERS AND SAY,
"YOU HAVE OUR WORD ON THIS...GIVE REPUBLICANS A MAJORITY, AND HERE'S WHAT WE WILL FIGHT FOR...AND IF WE DON'T DO ALL WE CAN TO COMPLETE OUR AGENDA, THEN
YOU CAN PUT US RIGHT BACK IN THE MINORITY."

STAFF IS NOW PASSING OUT
A WHOLE LIST OF POSSIBILITIES
WHICH WE HAVE PUT TOGETHER
WITH YOUR HELP OVER THE PAST
WEEKS...AND WE STILL NEED
SOME NEW IDEAS...SOME NEW WAYS OF DRAWING A DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE TWO PARTIES....BECAUSE IF WE DON'T
MAKE IT CLEAR THAT WE WANT

TO TAKE AMERICA IN A DIFFERENT DIRECTION, THEN THE VOTERS WILL HAVE NO REASON TO PUT US IN CHARGE ON CAPITOL HILL.

THE 1994 REPUBLICAN SENATE-HOUSE DINNER

JUNE 14, 1994
WASHINGTON, D.C.

A CELEBRATION OF LEADERSHIP

A CELEBRATION OF LEADERSHIP

The 1994 Republican Senate-House Dinner carries on a rich tradition which began almost two decades ago.

Originally started when our Party was struggling to regain the Senate and House seats lost in the 1974 election, this Dinner evolved into the premier Republican event of the year as we celebrated the leadership of President Reagan and President Bush at the annual "President's Dinner".

Today, with the Democrats in the White House, The Republican Senate-House Dinner still affords a special opportunity for Republicans nationwide to join together and salute the men and women who proudly wear the "Republican" label as a badge of honor.

Whether working within their communities, carrying the GOP banner into campaigns, or fighting for GOP ideals in the halls of Congress, Republicans from all walks of life continue to prove that true leadership benefits all of us.

This year, we gather under the banner of "A Celebration of Leadership" to pay tribute to many of our Party's heroes: past, present, and future. In so doing, we also salute all Republicans nationwide, whose constant dedication and support sustains us in our efforts to move our Party and our nation forward.

In less than 17 months, we've scored seven major electoral victories including two new GOP Senators, Paul Coverdell in Georgia and Kay Bailey Hutchison in Texas. Last fall, we helped elect Richard Riordan Mayor of Los Angeles and put a Republican Lt. Governor, Mike Huckabee, in Arkansas. And on November 2nd, we scored a triple win by electing Christine Todd Whitman, the new Governor of New Jersey; George Allen, the new Governor of Virginia; and Rudy Giuliani, the new Mayor of New York City. These are the "Magnificent Seven".

Dear Bob,

Earlier this month I made a commitment to Senator Phil Gramm and Congressman Bill Paxon to serve as Chairman of this year's annual Republican Dinner. In doing so, I became the first seated U.S. Senator to serve as Chairman in the Dinner's twenty year history.

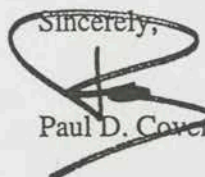

We have seen seven consecutive major GOP victories since President Clinton's election. I was the first turn in the road after the Presidential election and shortly following my victory came: Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison, Mayor Richard Riordan, Lt. Governor Mike Huckabee, Governor George Allen, Governor Christine Todd Whitman, and Mayor Rudolph Giuliani. It is my intention to assemble this winning team at this year's Dinner to remind our Party and the country of this major accomplishment. My own victory would not have happened without the resources provided by this Dinner. If we are as successful in '94, we will take the Senate and the House.

The caucus has so much at stake for success in '94 and, for that reason, I'm asking each Member of our caucus to recruit a Vice Chairman for our leadership team. Enclosed is a list of the Chairmen we already have on board. Vice Chairmen are responsible for the sale of two tables. Last year, The Dinner raised a total of $5 Million. Of that total, $14,340 was raised from Kansas. My goal is to have every state well represented at The Dinner.

It is so important that we all work together to make this Dinner a great success. Please join us on Tuesday, May 3rd, at the National Republican Senatorial Committee to make some calls on behalf of this important effort. I would like you to set aside one hour from 1:30 - 4:00 p.m. to make calls to prospective Chairmen for the leadership team.

