Dear Senator Dole:

On behalf of The Junior Statesmen Foundation, I am honored to confirm that you will be joining the two hundred and fifty outstanding student leaders attending the fifty-fourth annual Junior Statesmen Summer School at Georgetown University as a guest speaker. Thank you for accepting our invitation.

We look forward to meeting with you on Wednesday, July 20, at 12:00 p.m. in Room HC-5, on the Lower Level of the Capitol. A student and I will meet you outside of the room to highlight the Summer School agenda with you and answer any questions about the program you may have. This student will then escort you to the podium and introduce you.

The format we would prefer for your presentation is five minutes of opening comments on a political topic of your choice followed by twenty minutes of questions and answers. The students will be asked to state their name and home town before they ask their question. At the conclusion of the half-hour session, a student will thank you for sharing your expertise and time with the group.

Junior Statesmen is a nonpartisan, educational organization dedicated to involving high school students in politics and government. For sixty years, Junior Statesmen has worked in cooperation with high schools to prepare students for the responsibilities of leadership in a democratic society.

Your help in making this exciting program a success is greatly appreciated. If you or your staff have any questions prior to the Speakers Program, please do not hesitate to contact me at 202/333-0364.

Thank you for agreeing to share your knowledge with these bright and politically active students. I know you will find your time with them both stimulating and rewarding.

Sincerely,

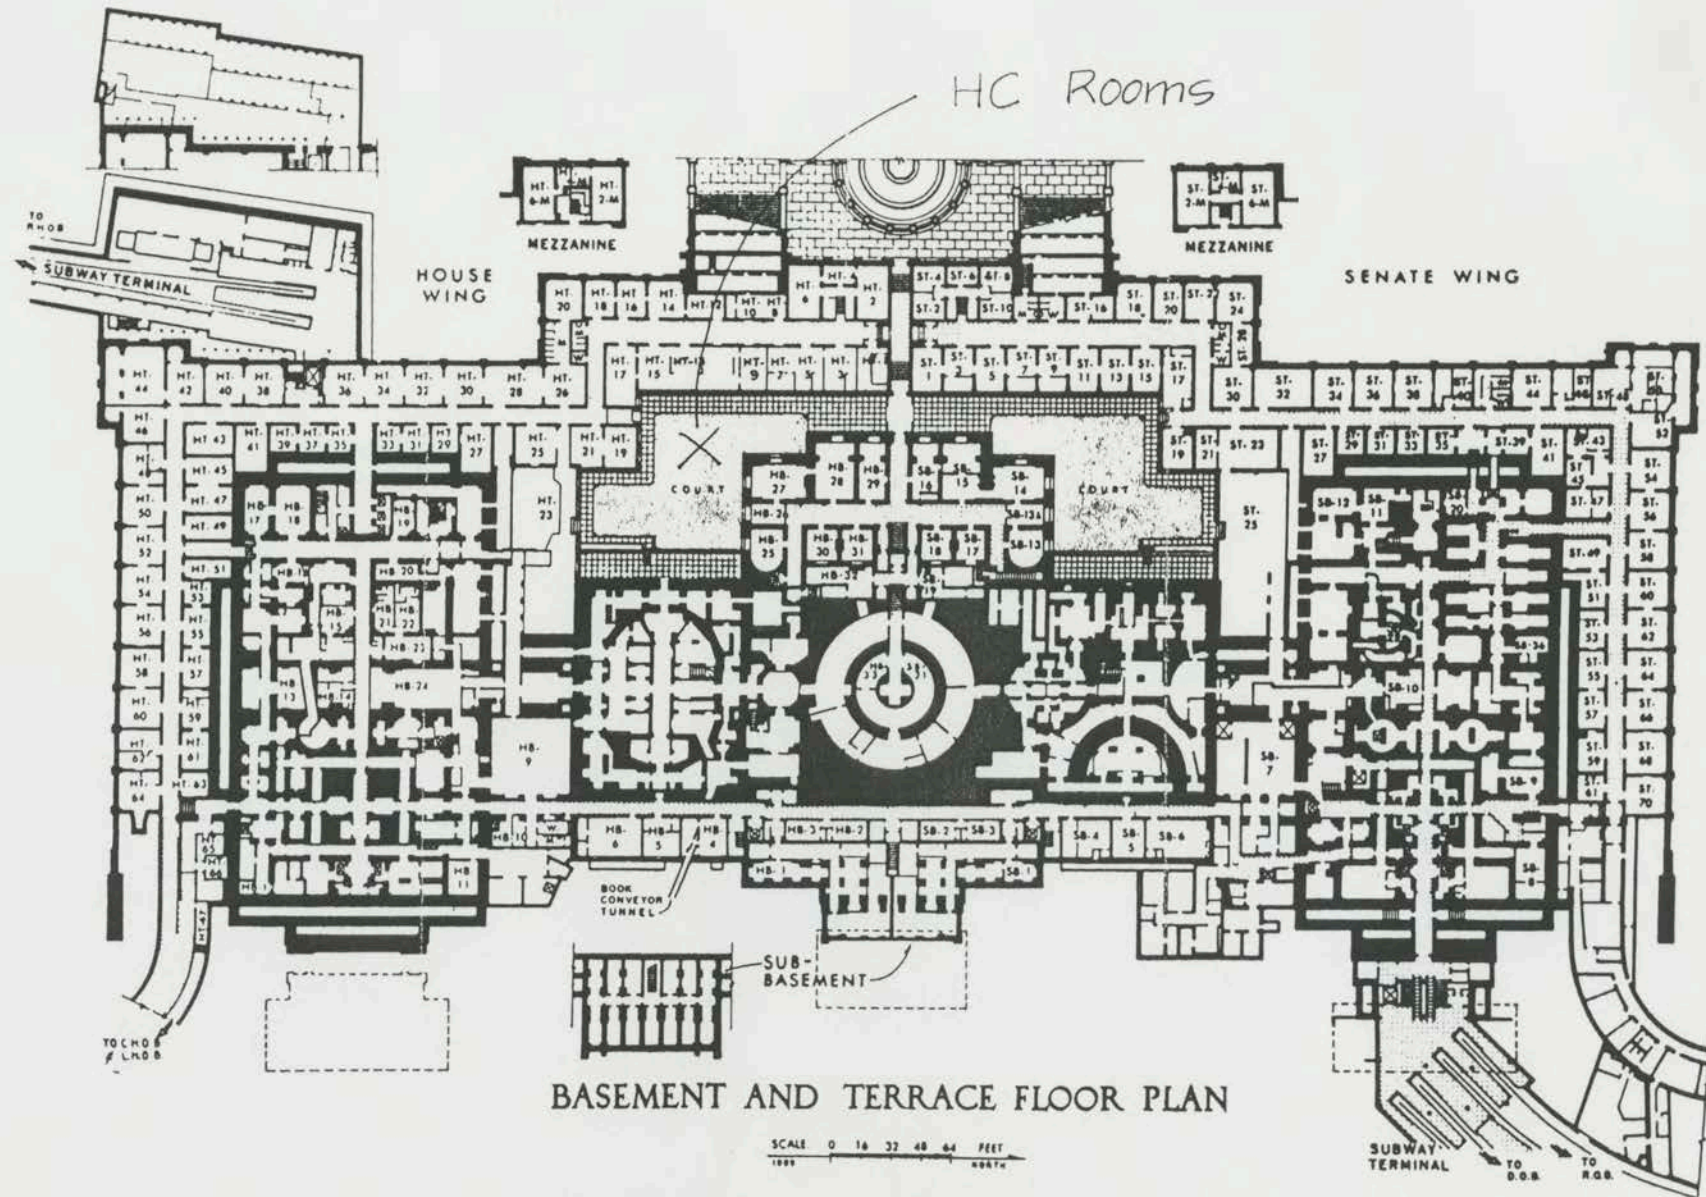

Suzanne Dale
Speakers Program Director

The Honorable Robert Dole
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Dole:

On behalf of The Junior Statesmen Foundation, it is my pleasure to cordially invite you to participate as a guest speaker for the Junior Statesmen Summer School.

Two hundred of America's future leaders have been selected to participate in the fifty-fourth annual Junior Statesmen Summer School. From July 17 - August 7, these high school scholars will engage in an intensive study of politics and government at Georgetown University. Each summer, our sessions at the White House and on Capitol Hill allow these high school students to meet and question Cabinet Secretaries, leaders in the House and Senate, Supreme Court Justices, prominent journalists, lobbyists, and others in the political arena.

