Dear Bob:

Please accept my personal invitation to attend a very special Capitol Hill breakfast being held on Thursday, September 29. This event is being held to recognize some very dedicated people from your state who have worked diligently to help raise students' awareness about the problem of alcohol abuse. As a result of this program and similar ones across the country, we are making real progress in combatting abuse by helping students make healthy and legal lifestyle choices.

Fort Hays State University has been selected as one of ten institutions nationwide to receive a special award recognizing their innovative and executive approach to on-campus programming in order to raise student awareness of the dangers of alcohol abuse. As part of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week (NCAAW) and with the generous support of Coors Brewing Company, each institution will receive a cash award which will help them continue their work to develop year-long on-campus programs that enable students to develop the skills and the willingness to make good decisions about alcohol that will last them a lifetime.

I hope you can be part of this very meaningful opportunity to recognize the achievement of this institution. The breakfast will be held on September 29 from 8:00 to 10:00 a.m. in the Mike Mansfield Room, S207 in the Capitol Building. Award presentations will be at approximately 9:00 a.m. Your presence will send a strong message that you value the important work being done by Fort Hays State University. We would like for you to assist in the award presentation. We plan to have a photographer available to capture the exciting moments associated with the award presentations. Pictures and news releases will be made available to media in your home state so more people will know about the very good work that is being done to combat this national problem.

While this is not a new program (NCAAW has been in existence for eleven years now), it is certainly one which creates new ideas each year, and NCAAW is proud to recognize effective alcohol education programs. Your attendance at our Capitol Hill breakfast will be another way for us to continue the good efforts which have grown over this 11-year history.

Please call my office to confirm your attendance and for further information about NCAAW activities. I can be reached at (913) 628-4231.

Sincerely yours,

Edward H. Hammond