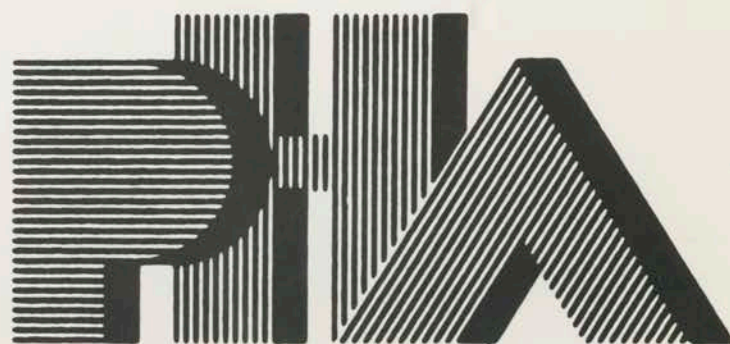

I have asked Betsy Ekonomou, Executive Director of The Dinner, to contact your Chief of Staff to discuss the recruitment of a Vice Chairman. Please confirm your attendance on May 3rd as well. Thank you, not only for your help with this important effort, but also for lending your signature to The Dinner's invitation package. What we do, each of us, could make the difference.

Seven more in '94!

Sincerely,

Paul D. Coverdell

Rendell outlines his plan for a 'New Urban Agenda'

By EDWARD G. RENDELL

America's cities are in desperate trouble, swamped by a floodtide of social problems — crack-cocaine addiction, a dramatic increase in crime, AIDS, homelessness and child abuse accompanied by grinding poverty.

Over the last decade, cities have been required to shoulder more and more of the burden of addressing these problems. At the same time, they have been forced to cope with a staggering loss of jobs — especially blue-collar jobs — and the severe erosion of the tax base. Philadelphia has lost 263,000 jobs in the past 25 years, 110,000 in the last seven years alone. Nearly 30 percent of the tax base has disappeared.

But these cold statistics do not tell the real story about Philadelphia and other American cities. Hundreds of thousands of residents are trapped in an existence they can escape only by doing something illegal — like selling drugs or robbing stores. Far too many were born to a single parent, a parent often incapable of providing guidance or motivation, perhaps because she was addicted to crack cocaine. Many of our children come to school beaten, battered, sick or hungry. They fall behind educationally at an alarming pace.

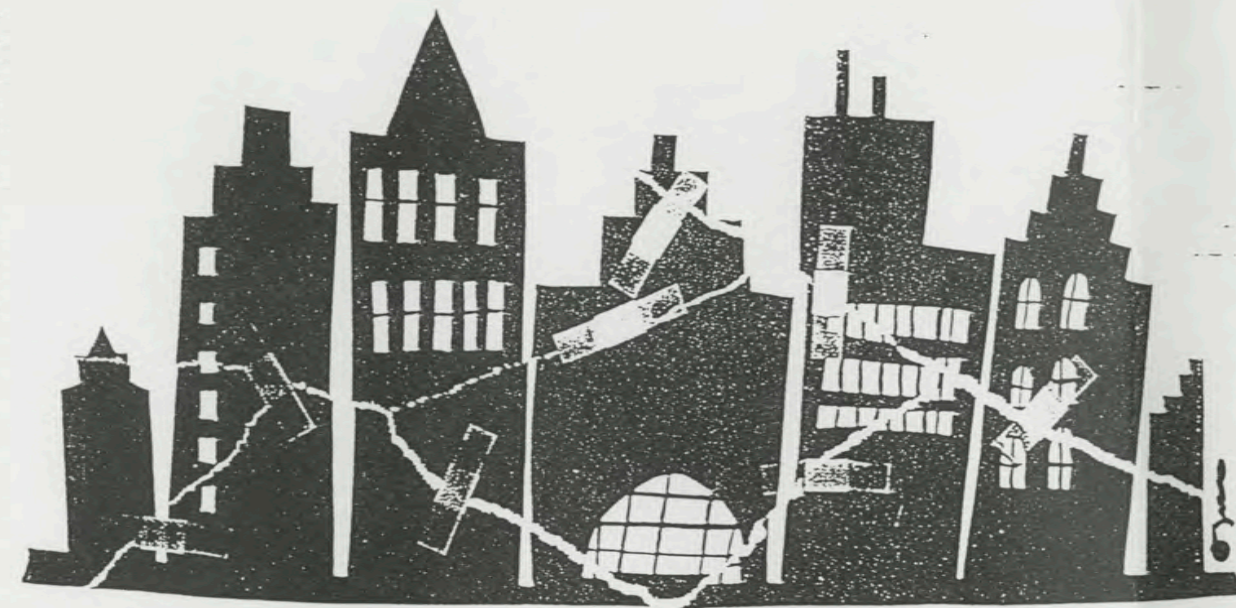

This is a situation America can no longer tolerate. Cities simply do not have the resources to solve their economic problems by themselves. The battle to save them can only be won with help from the federal government. It is time for a new federal approach to help cities — a New Urban Agenda.