The Summer School is sponsored by The Junior Statesmen Foundation, a nonprofit, educational organization which was founded sixty years ago to teach young people about public affairs and the responsibilities of leadership in a democratic society.

We will be meeting with members of the Senate on Thursday, July 21, from 9:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. in Room 106 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building and would be honored you would meet with us 20 to 30 minutes during this time. If this date is not convenient, we will also be meeting on Wednesday, July 20, between 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. in Room HC-5 on the Lower Level of the Capitol. The format we prefer is brief opening remarks on a political topic of your choice followed by a question and answer session with the students.

Please find the enclosed information regarding the program. If you or your staff have any questions or need any additional information, please do not hesitate to contact me at 202/333-0364 after 12:00 noon. I hope that your schedule will permit you to join us and share some of your knowledge and expertise with these dynamic young leaders. I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,

Suzanne Dale

THE JUNIOR STATESMEN SUMMER SCHOOL

For 54 years, The Junior Statesmen Summer School has offered a rigorous academic challenge to outstanding high school students. The curriculum includes a systematic introduction to American government and politics, an exciting high level speakers program, and student debates on current issues (Congressional Workshop).

The collegiate academic environment stresses substantial reading, research, and writing. Classes are held six days a week. Students reside in university dormitories and use campus classrooms and libraries.

The Summer School faculty of outstanding professors is recruited from universities around the country. The faculty, counselors, and administrators all live on campus with the students and are responsible for academic and personal counseling as well as supervision.

There are four sessions of The Junior Statesmen Summer School. Approximately 270 students will be selected to attend the Georgetown University session; 250 students will be selected to attend the Stanford University session; 130 students will be selected to attend the session at Yale University; and 90 students will be selected to attend The Junior Statesmen Summer School session at The University of Texas at Austin.

All four Summer School sessions have identical admissions requirements and tuition. Each offers an identical Advanced Placement American Government course and Congressional Workshop. The Yale, Stanford and Texas sessions also offer an additional course in Speech Communication. Students who have taken already a high school course in American Government may enroll in the second semester government course in United States Foreign Policy which is offered at Georgetown, or in the Advanced Placement Economics course which is offered at Stanford, or in the Honors course in Constitutional Law offered at Yale University. Please turn to pages 12 and 13 for complete course descriptions, including prerequisites.

Admission to the Summer School is competitive. Decisions are based on academic achievement, leadership ability, and interest in politics and government as evidenced by a 3-page personal essay, teacher recommendation and official high school transcript.

Junior Statesmen Summer School graduates generally receive high school credit for their course work. The classes in American Government and Economics are equivalent to a one-semester Advanced Placement course. With a satisfactory score on the Advanced Placement Exam, students also earn college credit. The Speech Communication course is equivalent to a one-semester high school Honors speech or Honors English elective.

Following the session, transcripts are sent to the graduates, and to their high schools, upon request. In advance of the Summer School, if high school credit is desired, you should make arrangements with appropriate officials at your school.

On each campus during Summer School, interested students may attend a special orientation session offered by undergraduate admissions officials who will answer questions about admissions, financial aid, SAT scores, housing, and campus life.

The total cost of tuition, which includes room and board, textbooks, and all other academic expenses, is $2,175. Partial scholarships are available. See pages 16 and 17 for scholarship details.

If you have any questions, do not hesitate to contact The Junior Statesmen Foundation. You may call toll free (800) 334-5353. Please place your call after 9:00 a.m. Pacific Time.

The National Association of Secondary School Principals has placed this program on the National Advisory List of Contests and Activities for 1993-94.

You won't just learn about politics and government in Washington, D.C. . . . You'll live it! July 17 to August 7

Georgetown Summer School students jump into politics and government for three intense weeks. Your class in A.P. American Government or U.S. Foreign Policy is enriched by Congressional Workshop debates and an incredible speakers program. A complete course description is printed on pages 12 and 13.

You will question national leaders, including White House officials, House and Senate leaders, Cabinet Members, lobbyists, and journalists. You will see the House and Senate in session, attend Congressional hearings, and use the vast resources of Washington while doing research for your Summer School term paper and debates.

An assessment of the Clinton administration will dominate your speakers program as you meet with members of the administration as well as its major critics.

A special Congressional Reception honoring you, hosted by The Junior Statesmen Foundation, will be held during the session. You and your classmates will be joined at the Reception by Members of Congress and other friends of the Junior Statesmen program.

Georgetown University is an ideal location for the Summer School. The campus is located in the world famous Georgetown residential neighborhood. Many of the cultural and historical attractions that make Washington famous are located within minutes of the campus. During the session, you and your classmates will enjoy a stunning moonlight tour of the most famous Washington monuments.

This Summer School is extremely demanding. A semester's worth of college level work is covered in three short weeks. You will take two essay examinations and complete a major term paper. In order to succeed, you must be self-disciplined and socially mature. In addition, you must have experience writing term papers. The Georgetown Summer School is designed for older, more mature, academically advanced high school students.

Junior Statesmen Summer School is not a spectator sport ...

You will meet and question national leaders. Informal, off the record, sessions with headline figures in the news will be held in the Capitol, Treasury Building, Pentagon, State Department, and in the Chambers of the Supreme Court. The Junior Statesmen Summer School offers a nonpartisan speakers program. Because the Administration officials you will question are Democrats, you will question more Republican speakers on Capitol Hill.

EXECUTIVE BRANCH

Washington, D.C. Session What's it really like?

For three weeks over the summer, I flew across country just to go to summer school! That's right...summer school. Why, you might ask, did I do such a thing? This was no ordinary summer school.

The Junior Statesmen Summer School is a program for elite high school students who show leadership ability in and out of the classroom. About 270 students from across the U.S. (including Guam and American Samoa) attended at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C.

Georgetown University is awesome. Every building is gothic and huge; the campus is like its own little city. We lived in a real Georgetown dormitory, ate in the same cafeteria as such legends as Bill Clinton and Patrick Ewing, and saw the Exorcist steps. We took classes in American Government or U.S. Foreign Policy, taught by real college professors. My professor happened to hail from the University of California at Berkeley, and trust me...you could tell.

Along with the classes, we participated in "Congressional Workshop", which is a classy name for student debates. Basically, we were split into congressional houses of 30 students. To start the debate, student congressmen and women from the pro and con sides of the issue gave 6-minute opening speeches, followed by questions from the members of the house. Next, house members expressed their own opinions in impromptu speeches. After closing speeches by the first two speakers, we'd vote on the issue.

Another fun part of the program was the speaker days when the whole group met with Clinton officials, Members of Congress, lobbyists, and reporters. Some significant speakers were Congressman Barney Frank, Edwin Meese, III, Reagan's Attorney General and right hand man, Brian Lamb of C-SPAN, and Supreme Court Justice Anthony M. Kennedy.

It was a big thrill when Justice Kennedy came into the room. We were supposed to meet with his law clerk. All of a sudden, there I was in the Supreme Court Chambers an arm's length away from a man who is on the court for life. He is one of nine judges who interpret the Constitution and protect our rights. He was a pretty cool guy.

Junior Statesmen pretty much had the run of the Capitol. Some of my friends sat in on confirmation hearings for Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg. A few kids ran into Mrs. Clinton and shook her hand. One of my classmates found the secret Capitol office of the Vice President. Some students ran into President Clinton, Al Gore and George Stephanopoulos in the basement of the Rayburn Building when they were on the Hill lobbying for the President's budget. That was a massive rush.

Junior Statesmen Summer School was more than just classroom and textbook learning. It was interesting because of the different kinds of people. There were students from the Virgin Islands, New Jersey, Florida, California, and one guy from Alaska. I was just completely blown away when he said that when the temperature gets to 60 degrees below zero they cancel school!

Junior Statesmen Summer School is a wonderful program. If you have any questions, I'd be glad to stop what I'm doing and talk to you. I consider myself to be a reasonably nice guy.

—Glyn Williams, Tempe, Arizona

... Stanford Session – July 3 to July 30

Palm trees, red tiled roofs, and 70 degree sunny days welcome you to Stanford University where you will jump into four weeks of politics and debate.

Two college level courses will challenge you -- Advanced Placement American Government and Speech Communication. Or, you can enroll in Advanced Placement Economics instead of American Government. Students who already have taken Speech may opt for the second semester speech course, Political Communication. For complete course descriptions, including prerequisites, please turn to pages 12 and 13.

Each night, you can test your political opinions in Congressional Workshop debates, and an exciting speakers program will bring you up close and personal with headline figures from the news. Your speakers program will focus on several themes to take advantage of the vast resources in the San Francisco Bay Area. National, state and local government, foreign affairs, politics and the media, and crime and punishment are just a few of the topics that you will explore. Prominent San Francisco Bay Area leaders and Stanford scholars will join you on campus to challenge some of your assumptions and make you think.

Stanford University is an ideal location for the Summer School. The campus is world famous for its outstanding libraries, architecture, and scholars in residence. You and your classmates will rub shoulders with visitors from throughout the world. The Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace is located on campus as is a world famous collection of Rodin sculptures.

Nationally recognized university professors teach at Summer School. If you love politics and want to learn more, or if you are nervous about speaking before a group, this program will give you the knowledge, skills and the self confidence you need. At the end of the month, we guarantee that you will be a more effective leader and a much more dynamic and confident public speaker.

San Francisco is a short distance away, so you and your classmates will take a day trip to "The City" to enjoy some of the cultural and historical attractions which make San Francisco world famous. Ride a cable car "halfway to the stars" and shop in Union Square. Fisherman's Wharf, Chinatown, the Hard Rock Cafe, the Golden Gate Bridge, Alcatraz, and the Japanese Tea Gardens are just a few of the attractions you and your classmates can visit.

Former Secretary of State George Shultz with 1993 Stanford student Mike Yadkarim

... Yale Session – July 3 to July 30

Yale University, a campus of Georgian and Gothic buildings dating back to 1752; the campus of Nathan Hale, Noah Webster, William Howard Taft, William F. Buckley, Jr., George Bush, Bill and Hillary Clinton, Meryl Streep and Jodie Foster; Yale, home of the Bulldogs, welcomes you to its campus steeped in history and tradition.

Two college level courses will challenge you -- Advanced Placement American Government and Speech Communication. If you have taken already American Government, you can apply for the new Junior Statesmen course in Constitutional Law. Open only to incoming seniors, this course will give you an exciting preview of law school. Students who have taken already an advanced speech course may opt for the second semester speech course, Public Speaking and the Law. For complete course descriptions, including prerequisites, please turn to pages 12 and 13.

Nationally recognized university professors teach at Summer School. If you love politics and want to learn more, or if you are nervous about speaking before a large or small group, this program will give you the knowledge, skills and the self confidence you need. At the end of the month, we guarantee that you will be a more effective leader and a much more dynamic and confident public speaker.

New York City is a short distance away, so you and your classmates will take a day trip to the "Big Apple", participating in a special speakers program and enjoying some of the cultural and historical attractions which make New York a world famous city. Your speakers program will focus on several themes to take advantage of the vast resources in New York. Foreign affairs at the United Nations, politics and the media at the New York Times, economic policy making on Wall Street, and the dynamics of politics in New York are just a few of the topics that you may explore.

Yale University is an ideal location for the Summer School. In the summer, the campus is a bee-hive of activity drawing scholars and visitors from around the world. Many come to study in the world famous Stirling Memorial Library which houses 8 million books—making it the fourth largest collection in the country and the sixth largest in the world.

Summer School students interested in learning more about Yale can attend a special afternoon session with Undergraduate Admissions officials who will answer your questions about Yale University admissions, financial aid, SAT scores, personal interviews, housing and campus life.

... The University of Texas at Austin Session – July 3 to July 30

The University of Texas at Austin is a world-class academic institution. The faculty includes Nobel and Pulitzer Prize winners, and it leads public institutions in attracting National Merit Scholars. Eight of its doctoral programs rank in the top 10 of the nation. However, UT is more than academics; to many of its graduates it is a state of mind. Anyone who has strolled along "The Drag", contemplated the Tower from the Littlefield Fountain, or surged through Memorial Stadium with the mighty Longhorn fans will surely agree that the UT experience leaves its stamp on the human spirit.

At UT, two college level courses will challenge you -- American Government and Speech Communication. You can test your political opinions in nightly Congressional Workshop debates and an exciting speakers program will bring you up close and personal with headline figures from the news. For complete course descriptions, please turn to pages 12 and 13.

If you love politics and want to learn more, or if you are nervous about speaking before a group, this program will give you the knowledge, skills and the self confidence you need. At the end of the month, we guarantee that you will be a more effective leader and a much more dynamic and confident public speaker.

Your Speakers Program will focus on Texas state politics and current issues as you question legislators, statewide elected officials, lobbyists, judges and journalists. These lively, off the record, question and answer sessions will be held in the State Capitol Building and nearby government buildings, just minutes from your dorm.

The highlight of the program last summer was an opportunity for Summer School students to witness the swearing in ceremony for the Texas State Treasurer. Following the ceremony, which was conducted in the Chambers of the House of Representatives, Governor Ann Richards met with Junior Statesmen and engaged in a lively question and answer session.

The University of Texas is an ideal location for the Summer School. Sprawling across 300 acres in central Austin, the campus is a bee-hive of activity during the summer attracting scholars and visitors from around the world. Many come to study in the eighth largest academic library in the country.

Also located on campus is the Lyndon Baines Johnson Presidential Library and Museum. Your special tour will include colorful highlights of Johnson's state and national political campaigns. You will see the Viet Nam War exhibit and "Great Society" collection giving you and your classmates a glimpse into the controversial decade of the 1960s. Also at the L.B.J. Museum you will see an exact replica of the Oval Office during the Johnson administration and a rock brought back from the moon. In the L.B.J. Library, scholars engaged in research will share with you their insights on the modern American presidency.

Governor Ann Richards with 1993 Texas Students

Tuition

Tuition, room and board at the Georgetown, Stanford, Yale, and University of Texas sessions is $2,175. This covers:

Tuition, textbooks, and all other academic expenses, and

Housing and meals. Students are housed two to a room on single sex floors in university student residences. Meals are eaten in university dining rooms.

In Washington, D.C., because you are off campus so many days for the speakers program, you will need to bring money to pay for fifteen off campus meals. All other meals are provided.

At the Stanford Summer School, you will need to bring money to pay for meals while you are in San Francisco for the optional one-day cultural excursion. All other meals are provided.

At the Yale Summer School, you will need to bring money to pay for meals for one day while you are in New York City. All other meals are provided.

At the Texas Summer School, you will need to bring money to pay for six lunches eaten off campus on speaker program days. All other meals are provided.

Special Group Field Trips

Georgetown Summer School: As part of the speakers program, you will travel by chartered bus to the Capitol Building, Pentagon, State Department, Supreme Court and other Washington locations. At the end of the session, you will enjoy a moonlight bus tour of the most famous national monuments.

Stanford Summer School: You will travel to San Francisco where you will enjoy historical and cultural attractions.

Yale Summer School: As part of the speakers program, you will travel by chartered bus to New York City where you will question exciting guest speakers and enjoy historical and cultural attractions.

Texas Summer School: As part of the speakers program, you will meet in the State Capitol Building and L.B.J. Presidential Library with guest speakers and scholars and for special orientations.

Transportation to the Summer School is not provided. However, Summer School staff members will meet arriving students at nearby airports and transport them to campus. At the conclusion of the sessions, Summer School students are transported by chartered buses to these airports for their flights home. The Junior Statesmen staff will be happy to answer any questions you may have about transportation arrangements.

ADVANCED PLACEMENT AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

Offered at: Stanford, Yale, and Texas

This course is a college-level introduction to the dynamics of the American political system. It is designed to fulfill state educational requirements and to prepare students for the Advanced Placement Examination in American Government and Politics.

Through lectures, college texts, and discussions, this course helps you understand the basic operating principles of politics and government as it presents several theoretical and analytic models for understanding the process of American politics at the state and national levels. You are taught to analyze critically the American political system as you examine the roles played by democracy, political thought, and the Constitution. The structure and function of courts, interest groups, political parties, the Presidency, Congress, and the bureaucracy are thoroughly explored. The role of each of these institutions in the policy-making process is examined through the use of case studies of major policy issues in society.