American cities are at a crucial crossroad. And they need federal help to take the right road.

The New Urban Agenda I'm proposing isn't ask for major federal funding. Rather, it asks the federal government to "tip playing field" in favor of cities by making decisions that improve the ability of cities to compete economically and thus make America's urban centers more attractive for business development. This means jobs for city residents, which in turn provides cities with increased tax revenues to address their own social problems. Cities will lead the way in helping themselves, but they need the implementation of federal initiatives.

Maximize the impact of empowerment enterprise zones.

The federal government is the nation's largest purchaser of goods and services and thus ideally positioned to affect the success of businesses in these zones, where there is a large labor pool available to be trained and put to work.

For The Inquirer / JOHN OVERMYER

The New Urban Agenda would require that the government purchase a percentage of goods — 15 percent, for example — from such businesses. It would also require the government to purchase goods made from recycled material manufactured in the zones, such as paper products and highway materials. The abundant supply of urban trash would serve as feedstock.

Put federal facilities in distressed urban areas.

Last year, the Department of Defense proposed moving 8,400 jobs at three facilities in Philadelphia to rural New Cumberland, Pa. The impact on Philadelphia would have been devastating, but the city fought back and showed that combining operations in Philadelphia could achieve 70 percent greater savings.

Under the New Urban Agenda, any existing federal facility that is a candidate for relocation or consolidation automatically would be sited in a distressed urban area — unless the applicable agency could make a compelling case in favor of another location. The President's approval would be necessary.

As part of any location or relocation decision, the applicable federal agency would be required to prepare an urban-impact statement describing the basis for the decision and the impact it would have on employment opportunities. An urban-impact statement is necessary to ensure that the type of information that kept defense jobs in Philadelphia is available every time a federal agency proposes to move jobs out of cities.

Eliminate unfunded mandates.

To pay for unfunded federal mandates, cities must frequently slash spending for essential services like police and fire protection, recreation programs and libraries. For example, complying with the Americans with Disabilities Act by putting in curb cuts and ramps would cost Philadelphia taxpayers $140 million — more than three times the entire amount budgeted for street resurfacing and reconstruction in the 1994 fiscal year. In situations where compliance overwhelms a city's capacity to pay, the federal government must provide funding.

Revive and expand tax incentives to spur urban economic development.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 eliminated key incentives — effectively tilted the playing field away from distressed cities. This must be corrected.

For example, drastic limitations placed on the use of the Historic Rehabilitation Tax Credit brought revitalization projects in downtown areas to a grinding halt. In Philadelphia, there were 356 rehabilitation projects between 1978 and 1985 generating 3,640 construction jobs, but the number of projects dropped to 11 by 1988.

The expiration of authorization for commercial industrial development bonds has chilled private investment in urban America. And an obscure arbitrage rebate requirement involving interest earned in excess of the interest paid on municipal bond debt has led to more paperwork at the expense of infrastructure investment.

Create incentives for regional cooperation.

In the emerging global economy, those regions anchored by healthy core cities will serve as engines for national economic growth. If America's core cities collapse, and the surrounding suburbs are forced to spend their own resources on the growing poverty and crime left behind, more than just the cities will suffer. Recent research published by the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia suggests that suburbs surrounding healthier core cities grow faster and experience higher property values than suburbs surrounding cities in decline. The future of our cities and suburbs are inextricably linked.

To cite one example, the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 encouraged regional solutions to transit, but needs to be further amended. The nine-county planning area it established for the Philadelphia region does not grant a voting seat to SEPTA, even though 80 percent of the 250,000 people who work in downtown Philadelphia use public transportation to commute. And it gives only one of 18 votes to Philadelphia, which has 32.6 percent of the region's population.

Lift restrictions on community-based housing development.

Community development corporations — nonprofit community-based organizations — have been recognized as a tremendous tool for developing decent affordable housing in cities.

As a result of their local roots, CDCs most often work on a modest scale with local contractors, many of whom are minorities. Under federal law, developers of more than eight (and in some cases 12) contiguous units and using government funds must pay prevailing wages and observe union work rules. Consequently, the cost of construction increases, the production of such housing decreases, and minority-owned construction companies are effectively excluded because they are not union shops or do not pay prevailing wages.

I'm not proposing the total elimination of the requirements, which have a worthwhile intent, rather recommending that the ceiling be raised to 25 units.

Promote redevelopment of urban "brown fields."