You take three essay examinations and complete a 12-15 page college-level research paper on an issue in American politics. Your research is supervised by the Government faculty and requires extensive use of the university library. Classes are held six days a week. The class is offered for high school credit and is equivalent to a one-semester Advanced Placement American Government course. Students are in class for a total of 85 hours.

Offered at: Georgetown

An identical Advanced Placement American Government course is offered. This session is extremely demanding since it is one week shorter and has an extensive speakers program on Capitol Hill. You must cover course material rapidly. To complete your term paper successfully, you will interview government officials, lobbyists, journalists, or others who play a role in your topic. You will read a college text before arriving in Washington. Georgetown is designed for older, academically advanced students. To succeed, you must be self-disciplined and socially mature. Students are in class for a total of 100 hours. Prerequisite: Georgetown students must have experience writing term papers.

SPEECH COMMUNICATION

Offered at: Stanford, Yale, and Texas

In four intensive weeks of instruction, you are exposed to the fundamental elements of speech communication through a university level course emphasizing the practical use of communication theory through public speaking. Classical and modern communication theories are covered. Fundamentals of persuasion and argumentation are stressed with particular emphasis given to standards of logic and proof.

In addition to perfecting your speech delivery, you will study organization-retention techniques, critical thinking, and audience analysis as part of your speech assignments. During the month, you are required to give at least four prepared and several impromptu speeches. A full sentence outline is required for every speech. Extensive experience is provided in oral and written critiques of speakers.

Classes are held six days a week. While this class is offered for high school credit, it is taught at the university level and is equivalent to a one-semester Honors Speech class or a one-semester Honors English elective. Students are in class for a total of 85 hours.

PUBLIC SPEAKING AND THE LAW

Offered at: Yale

This second semester, university level course, exposes you to the fundamental elements of speech communication by emphasizing the practical use of communication theory through public speaking. Classical and modern communication theories are covered. When taken together with Constitutional Law, this course will extend your understanding of the fundamentals of persuasion and argumentation with particular emphasis given to standards of logic and proof.

Significant outside readings and written work are assigned. In addition to perfecting speech delivery, you study organization, critical thinking and audience analysis. You will give at least four prepared and several impromptu speeches. To extend your understanding of the law, one speech assignment will simulate a courtroom presentation.

Classes are held six days a week. While this class is offered for high school credit, it is taught at college level and is equivalent to a semester Honors Advanced Speech class or English elective. You are in class for a total of 85 hours. Prerequisite: You must have successfully completed a college speech course or Speech Communication at a previous Junior Statesmen summer session.

Course Descriptions

SPECIAL FEATURE:

CONGRESSIONAL WORKSHOP

Featured at: All Summer School Sessions

Summer School students create and run a legislative body patterned after the U.S. Congress which serves as a practical demonstration of the principles and issues discussed throughout the Summer School. Congressional Workshop serves as a forum for student debate of contemporary political issues. You are required to select a public policy issue (the death penalty, for example) and write an argumentative brief, present and argue one side of the issue before a committee of Summer School faculty, and then lead the debate, for or against, in a session of the Congressional Workshop.

This exercise requires substantial research, an understanding of current issues and political theory, knowledge of argumentation and a practical understanding of parliamentary procedure. You are expected to debate your own issue and to participate as a supporting speaker during other debates. The faculty participate in two areas: 1) critique and evaluation of your technique and 2) identification of the areas where your speaking, debating, and leadership skills can be improved.

Although not a formal course, your participation is graded and constitutes 10% of your final Government, Economics, or Constitutional Law grade and 10% of your final Speech grade. At Georgetown, your Congressional Workshop grade constitutes 20% of your final grade.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

Offered at: Yale

This college level course will explore the nature and development of political rights and liberties, the evolution of our system of checks and balances, and the relationship between majoritarian democracy and the protection of individual and minority rights and liberties.

The course is divided into three sections: the first provides background on the Supreme Court and its relationship to other branches of government. Section two is an overview of the development of American Constitutional law, including the origins of the Constitution, the rise of judicial power, the development of the Court's doctrine in the areas of federalism and economic regulation, the Constitutional crisis of the 1930s and the Court's subsequent rejection of economic liberties for civil rights and liberties, and the recent Court's move to scale back the activism of the post-New Deal Courts. The concluding section will explore the role of the Supreme Court in the American political system.

Course materials include a Constitutional law casebook and other college level texts. In addition to class lectures, students participate in a moot Supreme Court exercise where they prepare legal briefs arguing their side of a particular case and present an oral argument before a panel of justices. Students take weekly essay exams and a cumulative final examination.

Classes are held six days a week. While the class is offered for high school credit and is equivalent to a one-semester, Honors social studies elective, it is taught at a much more advanced level. Students are in class for a total of 85 hours.

Prerequisite: You must be an incoming senior who has successfully completed Advanced Placement American Government or a previous Junior Statesmen Summer School.

POLITICAL COMMUNICATION

Offered at: Stanford

This second semester, university level course focuses on political communication as it offers you classical and modern communication and rhetorical theory, practice, and criticism.

You will study fundamental elements of speech communication through a curriculum divided between theory and practical use of the theory through public speaking. Significant outside readings and written work are assigned. In addition to perfecting speech delivery, you study organization, critical thinking and audience analysis. You will give at least four prepared and several impromptu speeches. Extensive experience is provided in oral and written critiques of speakers.

Classes are held six days a week. While this class is offered for high school credit, it is taught at college level and is equivalent to a semester Honors Advanced Speech class or English elective. You are in class for a total of 85 hours. Prerequisite: You must have successfully completed a college speech course or Speech Communication at a previous Junior Statesmen summer session.

UNITED STATES FOREIGN POLICY

Offered at: Georgetown

This advanced course is designed to meet second semester requirements of high schools offering a year long American Government course. Through lectures, college texts, and small group discussions, the course helps you understand how American foreign policy is made. Key themes of post-World War II American foreign policy are explored. Next, you focus on key issues and on America's role in a post-Cold War world.

You take two essay examinations and complete a 12-15 page analytic paper of university caliber to demonstrate your understanding of the foreign policy process in American government. This research is supervised by Foreign Policy faculty and requires extensive use of the Georgetown Library and personal interviews among the Washington foreign policy establishment.

Classes are held six days a week. While the class is offered for high school credit and is equivalent to a one-semester, Honors American Government course, it is taught at a much more advanced level. Students are in class for a total of 100 hours.

Prerequisite: You must be an incoming senior who has successfully completed high school American Government or a previous Junior Statesmen Summer School, and have experience writing term papers.

ADVANCED PLACEMENT ECONOMICS

Offered at: Stanford

This course is comparable to a one-semester university economics course, covering major economic theories and public policy analysis. It is designed to fulfill state educational requirements and to prepare students for the Advanced Placement Examination in both Micro- and Macro-Economics.

Following an introductory section on the "economic way of thinking", you examine decision making by individuals, groups and organizations, with emphasis on how those decisions are made in a market economy. You review economic strategies and how voluntary exchanges between demanders and suppliers are seen as the foundation of the market system. In addition, you study the behavior of individual consumers and producers. The role of government is emphasized with discussion of market failure and the business cycle (swings in the economy's output rate, unemployment rate, foreign trade, and inflation rate). Particular attention is focused on the macroeconomic impact of the U.S. Treasury and Federal Reserve System. The course is enriched by a speakers program which gives you an opportunity to quiz scholars, government officials, and corporate leaders active in economic policy formation. Nobel Prize winning economists, Milton Friedman and Kenneth Arrow recently met for an hour with Stanford Summer School students.

You will take three essay examinations and complete a 12-15 page analytic paper of university caliber which demonstrates an understanding of economic policy generation. The paper involves independent research and extensive use of the Stanford Library. Research is closely supervised by the faculty. Classes are held six days a week. The class is offered for high school credit and is equivalent to a one-semester Advanced Placement Micro- and Macro-Economics course. Students are in class for a total of 85 hours.

Prerequisite: You must be an incoming senior who has successfully completed an Honors or Advanced Placement U.S. History course in high school or a previous Junior Statesmen Summer School session.

A DAY AT GEORGETOWN

7:15 - 7:45	Breakfast
9:00 - 11:00	Students question U.S. Senators on Capitol Hill
11:00 - 12:30	Term Paper Interviews on Capitol Hill
12:30 - 1:30	Lunch at the Old Post Office
2:15 - 5:15	American Government or U.S. Foreign Policy Class
5:15 - 6:50	Dinner
7:00 - 9:45	Congressional Workshop Debates
9:45 - 11:00	Free time
11:00	Roll call and Curfew

I Want to Attend ... Now what do I do?

WHO MAY APPLY?

Any outstanding high school student may apply for admission as long as he/she will not be graduating from high school in June 1994.

HOW DO I APPLY FOR ADMISSION?

Applicants for admission should submit:

1. A personal essay, typed, double spaced, not longer than three pages or shorter than two pages, covering your academic achievements, academic and vocational aspirations, involvement in school and community activities, and interest or involvement in politics. Are you a leader? Please include examples of your leadership ability. This must be written in essay form.
2. An official high school transcript, which your school will send, on your request.
3. A recommendation from a Counselor or an English or Social Studies teacher. A form for this purpose is printed on page 21.
4. An application form, printed on page 15.

Each element of your application should be mailed as soon as it is ready or available. Typically, when students decide to apply, they immediately mail in the application form and ask their school to send a copy of their transcript to The Junior Statesmen Foundation.

The personal essay and teacher recommendation form may be submitted separately. However, be sure that your name, along with the name of the Summer School session to which you are applying (e.g. Georgetown session), is listed on any materials sent in separately.

WHO IS ADMITTED?

Admission to the Summer School is competitive. No decision on admission can be made until all application materials have been received. Decisions are based on academic achievement, leadership ability, and interest in politics and government. A student is frequently stronger in one of these areas than others. Above all, Junior Statesmen Summer School students are intelligent, articulate student leaders who could benefit from this unique educational experience. If you have any questions about your qualifications for admission, do not hesitate to call The Junior Statesmen Foundation at (800) 334-5353.

APPLICATION DEADLINE

To help you settle your summer plans as early as possible, The Junior Statesmen Foundation offers a rolling admissions process; you will be notified of your status immediately after we receive a complete application.

All application materials should be received by MONDAY, MAY 9, 1994. However, we will continue to consider applications received after that date as long as there is space available. If you have any questions about the application process or deadline, call toll free (800) 334-5353.

Mail application materials to:

Summer School Admissions Director
The Junior Statesmen Foundation
650 Bair Island Road, Suite 201
Redwood City, CA 94063-2735

Prior to Summer School, you will be sent information regarding your Congressional Workshop assignment, a reading list, what to bring, transportation information, and information on Summer School rules and supervision. Georgetown students will be sent a textbook to read in advance.

STUDENT APPLICATION FORM

Scholarships

The Junior Statesmen Foundation administers a Summer School Scholarship Fund of over $125,000 to assist students who find the tuition to be a barrier. These funds were donated by Summer School alumni, businesses, government, and philanthropic foundations.

A Scholarship Committee, under the direction of Junior Statesmen Foundation Trustees, annually awards $55,000 in partial scholarships from this fund using the following criteria: financial need, academic excellence, demonstrated leadership ability, and evidence that an applicant is highly motivated to attend.

Because the demand for Junior Statesmen Scholarships is so great, and because of its commitment to help as many students as possible, The Junior Statesmen Foundation rarely awards a full scholarship. However, each year, many students attend the program by combining a Junior Statesmen Scholarship with locally raised scholarships which together cover their full tuition.

ALICE TWEED TUOHY SCHOLARSHIPS

The Alice Tweed Tuohy Foundation has established an annual Scholarship Fund of $30,000 to enable outstanding high school students to attend The Junior Statesmen Summer School. With the help of Tuohy grants, Junior Statesmen Summer School enrollment has increased from 46 students in 1975 to 648 students last year.

The Tuohy Scholarships are awarded by The Junior Statesmen Foundation on the basis of both academic merit and financial need. The Scholarship Committee is particularly interested in an applicant's academic excellence and demonstrated leadership ability.

SPECIAL STANFORD SCHOLARSHIPS

Under the terms of a special Junior Statesmen expansion grant, scholarships are available to outstanding sophomores who reside in the states of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin who are admitted to the Stanford Summer School. Scholarship decisions are based on academic merit, leadership potential, and financial need.

Supreme Court Justice David Souter

Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor

Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas

MEESE FAMILY MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIPS

The Junior Statesmen Foundation uses the earnings from a $73,000 endowment fund to provide Summer School scholarships. This fund was established in memory of Scott Robert Meese, Andrew Scott Meese, and Leone D. Meese.

Meese Scholarships are awarded by The Junior Statesmen Foundation to students who possess an outstanding academic record, a sense of compassion and concern for others, and an ability to achieve results through effective leadership.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR SCHOLARSHIPS

Through a grant from the United States Interior Department, students from each of five U.S. Territories may attend a Junior Statesmen Summer School session of their choice with a full scholarship. Outstanding student leaders from Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, the Republic of Palau, America Samoa, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas will be considered for these scholarships, which fully cover Summer School tuition and round trip air fare. These Interior Department-funded Scholarships are awarded by The Junior Statesmen Foundation.

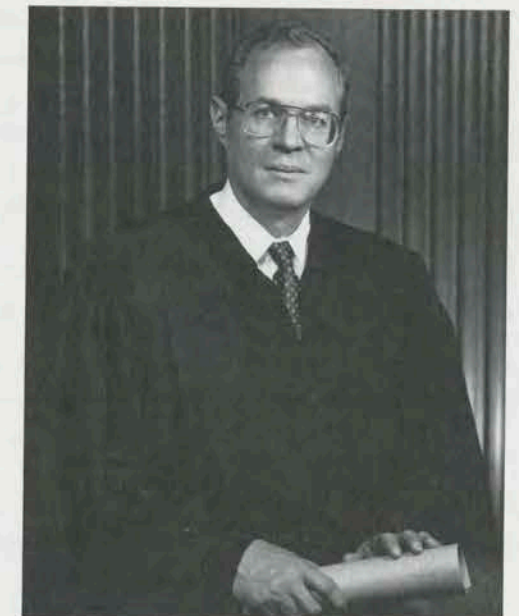

With the help of the Interior Department Scholarships, Summer School enrollment from the U.S. Territories has increased from 11 students in 1991 to 84 students last summer.

OTHER SCHOLARSHIPS

For more than ten years, The Ruth Eleanor and John Ernest Bamberger Foundation in Salt Lake City has provided Junior Statesmen Summer School scholarships. Outstanding students who attend high school in Utah are considered for these Bamberger Scholarships.

In addition, partial scholarships are available to outstanding students from the State of Oregon, and special Urban Scholarships are available to students who attend high school in Oakland, Los Angeles, or in the District of Columbia.

Many service clubs, community organizations and school sources also are able to provide scholarships to students in their area. School administrators, teachers, and The Junior Statesmen Foundation staff often are able to help arrange these scholarships. If you want help raising local scholarships, call for the Junior Statesmen step by step fund raising manual.

HOW DO I APPLY FOR A SCHOLARSHIP?

1. Immediately apply for admission to the Summer School.
2. Apply for a Junior Statesmen scholarship. The Scholarship Application Form is printed on the reverse side of this page.
3. Request the Junior Statesmen Summer Programs Fund Raising Manual and start local fund raising as soon as possible following the step by step instructions in the manual.

The Junior Statesmen Scholarship Committee automatically will consider you for a scholarship from every fund it can. Please submit only one scholarship application.

Most Summer School students pay their tuition with funds from a combination of sources including local scholarships, family funds, and a Junior Statesmen scholarship. If you start now and follow the directions in the Fund Raising Manual, you almost certainly will succeed in your fund raising efforts. For more information on scholarships, call The Junior Statesmen Foundation toll free at (800) 334-5353. Please call after 9:00 a.m. Pacific Time.

Other J.S.A. Programs ...

Each summer, The Junior Statesmen Foundation conducts four state and local government Symposia and four sessions of Summer School.

Symposia are exciting explorations of local or state government and politics lasting from 4-6 days. Students are housed in university dormitories for a sneak preview of college life. Symposium "classrooms" are government buildings like the state capitol, supreme court, or city hall. Symposium "instructors" are outstanding political and governmental leaders, including governors, state legislators, judges, mayors, lobbyists and reporters. State Government Symposia are held in Boise, Olympia and Sacramento. A local government Symposium is conducted on the campus of the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. If you would like a Symposium brochure, please call toll free (800) 334-5353.

THE JUNIOR STATE OF AMERICA (J.S.A.)