Federal environmental statutes aimed at cleaning up hazardous waste sites, while well intentioned, have inadvertently exacerbated the problems of cities by encouraging businesses to abandon urban industrial sites in favor of the "green fields" of the suburbs.

The New Urban Agenda seeks to eliminate unnecessarily burdensome clean-up requirements that produce little practical environmental benefit — for example, remediating even trace amounts of chemicals that pose little or no scientifically measurable threat.

The New Urban Agenda asks the federal government to become a partner in the battle to save America's cities. It does not ask Washington for a "handout." By forging an effective partnership, the federal government can reward American cities' efforts to manage their own problems, and allow them to take their rightful place as centers of commerce and industry, as hubs of technology and research, and as magnets that lure visitors with their dynamism and vibrancy.

Research shows that suburbs surrounding healthier core cities grow faster than suburbs of cities in decline.

The costs of failure are almost unthinkable. Failure will leave millions of Americans awash in despair and trapped forever in anger, frustration and hopelessness. We — all of us — simply cannot allow that to happen.

Edward G. Rendell is the mayor of Philadelphia. This article is adapted from Rendell's New Urban Agenda, presented at a news conference today at the National Press Club in Washington.

THE APARTMENT RENOVATION TEAM PROGRAM

The Apartment Renovation Program (ART) was established in May, 1992 in order to renovate Philadelphia Housing Authority (PHA) scattered site housing units. The genesis of the program began when PHA and the Building Construction Trades Council agreed to develop a training program in building trades construction for PHA residents. The first training class started in June, 1993.

With approval in August, 1993 from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, PHA entered into an inter-agency agreement with the Private Industry Council of Philadelphia (PIC) in order to facilitate the growth of the program. Today ART is a collaborative effort between PHA, PIC and Tradeswomen in Philadelphia/Women in Nontraditional Work (TOP/WIN).

Working under the umbrella of PHA's Modernization Grant Program, with a budget of $14.7 million dollars, the ART project is divided into multiple phases. A potential pool of 349 apartments was identified, from which 200 apartments will be selected and renovated. Because many of these dwellings have remained vacant for long periods of time, their conditions vary. Therefore the ART program employs an individual assessment plan of rehabilitation for each site. In some cases it was evident to us early on that we needed to abandon the idea of saving some or part of the systems in these structures. Our individual assessment plan affords us the latitude to manage a project from its infancy to maturity.

The Philadelphia Housing Authority recognizes that merely providing a place to live and addressing the brick and mortar issues is not enough. For if we clean up our developments and not give people the opportunity to clean up the unfinished business of their lives, we will only continue to spend millions of dollars to fix-up what somebody else messed up. Nothing stimulates pride and responsibility like a job and a chance for self-sufficiency. ART is an example of PHA's commitment to creating training and employment opportunities for its residents.

But PHA is not an island unto itself. It is very much a part of the larger socio-economic fabric of the region. We are pleased that the business community with whom we work recognizes that it too can profit when the most underserved and underprivileged in our community are empowered with the tools to make their rightful contributions to the growth of our city. The ART program not only is symbolic of this philosophy it serves as a physical and shining example of the type of community empowerment initiatives which stimulate urban revitalization and help to offset continuing cycles of poverty.

On July 28, 1994 the ART program will celebrate the graduation of its first 18 trainees. On July 1, the second group of trainees will begin. Two trainees have been accepted into the Building Trades Apprentice program. ART is growing in leaps and bounds. There will be 50-60 residents in the next training class!

The ART Program

Rehabbing homes, careers

PHA

As an on-the-job trainee, Robinson receives $7 an hour for a four-day, 28-hour week. On Fridays, she and the other trainees return to the TOP/WIN training center at 30th and Dickinson streets for testing and review. She is paid $10 for those days.

"We work closely with the Department of Welfare, but the fact is the trainees lose most of their assistance payments," said Eddy.

"I take home $189 a week," said Robinson. "That's about what I got on public assistance, but now I think I've got a future."

Robinson, a graduate of Kensington High School with one year of study at Temple University, is seeking a sponsor to employ her as an apprentice carpenter after her job with PHA ends next February.

Trainees hired as apprentices can look forward to starting salaries of about $12 an hour plus benefits, said Linda Butler, president of TOP/WIN, a 12-year-old nonprofit organization.

"We look for the old-fashioned virtues in potential trainees, like moxie and a desire to really want to do this kind of work," said Butler. "We've got plenty of room for personality, but no room for 'attitude.'"

For carpenter Mike Boggi, that description perfectly fits Robinson, his new junior partner.

"She's going to make one damn good carpenter," said Boggi. "She's got to want to do it, know what I mean? This is not an easy job, but she wants to do it. We've got her doing the same things we're doing."