For sixty years, in cooperation with public and private high schools, The Junior Statesmen Foundation has guided the activities of a nonpartisan, student run organization for high school students interested in government, politics, and debate.

At high schools, Junior State chapters are social studies clubs. Chapter activities include student debates and nonpartisan speakers programs on campus. Regional and state activities in 1994 include one-day and overnight conferences such as a model congress titled "Congress '94, Setting New Priorities". Participation in J.S.A. gives high school students practical experience in the art of self government, preparing them for the challenge of democracy. Although Junior Statesmen is headquartered in the West, students from throughout the country and the U.S. Territories are active participants. If you would like to start a J.S.A. chapter at your high school, please call (800) 334-5353 for a step by step kit.

WHO SPONSORS JUNIOR STATESMEN PROGRAMS?

The Junior State of America, summer Symposia, and the Junior Statesmen Summer School are sponsored by The Junior Statesmen Foundation, a nonprofit, nonpartisan, 501(c)(3) educational organization. The Junior Statesmen program is guided by a distinguished Board of Trustees composed of political leaders from both major parties, educators, attorneys, business leaders and other civic minded individuals who share the goals of the organization. Foundation Trustees are responsible for the management of the program, raising funds and providing educational guidance.

February 1994

Dear Teacher or Counselor:

Help me identify outstanding sophomores and juniors at your school who have a passionate interest in politics and current events.

I am seeking the serious, concerned student who enjoys discussing and debating issues. I'm looking for the kind of student who hangs around to pursue a question raised in class; the one who always has an opinion and who loves to challenge the opinions of fellow students.

I want to offer these students an opportunity to spend part of the summer studying government and politics in a highly competitive, intellectually stimulating environment; a place where there is always time to pursue the answers to exciting questions; a program that takes learning beyond the normal classroom experience.

Junior Statesmen Summer School, conducted on the campuses of the University of Texas at Austin, Yale, Stanford, and Georgetown Universities, offers high school students an opportunity to study with nationally recognized political scientists, to develop and polish their leadership skills, to improve their speaking ability, and to debate controversial issues. Each program features a high level speakers program with headline figures from the news.

At your high school, you interact daily with the type of students I am seeking. Can you help me get this Summer School announcement into their hands?

Scholarships and fund raising assistance are available. No student should be deterred due to his/her family's financial circumstances.

After you have reviewed the program, please fill out the form on page 23 with the names and addresses of students you would like to see experience the drama, power and excitement of government and politics this summer. We will rush a copy of the brochure to each student on your list.

Thank you for your help and your commitment to the education of our country's future leaders.

Sincerely,

Karen B. Prosser, Director
National Summer Programs

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY SPEAKERS PROGRAM

Founded in 1934, Junior Statesmen is national, non-partisan educational program dedicated to helping young people develop the skills and knowledge necessary for effective civic leadership. Since its inception, Junior Statesmen has educated over 300,000 high school students in the American system of democratic government.

The Junior Statesmen Foundation conducts Summer School programs at four of our nation's most prestigious institutions of higher education - Yale University, Stanford University, Georgetown University, and the University of Texas at Austin. In Washington, D.C., the organization is best known for the Junior Statesmen Summer School which is held annually at Georgetown University. National politics is the focus of this three week program. Recent Georgetown Summer School speakers have included members of the Cabinet and Senior White House officials, ranking members of the House and Senate, and leading members of the national press corps, as well as key members of the Washington diplomatic community.

Summer School admission is highly competitive. It is based on an applicant's record of academic achievement, demonstrated leadership ability, and involvement in school and community affairs. Two hundred and fifty students are selected each year to attend.

THE Junior Statesmen Foundation

What Is Junior Statesmen?

Junior Statesmen, a nonpartisan program for high school students interested in public affairs, is designed to help young people develop the skills and knowledge necessary for effective civic leadership. Since the program was founded in 1934, more than 200,000 student members have gained an appreciation of the American system of law and democratic government.

Junior Statesmen is guided by a distinguished Board of Trustees which enjoys the support of political leaders from both parties, educators and civic-minded individuals, organizations and corporations. Although Junior Statesmen is headquartered in the West, students from throughout the country are active participants.

How Does The Program Work?

During the school year, students participate through school-sponsored Junior Statesmen chapters which are guided by volunteer teacher-advisers.

Each year, Junior State chapters participate in several regional and state conventions which feature student debates and offer participants the opportunity to meet and to question political leaders from both parties. These activities give students the chance to gain an understanding of the complexity of public issues, to sharpen their persuasive and analytic skills, and to develop a respect for the opinions of others.

The program is run essentially by high school students themselves. Junior State officers elected on the chapter, regional, state and national levels gain practical experience in the art of self-government. By facing the challenge of running their own program, students have the opportunity to make their own decisions and to see the consequences of those decisions. The Junior Statesmen concept is that democracy must be experienced to be fully understood and appreciated.

Junior Statesmen Summer Schools And Symposia

High school students are offered an advanced month-long academic program through Junior Statesmen Summer School sessions at Stanford University in California and at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. The rigorous curriculum, taught by outstanding university professors, focuses on American government, leadership, public speaking and debate.

Admission to the Junior Statesmen Summer School is competitive and is based on the applicant's academic achievements and demonstrated leadership ability.

At the Washington Summer School, an extensive speakers program has included most members of President Ronald Reagan's Cabinet, as well as Democratic leaders of the House and Senate. Stanford Summer School students participate in a high-level speakers program in Sacramento, the capital of California.

Symposia on politics and government are conducted each summer in Southern and Northern California and in the states of Washington and Idaho. The California symposia examine the politics of local government, while the Washington and Idaho programs concentrate on state government and politics. The symposia include academic instruction as well as extensive speakers programs.

How Is Junior Statesmen Funded?

Community fundraising and student fees provide much of the income for the Junior Statesmen program. Tax-deductible contributions provide essential income for scholarships and fund the educational and administrative support provided by the Foundation's professional staff.

Many public-spirited corporations, foundations and individuals contribute each year. In addition, donations through bequests, endowments and deferred trusts are particularly encouraged.

As Americans, we anticipate the Fall of 1992 as a chance to change the face of our nation through the electoral process. In the month of October, The Junior State of America will sponsor exciting, intense conferences for high school students. These Decision '92 Conferences, held throughout the nation, will provide a forum for interested students to meet with their peers and discuss the local and national issues that are sure to have a great impact on all of our lives. The Decision '92 Conferences will contain a myriad of exciting student run activities that will inspire thought and foster political awareness.

The focus of Decision '92 will be the candidates and issues involved in Presidential elections. With the Democrats and Republicans attempt to outline their formula for change, there can be no doubt that the conferences will be dramatic and informative. The issues that will be discussed all have a direct effect on your life — it is important that you attend and participate in one of these major student conferences. Decision '92 will be a decision that will effect you for the rest of your life.

Politics Must Be Experienced to be Understood

Decision '92 is your chance to have your voice heard in American politics. These conferences give you the opportunity to be a part of the 1992 race for the White House. You'll be joined by high school students from around the nation to cast your vote for President in an exciting convention style roll call election. Each conference will be student run with students presiding over the election, campaigning for the candidate of their choice, and debating the issues of the 1992 Presidential election.

Beyond the Sound Bite

Student-run campaigns will capture the thrill and excitement of the Presidential election during the final month of the campaign. Adult and student representatives for each candidate will speak and answer questions. Decision '92 will give you a chance to evaluate the candidates on their merits, qualifications, and positions on the issues. Here's your opportunity to look beyond the sound bites and TV ads to determine who is better able to lead our country.

Inside the Political Machine

In addition to serving as voting delegates, students may choose to get more actively involved in the conference leadership. For each presidential candidate, a campaign committee of students will be selected for the exciting task of carrying out a successful campaign. If you would like to volunteer to ensure that either George Bush or Bill Clinton captures the student vote at the conference, fill out the Individual Involvement form on the back of this brochure.

Experiential Education

The Decision '92 Conferences can serve as a valuable educational supplement for any civics, government, or history curriculum. This simulation of the nominating process is a fascinating and rousing way to live and learn about the American electoral process.

Teachers are encouraged to attend the convention and serve as resource people for their delegation.

Come to Decision '92 and join hundreds of high school students as you decide who will be the next President of the United States. Each convention begins at 9:00 a.m. and concludes at 5:30 p.m. The cost of participating is $5.00 per student. Teachers attend FREE.

For information about a specific conference call or write: THE JUNIOR STATE OF AMERICA, 650 BAIR ISLAND ROAD, SUITE 201, REDWOOD CITY, CA, 94063, 1-800-334-5353.

Debating the Issues

The conferences will also feature debates on the major issues of the 1992 Presidential campaign. These student debates give you a chance to explore the candidates' platforms and positions in depth. Here is a short list of some of the resolutions to be debated:

Resolved, that a federally funded National Health Care System be implemented in the United States.

Resolved, that the preservation of traditional family values is not the responsibility of the federal government.

Resolved, that Congress pass the "Freedom of Choice" Act to guarantee abortion rights. Resolved, that the Capital Gains Tax be lowered.

Resolved, that the positions and personality of a candidate's spouse is a legitimate campaign issue.

Resolved, that candidates for federal office be prohibited from accepting campaign contributions over $100 per donor.

Resolved, that educational vouchers be provided for families to send their children to the school of their choice.

Resolved, that the Democratic controlled Congress is more responsible than the President for the national deficit.

The Junior State of America

The Junior State of America, a nonprofit, nonpartisan, student-run organization, has encouraged political awareness and involvement among high school students for almost sixty years. The purpose of the organization is to teach high school students about government, to help them develop and polish their leadership skills, to encourage critical thinking, and to transmit the theoretical and practical knowledge necessary to ensure active, informed citizenship.

For more information on The Junior State of America, our other programs, or how to start a Junior State Chapter at your high school, OR for more information about Decision '92, additional brochures, or maps to the conferences, please contact The Junior State Office at 1-800-334-5353. Call after 9:00 a.m. PST

HOW TO ATTEND

Decision '92 is open to all high school students and teachers. Social studies classes, student government members, and speech and debate teams are particularly encouraged to attend.

The registration fee of $5.00 per student covers all conference materials. All registration is done the morning of the conference.

YOUR TURN TO GET INVOLVED

In addition to serving as delegates, students have the opportunity to get involved in conference leadership positions. We need campaign workers, debaters, and moderators. Campaign workers will hand out literature, help paint signs, and campaign for their candidate. Main debaters will lead the debate in favor or against one of the resolutions by delivering a six minute opening speech and a four minute closing speech. In between the two speeches, audience members may take the floor to deliver three minute subsequent speeches. Moderators will run the debates.

Sixtieth
Anniversary
Edition

A Newsletter for the Friends and Alumni of the Junior Statesmen of America

60th Anniversary Celebration Promises To Be An Event To Remember

Debates, conventions, Summer School, elections, term papers, subsequent speeches, cabinet appointments, long hours and good friends. Hopefully, these images conjure up cherished Junior State memories. This summer is your chance to come back to the Junior State and all of its excitement as we celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of its founding.

On the weekend of August 19 through 21, Junior State alumni and current leaders from all over the nation will gather at the birthplace of the Junior State of America for this momentous weekend. At the beautiful Presentation Center in the Santa Cruz Mountains of California, we will share J.S.A. experiences and create a plan for the future development of our organization. You will see how you helped contribute to the J.S.A. tradition, the tremendous strides the Junior State has made since you left, and meet those who are carrying it forward. Exciting Junior State style activities and social events will also play a major role in the weekend. Special arrangements have been made for participants to stay in the living quarters of the first Junior State members.

The highlight of the weekend will be a celebration banquet on the evening of Friday, August 19 on the grounds of the beautiful Toll House Hotel in downtown Los Gatos. The dinner will provide the perfect opportunity to minge with old J.S.A. friends, honor special contributions that key leaders have made to the Junior State and interact with nationally renowned speakers who will address the group. Speakers will include former Ambassador Carol Hallett, U.S. State Department Spokesperson Michael McCurry, and former Attorney General Edwin Meese, III.

Don't miss your chance to revive your Junior State experience and help bring the same experience to the students of today. It's time for the ultimate Junior State reunion with leaders from every generation. For more information about how to register, please contact Tamara Colson at the Junior State National Headquarters, 800/334-5353.

A Letter from the Editor

Hello again. As you may know it has been a while since the last edition of JSAlumni. We are pleased to report that we are now able to resume publication. The Junior Statesmen Foundation has hired me as the Alumni Program Coordinator to edit this issue of the magazine as well as to handle the Sixtieth Anniversary and other alumni needs. Because I myself am a J.S.A. alumna, many of you are old friends, but for those with whom I have yet to be acquainted, my name is Tamara Colson. I am a former Northern California Governor, and a graduate of both the 1987 Stanford Summer School and the 1988 Georgetown Summer School. I will remain with the Foundation until I begin law school in August. However, a new Alumni Coordinator will take over the position

New Santa Clara County Symposium Funded by Becky Morgan and Others

Former State Senator Becky Morgan has generously contributed $25,000 to partially endow a day-long Symposium on Santa Clara Politics and Government. She is an avid supporter of the Junior Statesmen program deeming it "...a vital community asset for developing early interest and participation in our communities." The Symposium allows high school students the opportunity to discuss Santa Clara County issues with community leaders and to find out how they can become more involved in their area.

The First Annual Santa Clara County Symposium, held on May 4, was a phenomenal day with 200 high school students from all over the county participating. Speakers included Becky Morgan, Chairman of the Board of Supervisors Rod Diridon, Supervisor Ron Gonzales, Supervisor Mike Honda, Supervisor and Congressional Candidate Zoe Lofgren, District Attorney George Kennedy and Director of Strategic Planning Jan Decker. The students debated the merits of "Three Strikes and You're Out" and year-round schools. Finally, the participants experienced and organize alumni events at each of J.S.A.'s Fall State Conventions.

While sifting through all of your responses, I saw one alumni describe his Junior State experience this way, "I have never met such an intelligent, friendly, exciting and talented group of people. We all just happened to be sixteen". I believe that as you read through this magazine you will find that the current Junior State students are as exceptional and motivated as ever, and the only difference between them and the alumni is age. J.S.A. members are consistently amongst the "best and the brightest" of their contemporaries and continue to be leaders within their communities.

I hope you enjoy catching up with this very special Sixtieth Anniversary Edition of JSAlumni as much as I have enjoyed working on it. Best wishes in your future endeavors and keep us informed of your many successes as well as address changes. See you at the Sixtieth Anniversary Celebration on August 19th!

working with the county administration through a problem-solving exercise. Students were given a challenge any citizen might encounter with government and then used county resources to solve their problem.

Senator Morgan's initial contribution launched an endowment campaign to ensure long-term funding of both this program and a similar Symposium on San Mateo County Politics and Government. Trustee and Congressman Norm Mineta is chairing the Santa Clara County campaign. T. Jack Foster, Jr. and Supervisor Ted Lempert are co-chairing the San Mateo campaign. In fact, virtually every Peninsula Junior Statesmen Foundation Trustee has gotten involved and the Peninsula students have lent their support as well. Student volunteers, recognizing the importance of this venture, contacted alumni in the area in an effort to gain their support in this campaign.

Junior Statesmen Summer School Held on Four Campuses

The key word in discussing the Junior Statesmen Summer School is growth. In recent years, the Summer School has grown to encompass four locations and serve hundreds of students. Last summer, 648 students from all over the nation, including the United States Territories, experienced the excitement of Junior Statesmen Summer School.

Texas Governor Ann Richards poses with Summer School students after a question and answer session.

Our youngest Summer School session, located at the University of Texas at Austin, has almost doubled in size, with 69 students last year. A three-year matching fund contribution from the Alice Tweed Tuohy Foundation played a significant role in the growth of this Summer School. Highlighting the session was the swearing-in ceremony of Texas State Treasurer Margaret Whitehead, question and answer sessions with Chief Justice Tom Phillips of the Texas Supreme Court and Governor Ann Richards.

The Yale Summer School, founded in 1989, celebrated its fifth anniversary year with an enrollment of 103 students. The participants had the opportunity to spend a day in New York City where they heard a number of speakers at the United Nations, The New York Times, and the MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour. This summer, Yale will add to its curriculum an advanced class in Constitutional Law, which will be the third advanced course option at Summer School. With the number of Junior State students who choose legal careers, this program promises to be a huge success.