PHA tenants learn construction skills

Daily News Staff Writer

The front room on the first story of the building on North 16th Street had only half a floor, but Barbara Robinson glided over the gaps between the exposed beams as if she were walking on a solid sidewalk.

"I had to go out and buy two pairs of stockings last night, y'all," Robinson, 36, told her two co-workers as she moved between the rough edges of wood and brick that defined the construction job she was working on.

"You can't be worried about your fingernails or your stockings in this business," replied Mike Boggi, a journeyman carpenter from Local 1073.

"They don't cut me no slack because I'm a woman," said Robinson, who had just received a notice telling her she had passed the carpenter's apprentice test. "They make me carry my share of the load. But that's good, because I'm learning. It's hard work, but it feels so good when you finish because you can say, 'I built this.'"

What Robinson, a single mother of three, was building was a rehabilitated apartment in one of more than 5,000 vacant dwellings owned by the Philadelphia Housing Authority. Robinson is one of the first 30 PHA tenants to be selected for a program aimed both at getting these apartments ready for occupancy and at teaching PHA residents skills they can use to earn a living.

The ART program — for Apartment Renovation Teams — puts together five experienced union members from the Building and Construction Trades Council and one PHA resident trainee to work on rundown properties.

The program got a boost last week when the federal government, as a result of an agreement between Mayor Rendell and U.S. Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, pledged to fully fund it. This means up to $40 million will be available over the next two years to rehabilitate 1,000 PHA dwellings.

The concept, dreamed up by former PHA Executive Director John Paone and Trades Council President Pat Gillespie, was announced in May 1992, but didn't get off the ground until this past May. It was delayed in part because the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development took over PHA during that year and didn't approve the program until the takeover ended.

According to Carol Goertzel of PHA, the program is sponsored by the authority, with federal financial assistance funneled through the Private Industry Council. But the key component, Goertzel said, is TOP/WIN (Tradeswomen of Philadelphia/Women in Non-Traditional Work), which selects and trains residents for the program.

Nineteen of the trainees are women, 11 are men. TOP/WIN says women seem to take to the training program easier than do men.

"The men thought they could just show up and go to work, and a lot of them lost interest when they found out they had to go through training," said TOP/WIN program coordinator Julia Eddy. "The women realized they had to undergo training and they were ready for it."

Barbara Robinson, who lives in North Philadelphia, went through TOP/WIN school last year and was chosen to be in the first group to go out on the job in May. Robinson said the training lasted nine months and included math, carpentry, electrical and plumbing work, and physical training. She was paid $10 a day during training.

A.R.T. PROGRAM

The Building and Construction Trades Council worked hand-in-hand with City officials and the Philadelphia Housing Authority to develop the A.R.T. Program. The BCTC recognized this as an excellent opportunity to create jobs for local trade unions suffering from the weak economy; revitalize urban neighborhoods; provide training for local residents; and, produce decent housing for those needing it.

The skilled workers employed on the A.R.T. Program are hired out of local trade unions, and retained as provisional employees of PHA. By using union craftsmen, PHA is assured high-quality workmanship. The success of the A.R.T. Program can be attributed, in large part, to the spirit of cooperation among the various trade unions. For example, the unions agreed to a training component for PHA residents, and they have shown a great deal of flexibility concerning jurisdictional boundaries. In the training aspect of the A.R.T. Program, union tradespeople work side-by-side with unskilled members of the PHA tenant population. The training component not only puts PHA tenants to work, it also prepares them to enter an approved apprenticeship program. One resident is currently enrolled in such a program with the Carpenters Union, and several others are scheduled to begin. The A.R.T. training component enables local residents to get involved in the revitalization of their own community, and enables them to maintain renovated units once the program is completed.

The A.R.T. Program, from our perspective, has been largely successful. Even in its infant stage, the program has employed up to 200 tradespeople. However, as with any new initiative, there are problem areas which have negatively impacted costs and caused delays on the initial units. The first problem area is the bureaucracy we have encountered on the A.R.T. Program. Many of the HUD regulations in existence have been a hindrance to what we can do, and the procurement process at PHA has also created delays. As experienced tradespeople, we are accustomed to working on construction projects without any of the red tape to slow us down. The second problem area we have encountered is security. Since all the apartments targeted for renovation under the A.R.T. Program are scattered-site units, it is difficult to safely secure the buildings. On-site theft and vandalism have added to the costs of renovation, and create significant delays in construction. Together, the trade unions and PHA are working to address these issues before the next phase of the A.R.T. Program.