Georgetown, our largest Summer School session, had its enrollment soar to 269 for the 1993 session. Students from thirty states and five territories spent three weeks in Washington, D.C. As always, the intensive speakers program highlighted this session as did the opportunity to visit the offices of hometown United States Senators and Representatives. The excitement surrounding the Clinton Administration also added an extra special element to last year's program.

Finally, the Stanford Summer School experienced an attendance surge that brought attendance up to 207 students. The advanced course in Economics, launched in 1991, celebrated its third year as part of the session. As the highlight of the Stanford session speakers program, the students participated in an exclusive question and answer period with former Secretary of State George Shultz.

Overall, last year was a banner year for the Junior Statesmen Summer School. The Alice Tweed Tuohy Foundation has continued scholarship support by awarding a $30,000 matching fund grant. In 1995, The Junior Statesmen Foundation will establish a fifth session of the Summer School on a Chicago area campus. The site will be announced as negotiations progress.

Junior State Seeks New Staff Members

The Junior Statesmen Foundation is looking to expand its staff by adding three new Program Directors. These excellent professional opportunities involve daily work with student leaders and teacher-advisors. The Program Director position is ideal for someone with an excellent understanding of politics and government, a strong commitment to nonpartisan civics education, and exemplary organizational skills. We would like to invite all Junior State Alumni to apply for one of these positions and help carry on the Junior Statesmen tradition. For more information and application materials, contact Richard Prosser or Lori Davis at 800/334-5353.

Junior State Sad to See Suzanne Dale Go

"After ten incredible years as a student and staff member for J.S.A., I will return to home to Seattle to work on the Washington United States Senate race and focus on applications for M.A. programs in Public Administration." Suzanne, currently Pacific Northwest and Texas Program Director, will leave the Foundation in September.

Suzanne became heavily involved with J.S.A. as a student at Roosevelt High School in Seattle, Washington. She participated in the Washington Symposium in 1986 and 1987 and was the Pacific Northwest Convention Coordinator during the 1987 - 1988 school year. She ultimately became the Statesperson of the Year for her significant contributions to the Junior State as a student.

Once graduated from high school, Suzanne remained closely tied to J.S.A. as a volunteer convention staff member throughout college and returned each summer to donate her time to the Junior State in some capacity. Her many positions include being a Counselor at the Washington Symposium, Idaho Symposium, Stanford Summer School, Yale Summer School, and Georgetown Summer School. She has also worked in both the J.S.A. Seattle office and former Washington, D.C. office.

After completing her B.A. in Sociology and Politics at Whitman College in 1992, Suzanne joined the Junior Statesmen Foundation staff full-time. During the academic year she serves as Program Director to two states, the Pacific Northwest and Texas. In the summer, Suzanne directs the Georgetown Summer School Speakers Program, the Idaho Symposium and the Washington Symposium.

Over the past ten years, Suzanne has made phenomenal strides in promoting the Junior State and its mission. Students, teachers, staff members and everyone whose lives she has touched will miss her dedication, hard work, and warm personality. Her parting words for Junior State members, "Work hard and have fun! Tap every resource available from J.S.A. It's rare to be surrounded and challenged by the critically thinking and full of life people you meet in J.S.A."

Urban Program on Track, J.S.A. Alumna Spearheads Effort

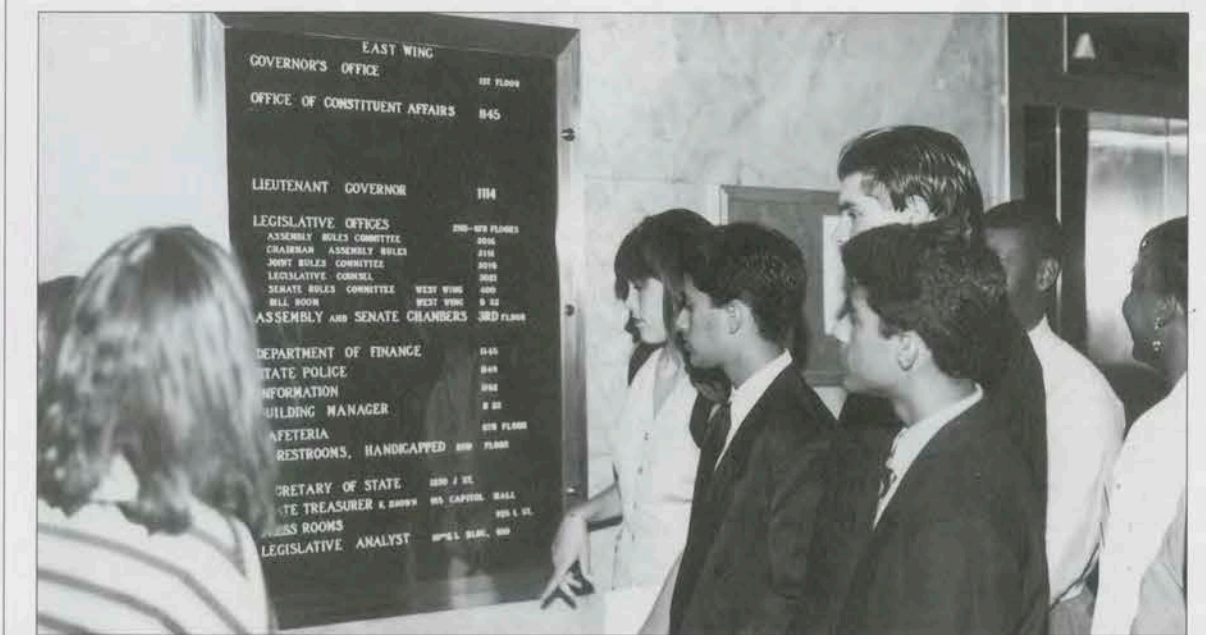

In 1992, the Junior State initiated a major effort to develop stronger urban chapters in Los Angeles. The urban program was initially funded by a two-year, $85,000 grant from the James Irvine Foundation. To date, ten new inner-city chapters have been established and are thriving. For example, one hundred ninety-six students from target schools attended the Southern California Fall State Convention and thirty-six students representing thirteen urban schools attended the Junior Statesmen Summer School in 1993.

The program is run primarily out of The Junior Statesmen Foundation's new Los Angeles office, which is staffed by Los Angeles Program Coordinator, Christine Robinson. She is a graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles and a Junior State alumna, a former President of the Convent of the Sacred Heart Chapter. One of Christine's pilot projects is the "Adopt a Sister Chapter" program. This program encourages students from new urban chapters to start a chapter at a neighboring school. She has also taken advantage of the Los Angeles office's location to interact informally with the students on a daily basis. Christine and Southern California Program Director, Jeff Harris, hope to help the students start five additional urban chapters by the end of the 1994-95 school year.

Spring State Looked to the Future

In April, the Junior State of America held its traditional Spring State conventions in Houston, Sacramento, Bellevue, Los Angeles and New Jersey. The theme for this year was The Times They Are A Changin'. Thus, the focal point of the weekend was the unprecedented change taking place around the world and what America's role should be in this new society. Some of the controversial topics debated were military intervention into Haiti, United States relations with Cuba, the increasing power of Asia, a free trade agreement with Europe, and Clinton's Health Care plan.

Along with the future direction of the country, the students focused on the future of the Junior State as they elected their new officers. The new Junior State Governors are Rachel Derkits for the Atlantic State, Andy Green for Northern California, Kendee Yamaguchi for the Pacific Northwest, Amanda Hang for Southern California, and Rachel Spencer for Texas. The J.S.A. Council of Governors held their first meeting Memorial Day weekend at the Junior State National Headquarters in Redwood City, California, where they came up with goals and plans for the year.

Junior Statesmen Alumni: We Need Your Help!

J.S.A. has grown substantially since you were in high school. Today, it is truly a national organization with over 10,000 members. There are currently four Junior Statesmen Summer School sessions and a fifth session is planned for next summer.

But we need your help. With the constantly increasing number of students that want to experience J.S.A. each year, demand for the program has drastically exceeded our limited funds. With your tax deductible donation, you will help us give additional Junior Statesmen students the J.S.A. experience that you so fondly remember.

Remember, your support today helps train tomorrow's leaders. Please sit right down and make a special Sixtieth Anniversary contribution to the Junior Statesmen Foundation. Through your contribution you will make a difference in the life of a student leader.

Yes! I would like to help a student leader experience the Junior State!
